

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

NOTE

For an explanation of elementary principles and a brief discussion of many present problems Miles M. Dawson's The Business of Life Insurance is a useful book. Mr Dawson is a consulting actuary in New York and has been employed as an expert by the New York insurance investigating committee. This book appeared late in the summer of 1905. The Life Insurance Company by William Alexander, secretary of the Equitable Life Assurance Society was published early in 1905 and is a good presentation of elementary principles. The Yale Insurance Lectures, 1904 and the University of Pennsylvania lectures published in the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science for September 1905 contain timely discussions of current problems. United States Special Consular Reports, v. 38, recently issued, is a valuable and timely compilation of insurance laws and regulations in foreign countries. The laws of France, Germany and Switzerland are particularly interesting.

The following list is quite closely classified. Books have been analyzed and the chapters or parts entered under the different headings to which they pertain. Under each heading the entries are arranged chronologically, and the year of publication is given in the margin.

NOTE

Laws providing for direct nominations under strict public control have recently been passed in Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, New Jersey, North Dakota, Oregon and Wisconsin, and it is with particular reference to this movement that the present list has been prepared. The older movement in the South and in some northern localities for direct nominations at the option of the party committee and without strict public control is only incidentally included. In this, as in all of the reference lists of this series, the aim is impartially to include the best material on both or all sides of the subject.

The best general sources of information on direct nominations are Meyer's Nominating Systems published in 1902 and Michigan Political Science Association Proceedings, 1905. Minnesota has had the longest experience with a modern direct nomination law, and the articles describing this experiment are therefore especially valuable.

Dr Charles McCarthy, Legislative Reference Librarian, Madison, Wis. gave valuable assistance in the preparation of the list. The material under each heading is arranged chronologically. A brief note is often added to explain the scope of the entry or the position taken by the author.

from admission to institutions. To meet this exigency industrial training schools and workshops have been operated for the adult blind in England since 1856 and also in connection with German institutions. In case of the latter an efficient system of after-care of pupils has aided materially in making the blind self-supporting after leaving the institution.

In England the education of the blind was made compulsory by act of 1894, provision being made at the same time for a system of government grants by means of which certain certified schools furnish free instruction for blind children in special day classes. In the United States, two permanent state commissions for the blind have been created, one in Connecticut to have general supervision of education and one in Massachusetts to provide training for self-support. Massachusetts has also established an experiment station where new occupations may be tested as to their availability.

The best general sources of information on the subject are the Great Britain Royal Commission report on the blind and deaf and dumb, published in 1889, together with the reports of the Massachusetts commissions, published in 1900, 1904 and 1906 respectively, and that of the New York commission, in 1904.

The workshop was opened in December 1903, and after a few initial experiments willow ware manufacture was decided upon. Act of 1905 (ch. 345) provides that trade instruction be given both to women and men, also to those residing outside Milwaukee county, the state to furnish transportation and board allowance, not to exceed $75 per capita while learning the trade; willow farms are to be established at state institutions; biennial appropriation is increased to $8000 for 1905 and 1906. Musical and industrial training has been a prominent feature in course of study. Supplementing the work of the institution, Société de placement et de secours, organized to secure positions and give aid to former pupils of institution. In its main features it follows the principles of supervision carried out in Saxony. The Société is not a state institution, as in the latter country, but was recognized by state in 1856. Similar auxiliary societies have allied themselves to institutions for blind in the provinces.

Connected with it is a library for blind of 5000 volumes, a point-writing printing press, the Royal Museum for Instruction of Blind, also Association to Further Economic Independence of Blind (Verein zur Beförderung der Wirthschaftlichen Selbstständigkeit der Blinden). See also Report of Great Britain Royal Commission on Blind and Deaf and Dumb, 1889, 2:66-67.

Königliche Sächsische Landes Blinden Anstalt (Dresden). For description of institution see Report of Great Britain Royal Commission on Blind and Deaf and Dumb, 1889, 1:25-28; 2:69-73.

Royal Institution for Blind was established as private corporation in 1809, and made a state institution in 1830; it originally consisted of educational and industrial departments. It was found that on discharge from institution, pupils having had industrial training seldom carried on the trade learned, but shortly relapsed into beggary. In 1843 new policy of supervision of former pupils was entered upon; handicrafts were restricted to those which could be carried on without a teacher; commercial training was introduced into curriculum; regular correspondence carried on with relatives; upon leaving institution, a trustworthy person residing in locality of pupil was appointed to cooperate with director of institution in advising and aiding pupils to secure employment. Assistance was given to blind also in buying raw material and in marketing their products. By means of this supervision, 70%-80% of blind are able to maintain themselves by trades learned in institutions. A fund for discharged pupils was begun in 1844 which grew rapidly until in 1885 it aggregated $225,000, the annual stipend of state aid to blind averaging about $25 a year. This system of supervision or after-care of pupils is known as the Saxon or Fürsorge system and has been generally made use of in Saxony and Germany and is being recommended for introduction in England and United States.

INHERITANCE TAX

NOTE

The inheritance tax is now found in 35 states and territories including Hawaii and Porto Rico. In about half of the states the tax applies only to collateral inheritances. In all states except Utah the rate is higher on collateral than on direct inheritances. In about one third of the states the rate of the tax is progressive, increasing with the size of the estate or the amount passing to a single individual. This is a notable feature of many of the more recent statutes. In recent laws enacted in California and Wisconsin the rates vary from 1% to 15%. The rate of the tax is also more or less progressive in Colorado, Illinois, Minnesota, Nebraska, North Carolina, Oregon, Porto Rico, South Dakota and Washington. A tabulation of inheritance tax laws of all the states is contained in the Massachusetts Labor Bulletin for July 1904. A good account of the development of the inheritance tax in the United States will be found in an article by Solomon Huebner in the Quarterly Journal of Economics for August 1904. Supplementary material will be found in the articles of Dr Max West in the annual Review of Legislation of the New York State Library.

Outside of the United States the inheritance tax is found in the Canadian provinces, the Australian states, New Zealand, Great Britain, France, the Swiss cantons, the German states, Belgium, Austria, Denmark, Norway, Sweden and other countries. In Canada, Australia, England, France and Switzerland the rates are highly progressive. In England they reach 8% and in France 18½%.

Brief discussion of the various theories of inheritance taxation. Professor Seligman says: "The inheritance tax today scarcely needs defense. It is found in almost every country; and the more democratic the country, the more developed is the tax. In some of the Canadian provinces, in the Australian colonies, in the Swiss cantons, in England itself, the rates are not only progressive but highly progressive."

- 1905 Baldwin, S. E. The Modern Droit d'Aubaine. Yale Law Jour. 14:129-47.
Where decedent leaves property outside the state of his domicile the present state inheritance tax laws often result in the taxation of such property both in the state of domicile and in the state where the property is situated. Mr Bell proposes an estate tax for Great Britain varying from 10% on $25,000 to 20% on $500,000. He says: "Stated shortly, the change I would venture to advocate in our system of taxation is to increase the death duties to such an extent as to make it practically impossible for any family, having accumulated sufficient capital, to live on the income derived from it without exertion, for generation after generation; in short, a tax on idleness, or at any rate nonproductivity."

Hon. A. S. Draper
Commissioner of Education

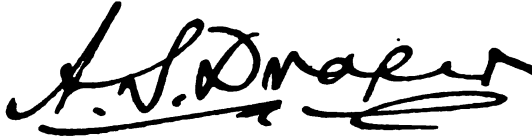

DEAR SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith and recommend for publication the annual Digest of Governors Messages, the fifth of its series. This bulletin by digesting briefly each definite recommendation in regard to legislation, supplements the two other annuals, the Index of Legislation and the Review of Legislation, which index and review the legislation enacted. Very often too the Digest will throw light on the reasons or conditions leading to the enactment of a particular law or amendment and it will also serve as a guide to the trend of public opinion on many current problems.

Very respectfully yours

EDWIN H. ANDERSON

DIGEST OF GOVERNORS MESSAGES 1906

OCTOBER 1, 1905 TO OCTOBER 1, 1906

EDITED BY

Robert H. Whitten, Sociology Librarian

EXPLANATIONS

The digest includes all regular messages and all special messages recommending legislation. Veto messages and messages merely transmitting documents are not included. Topics in the President's message related to those with which the states have to deal are also included. As the journals of but few of the states are received in time for use, we have to rely on the executive department of each state to furnish lists and copies of the messages.

No attempt is made to index or digest everything contained in the messages but merely the definite recommendations of the governors concerning legislation. General remarks or current and miscellaneous facts and statistics on the progress and condition of the state or of a particular subject are omitted. An index entry, digest or excerpt is made for each definite recommendation. Whenever possible in the case of important recommendations leading sentences or paragraphs are quoted, giving the gist of the recommendation.

Citations. The citations give state, governor, day, month and year of message, and inclusive paging. The abbreviations used are given below. Many special messages are received in manuscript form and no page reference can be given.

Classification. The classification of the digest is the same as that used in the Index of Legislation and will continue unchanged from year to year, except for insertion of new headings necessitated by new subjects of legislation. The numbers assigned to headings will also remain unchanged so that readers can follow recommendations and laws on any subject by looking under the same marginal number in each bulletin. The numbering corresponds to the consecutive numbering of headings in our card index of legislation 1890 to date. Where there are no recommendations this subject number is omitted.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW

This and 750, Administrative law, make up what is commonly known as the Political Code.

Boundary. Jurisdiction

- a N. J. Stokes. "I recommend the enactment of a law such as has been passed in other states, asserting the title of the state to all the waters and land under water for a distance of at least 3 nautical miles. This is important in view of the sale or lease of riparian grants along the coast, and because of the mooted jurisdiction of our state courts over transactions that occur along the coast beyond high-water mark, some decisions of the United States Supreme Court having held that such doubts disappear when the states' rights are asserted by expressed legislation." 9 Ja 06, p.12

Constitutions

Revision

- a R. I. Utter. ". . . I am convinced that it would be wise for us to effect a speedy change in our Constitution in certain particulars, and that the time to make such changes is before the necessity is so forced upon us as to endanger conservative action in making them. . . I believe that the best results would follow the amending of our present Constitution in such a way that a constitutional convention of the people could be held in unquestioned compliance with the law; and I believe, further, that this change should be proposed by the present General Assembly. . . If, however, it seems to the General Assembly that the time has not yet come for such a proposal as that suggested, I would urge the adoption at this session of a resolution to submit to the people an amendment to the Constitution placing upon the chief executive the duty of approving or disapproving all legislative acts; the duty known popularly as approval or veto. . ."
- 9 Ja 06, p.13-14

Amendment

See also 181, Ballots

- a N. Y. Higgins. "The practice is not to be commended of submitting numerous, disconnected and complicated constitutional amendments to popular vote, as in the case of four of the seven voted on, two years after their final approval by the Legislature, without the aid of an address to the people explaining their purpose and object. . ."
- 3 Ja 06, p.19

Officers. Departments

Departments of agriculture are classified under Agriculture, departments of education under Education, etc.

- a La. Blanchard. "In my inaugural address I recommended to this General Assembly, at its first session, that action be taken on the line of relegating to the people the filling by popular vote of offices under the state government that were filled by appointment of the Governor. Much was then done in this direction. The Judges of the Supreme Court, theretofore appointed by the Governor, were made elective. The Register of the State Land Office and the Commissioner of Agriculture and Immigration, theretofore appointive, were made elective, the same as other state officers. So, also, vacancies occurring in the offices of district judge, district attorney, sheriff and clerk of court, which vacancies, when occurring, had theretofore been filled by appointment of the Governor, are now filled by election of the people at special elections called for the purpose. . . And when we shall have gone still further at this session and made assessors and parish school board members and other officials elective, we will have reasonably met, it is believed, the popular demand."

14 My 06, p.18-19

- b U. S. Roosevelt. "At various times I have instituted investigations into the organization and conduct of the business of the Executive Departments. . . I recommend that the Congress consider this subject with a view to provide by legislation for the transfer, distribution, consolidation and assignment of duties and executive organizations or parts of organizations, and for the changes in business methods, within or between the several departments, that will best promote the economy, efficiency and high character of the government work."

5 D 05, p.19-20

Civil service examination

- a O. Herrick. ". . . There should be no politics in our state institutions and I should be glad to see the enactment of a practical law that will lift above all partizan considerations and put upon a plane of fitness only those who administer the most sacred trust of the state."
- b Pa. Pennypacker. "A system of civil service for the commonwealth should be established under the terms of which the routine appointments may only be made after the ascertainment of qualifications and fitness, and providing for the retention of their offices by the incumbents during good behavior."
- c Va. Montague. "Comprehensive civil service regulations authorized by statute and applicable in the appointment and retention of all clerks in the offices of the Treasury Department would be a beneficial achievement. . . A system of civil service should also be extended to all employees of the penitentiary and insane hospitals. . ."

LOCAL

- a Mass. Guild. “. . . In certain localities the law is evaded, and, owing to the lack of a sufficient inspecting force, with impunity. In other localities, through lack of notification, the public are kept in ignorance of the civil service examinations. . . The successful result in Philadelphia of applying the civil service system to certain heads of departments suggests the advisability of considering a similar extension of the law throughout Massachusetts, if not also, as suggested by my predecessor, the extension of the law to all county officers. . .” 4 Ja 06, p.11-12
- b O. Herrick. “The merit system should be extended to all departments in the city government. . .” 1 Ja 06, p.22

Salaries. Fees

- a Pa. Pennypacker. “I recommend that the fees collected by the Secretary of the Commonwealth and the Insurance Commissioner be hereafter paid into the Treasury of the Commonwealth, and that a proper salary be paid to each of these officials as sole compensation. The continuance of fees, in whatever public office the system may survive, is a vicious anachronism.” 15 Ja 06, p.9
- b U. S. Roosevelt. “I call your especial attention to the desirability of giving to the members of the Life-saving Service pensions such as are given to firemen and policemen in all our great cities. . .” 5 D 05, p.46

Tenure of office. Discipline

- a Miss. Vardaman. “I . . . urge upon you the necessity for more stringent laws which may be invoked by a suffering public to rid themselves of the incubus of an incompetent, drunken officer. . .” 3 Ja 06, p.25
- b U. S. Roosevelt. “There seems to be no statute of the United States which provides for the punishment of a United States attorney or other officer of the government who corruptly agrees to wrongfully do or wrongfully refrain from doing any act when the consideration for such corrupt agreement is other than one possessing money value. This ought to be remedied by appropriate legislation. Legislation should also be enacted to cover, explicitly, unequivocally and beyond question, breach of trust in the shape of prematurely divulging official secrets by an officer or employee of the United States, and to provide a suitable penalty therefor. . .” 5 D 05, p.34-35
- c U. S. Roosevelt. “Heads of executive departments and members of the commission have called my attention to the fact that the rule requiring a filing of charges and three days’ notice before an employee could be separated from the service for inefficiency has served no good purpose whatever. . . The rule has been amended by providing that where the inefficiency or incapacity comes within the personal knowledge of the head of a department the removal may be made without notice, the reasons therefor being filed and made a record of the department. . ."

Supervision and administration

- a N. J. Stokes. "A conference of the heads of the various state institutions is held quarterly, or more frequently, at the discretion of the Commissioner of Charities and Corrections. At these conferences are discussed questions affecting the management of our institutions and the welfare of their inmates. New Jersey is unique among the states in this particular feature, which would seem to provide all the advantages of a state board of control without any of its weaknesses." 9 Ja 06, p.7-8
- b Va. Montague. "I renew my former recommendation respecting the creation of a board of charities and corrections. Such a board would be of little expense and of great service. . ."

Public documents. Printing

- a Ia. Cummins. "The Secretary of State is of the opinion, and I fully concur with him, that there are more volumes of many of the reports printed and bound than are necessary. . . I recommend that your appropriate committees examine this subject, and amend the statute now in force, in accordance with the public need as shown by experience." 8 Ja 06, p.7
- b Ky. Beckham. "While much money has been saved to the state by reason of the change from the old system of electing the public printer to the present system of letting the contracts to the lowest bidders, there are nevertheless several defects in the present laws which you should correct. . . I believe it would be well for the board to be given the authority to employ at a reasonable salary some one trained and skilled in the [printing] business to aid the board. Numerous other changes in the law will be presented to you. . ."

77

Legislature

Election. Number. Apportionment. Vacancies

- a N. J. Stokes. "At the present time both bodies of our Legislature represent precisely the same constituencies. The House of Assembly, as now constituted, is practically another Senate composed of more members, with a one year term. . . Such a system invites machine domination. On the other hand, the system of Assembly districts provides a well defined constituency from whom each member receives his legislative authority, brings him nearer to the people, makes him more responsible to the voters, gives the people a more convenient and direct voice in matters of legislation and accords more with the principles of representative government. . .” 9 Ja 06, p.16-17

Apportionment: general laws

- a Pa. Pennypacker. “The time has come when a reapportionment of the state into senatorial and representative districts, in compliance with the command of the Constitution, must be made. The Constitution itself offers almost insuperable obstacles and can not in all of its details of method be followed. It must, therefore, yield in what is of least importance to such an extent as to permit an apportionment to be made. In construing the instrument, we must draw a distinction between the mandate to divide the state into districts, which is absolute and must be obeyed, and the method provided, which is directory only, and is not of the same fundamental importance. This method ought to be followed as closely as possible, but where the result can not otherwise be secured must be set aside. By dividing the lines of a few of the counties, a fairly equitable apportionment may be made, and one in accord with all of the other requirements.” 15 Ja 06, p.7-8

Special laws

- a N. J. Stokes. “In the General Statutes, which include the year 1895, and in the pamphlet laws to date there are about 7000 acts. Of these over 1700, or about 25%, relate to municipal government. About 70% of the acts relating to the latter subject are for specific purposes in the guise of general legislation. Legal advisers find it easier to induce the Legislature to pass a law to provide for the wishes of their clients than to search the statutes to find an already existing law that will serve the same purpose. . .” 9 Ja 06, p.5
- b N. Y. Higgins. “The Constitution provides that private and local bills shall not be passed in certain enumerated cases. Equally objectionable are bills granting corporate charters where the objects of the corporation could be obtained under general laws; bills legalizing bond issues, of which the number is increasing yearly; bills changing names of corporations; private claim and escheat bills; private bills legalizing acts of notaries public and other officers, and bills private or local in their purpose but general in form. Except in rare instances general legislation can be drafted to cover all proper cases. . . The expense of passing private bills should be borne by the parties in interest and not by the state.” 3 Ja 06, p.33

Internal organization

- a O. Herrick. “I desire to call attention to what I regard as extravagances in matters peculiarly within the control of the General Assembly. The first of these is the employment of unnecessary attendants and assistants for taking care of the legislative halls, both during the session and after its adjournment. . . . Another is that for postage, telegraph and telephone bills. . . . Another item of expense recurring at each session which, in the interest of economy and public service, ought not to be allowed hereafter is the appropriation of thousands of dollars at each session for printing Howe's Historical Collections for free distribution among the members of the two houses. . . . Still another unnecessary expense long sanctioned by legislative custom is that occasioned by the visits of the various committees of the General Assembly, together with their attachés and invited guests, to state institutions or elsewhere in the supposed public interest at the public expense. . . ."

Lobbying

- a Md. Warfield. "Lobbying is an evil and corrupting influence that has justly aroused the antagonism of all good citizens. You should take prompt and drastic steps to suppress this evil and to compel those engaged in the nefarious occupation to keep out of the legislative halls. . . ."
- 3 Ja 06, p.6-7
- b O. Herrick. ". . . I recommend the enactment of such a law, or the adoption of such rules, as will free the Legislature and the legislative halls forever from the presence of the lobby, and especially of those who represent private interests. Of course, the privileges of the floor of either house should not be extended to any persons except members of the General Assembly, employees thereof, heads of state departments and accredited representatives of the press; but, in addition to this, the halls, smoking rooms, corridors and committee rooms adjacent to either chamber should not be invaded or used at any time except by those actually engaged in work of or for the General Assembly, and by those who come to participate in public hearings of legislative committees."
- 1 Ja 06, p.18
- c U. S. Roosevelt. ". . . Not only should both the national and the several state Legislatures forbid any officer of a corporation from using the money of the corporation in or about any election, but they should also forbid such use of money in connection with any legislation save by the employment of counsel in public manner for distinctly legal services."
- 5 D 05, p.20-21

Officers and employees

- a Md. Warfield. ". . . The compensation and mileage paid in 1904 to members and employees amounted to $185,552.55, which is a very much greater amount than was expended for similar purposes by any previous Legislature. This scandalous and reckless squandering of the people's money can not be justified.
- Another legislative custom which is wrong and pernicious is the passing of orders, in the rush and heedlessness of the closing hours of the session, giving extra pay to favorite officers and employees and gratuities to persons not employed by either house. This is a species of graft which should not be tolerated."

108 Enrolling. Engrossing. Printing

- a Md. Warfield. ". . . You should abolish this old custom of enrolling bills after they have been passed, and adopt a new method of procedure in handling bills which will expedite legislation and do away with the necessity of appointing additional engrossing clerks to enrol bills after the Legislature has adjourned."

109 Financial procedure

- a O. Herrick. "The practice of the executive heads of the various state institutions putting themselves in the attitude of lobbyists in order to secure their appropriations ought to be discontinued. Their duty is done when they make up their estimates and appear before the finance committees to urge the allowance of what they believe is necessary for the maintenance or improvement of the institutions they represent. . ."

113 Sessions

- a O. Herrick. "My observation has been that if the General Assembly would devote five days in the week to legislative business it would be pleasing to their constituents, shorten the session and save expense."
- b S. C. Heyward. "At the general election of 1904 an amendment to the Constitution providing for biennial sessions of the General Assembly was submitted to the people and was adopted. A committee was appointed from both houses at your last session to report what amendments to the Constitution and statutes of the state will be necessary and proper to provide for such sessions. I trust you will act upon the report of this committee, in order that the amendment may become effective as soon as possible."

116 Citizenship. Civil and political rights

118 Naturalization

- a U. S. Roosevelt. "The distinguished recommendations of the [Naturalization] Commission are:
First. A federal bureau of naturalization, to be established in the Department of Commerce and Labor, to supervise the administration of the naturalization laws and to receive returns of naturalizations pending and accomplished.

Second. Uniformity of naturalization certificates, fees to be charged, and procedure.

Third. More exacting qualifications for citizenship.

Fourth. The preliminary declaration of intention to be abolished and no alien to be naturalized until at least 90 days after the filing of his petition.

Fifth. Jurisdiction to naturalize aliens to be confined to United States district courts and to such state courts as have jurisdiction in civil actions in which the amount in controversy is unlimited; in cities of over 100,000 inhabitants the United States district courts to have exclusive jurisdiction in the naturalization of the alien residents of such cities." 5 D 05, p.34

Corrupt practices. Election offenses

- a Md. Warfield. Recommendation for the passage of a stringent corrupt practices act renewed. 3 Ja 06, p.7
- b Mass. Guild. ". . . I suggest for your consideration the extension of the corrupt practices act; some limitation on the total amount to be spent by any candidate; a more stringent penalty, which should be strictly enforced, for those who fail to file election expenses; the voiding of an election where deliberate and serious violations of the provisions of the act are proved against the successful candidate; and finally, the absolute prohibition of contributions from corporations in campaigns, either for nomination or election." 4 Ja 06, p.10
- c N. J. Stokes. "I would amend the bribery laws by limiting the penalties for their violation to disfranchisement for a term of years, according to the number of the offenses committed. If offenses against the bribery laws were punishable by disfranchisement and the consequent disgrace, I believe they would be just as effective as imprisonment and conviction would be more easily secured. If this punishment did not prove effective, a second offense should be punished by imprisonment as well as disfranchisement. I would provide that the informer, whether he be the bribe giver or the bribe taker, should be exempt from punishment. No man would take the risk of purchasing a vote with the knowledge that the purchased voter could at any time escape punishment by betraying him, and few bribe takers would be willing to trust the bribe giver lest they be likewise betrayed . . . To these suggestions add publicity in connection with election expenses. There are some legitimate expenses. These should be defined by law and the candidates and their agents, likewise defined by law, should be compelled to render an accounting of the money expended and for what purposes. I recommend

- the English and Massachusetts corrupt practices acts for elections, caucuses and primaries as the basis of legislation on this subject.”
9 Ja 06, p.19-20
- d N. Y. Higgins. “. . . The object of [corrupt practices acts] is meritorious and meets my cordial approval. . . I recommend to your careful study the operation of such laws in other jurisdictions.”
3 Ja 06, p.17
- e O. Pattison. “. . . All political assessments made upon canal employees or any other employees of the state should be prohibited in the future by proper legislation . . . Let me recommend that you appoint a committee to ascertain the assessments made or collected from all the officers and employees of the various departments and institutions of the state.”
8 Ja 06, p.10
- f O. Pattison. “. . . The man who buys a vote as well as the man who sells his vote should be forever disfranchised or certainly disfranchised for a number of years. In such laws as you enact there should be provisions making it obligatory on the part of a candidate for any city, county or state office, from the lowest to that of the chief executive, to file an itemized statement of all his receipts and expenditures, of any and all moneys given, of gifts or promises made directly or indirectly by him or by any one for him. . .”
8 Ja 06, p.17
- g Pa. Pennypacker. “There ought to be a legal designation of the purposes for which moneys may be expended in political campaigns and in securing nominations, and the committees and managing authorities of political parties should be required to file after each campaign, with some designated official, a statement, under affidavit, showing in detail the sums which have been expended and the purposes for which the expenditures were made.”
15 Ja 06, p.9
- h U. S. Roosevelt. Renewal of recommendation as to bribery and publicity of campaign expenditures.
5 D 05, p.20
- i Va. Montague. “I would recommend the permanent disfranchisement of any voter who sells his ballot for money or place or any other valuable consideration, without limitation of time within which prosecution may be instituted.”

Corporation funds

- a Md. Warfield. “Corporations should be prohibited from making contributions to political parties or to individuals to be used to influence elections.”
3 Ja 06, p.8
- b N. Y. Higgins. “. . . I recommend that the making of political payments by corporations be made a penal offense and that all officers and agents of such corporations knowing or approving thereof be subject to fine and imprisonment.”
3 Ja 06, p.18
- c U. S. Roosevelt. “All contributions by corporations to any political committee or for any political purpose should be forbidden by law. . .”
5 D 05, p.20

- d Va. Montague. "I would urge legislation not only prohibitory of all campaign contributions by corporations, but of the right of doing business by any corporation which makes any contribution, directly or indirectly, in or without the state, for the purpose of influencing any election in this state, primary or regular. . . ." 10 Ja 06, p.9

158 Payment of tax or fee

- a Va. Montague. "A comprehensive statute forbidding the payment of capitation taxes by others than the individual assessed should be enacted." 10 Ja 06, p.10

160 Nominations. Parties

- a Ill. Deneen. Message to extra session recommending that a primary law be passed to take the place of '05 p. 211, declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. 10 Ap 06
- b O. Herrick. ". . . I recommend that the primary election laws be overhauled and so amended as, first, to make the primary elections compulsory; second, to insure their honesty by the same methods as protect general elections; third, to have them conducted by the regular election officers of the county and precinct; fourth, to have all primaries held on the same day, so that one party can not, through its irresponsible members, nominate another party's ticket; and, fifth, to conduct them at the public expense, and forbid any aspirant for office to pay an assessment for the privilege of submitting his claims for a nomination to the people." 1 Ja 06, p.19
- c O. Pattison. "In order that the voters of Ohio may retain a representative government it is necessary that some provision should be established, if possible, making it a condition for a man's vote to be counted on election day, that he shall show a certificate that he was present and voted at the primary election preceding such general election. There should be some uniform law in reference to the selecting of candidates by all parties, and this should be by primary elections all held at the same time. What is known as the Dana law, which was passed to prevent the people of the state from expressing their opinions at the polls, should be repealed." 8 Ja 06, p.17
- d Pa. Pennypacker. "Legislation ought to be enacted which will require the primary elections of all political parties within the commonwealth to be held on the same day, at the same time, under the supervision of properly constituted officers." 15 Ja 06, p.9
- e Tex. Lanham. Message to extra session recommending amendment of laws of 1905, extra session, chapter 11, section 120, relating to apportionment of vote cast at primaries to candidates for state and district offices at nominating conventions. 26 Mr 06
- f Va. Montague. ". . . Not only should the expense, which is not a large item, for the conduct of the primary be borne by the state, but what is of far more importance, the selection of judges of election should be legally provided for in a way to secure their unquestionable impartiality and fidelity. . .”

Direct Nominations

a Ia. Cummins. “In my last biennial message I stated at some length my views upon primary elections. . . I then said that as between nominations by a mere plurality and nominations by conventions, I was inclined to favor the latter. . . Further study, reflection and observation have convinced me that we must either accept the primary system, in so far as it is applied with direct nominations, as a whole or the convention system as a whole. With these alternatives before me, I have no hesitation in declaring that I am for the primary system of nominations by plurality, rather than of nominations by conventions. If there were any practicable plan through which the voters could work out their second choice, I would gladly indorse it, but after giving to the subject all the thought of which I am capable, and giving to the laws of other states the most exhaustive study, I am unable to discover any workable arrangement through which the voters can express their second choice. . . The dominant party in this state has, in many counties, recognized the supremacy of the voter, and has established county primaries for the nominations of county officers. I doubt whether a single county could be induced to return to the old plan. . .

First. The law should provide for the nomination by direct vote of all candidates for all offices filled by the voters and the office of senator in the Congress of the United States.

Second. It should provide a primary election for all political parties, to be held at the same place and time.

Third. It should provide that the person receiving the highest number of votes for any particular office should be the nominee of the party for such office.

Fourth. It should provide that every voter, if he votes at all, should vote the ballot of the party with which he is affiliated. . .”

b La. Blanchard. “In my inaugural address before you, two years ago, I discussed the question of primary elections to nominate candidates for office. . . I now renew and emphasize this recommendation. The new statute should require party nominations for office to be by primary election. It should carefully provide that none but bona fide adherents and supporters of the party holding the primary should be eligible to vote thereat. . .”

14 My 06, p.27-28

c Md. Warfield. “. . . A primary election law should be passed for the whole state, and it should provide that aspirants for state offices should have the right to submit their candidacy to a direct vote of the people. The system of nominations by a direct vote has worked well in Virginia and Wisconsin and in the city of Baltimore. . .”

3 Ja 06, p.10

- d N. Y. Higgins. ". . . The new method [of direct nominations] as at present developed has grave faults as well as attractive features and a careful consideration of the effect of primary laws of other states should precede any attempt to model legislation thereon. . . ." 3 Ja 06, p.18
- e O. Herrick. "I am earnestly in favor of the nomination of all county, municipal and other local officers by a primary election. I believe that conventions for such purposes should be abolished and that all aspirants for office should have an equal opportunity to be nominated by a direct vote of the people" 1 Ja 06, p.18-19
- f Wis. LaFollette. Various minor changes recommended in law of 1905 providing for direct nominations. 5 D 05, p.18
- g Wis. LaFollette. ". . . Whatever of honest criticism came out of the administration of the new statute [for direct nominations] in the municipal elections was directed against that provision of the law which admits of plurality nominations. . . It will be urged by those who would break down the principle of nominations by direct vote of the citizen that, since the primary election law permits plurality nominations, it should be so changed as to provide for the election of delegates to conventions and that delegates so elected should make nomination in every case where a candidate fails to get a majority vote under the primary election. . . We have but to turn to the country from which we took the Australian ballot for our lesson. Since 1892 the elector there has enjoyed the right to use what is called the "contingent vote." This is simply the "order of preference" called into play to assert the principle of election by absolute majority. This plan provides a ballot upon which the elector marks his first and second choice or "order of preference." Where but two candidates are in the field there is no occasion for the exercise of the second choice in order to insure a majority nomination, but where there are three candidates, or more than three candidates, the ballot provides opportunity for the delegate to indicate his second choice. If, after the ballots are counted, no candidate has an absolute majority of first choice votes, then the ballots cast for the candidate receiving the least number of votes on the list are assorted with reference to second choices for the remaining candidates. If no one then receives a majority of first and second choice ballots, a similar assortment of the ballots of the lowest remaining candidates is made on the basis of second choices and added to the votes of other candidates and so on until some candidate has a majority of first and second choice. . . ." 5 D 05, p.19-20

Days. Hours

- a O. Herrick. ". . . This [constitutional] amendment provides that hereafter the election of all state and county officers shall take place in the even numbered years, while the election of all municipal, township and school officers shall take place in the odd numbered years, and authorizes the General Assembly to pass such legislation as will adjust existing terms of office to the new order of things and carry into effect this mandate of the people as expressed in their organic law. The result of this amendment will be to completely separate municipal and other purely local elections from state and county elections and to bring these two classes of elections upon alternating years. . .”

Ballots. Voting

- a Wis. LaFollette. “Chapter 522 of the laws of 1905 provided for the use of the pocket ballot and coupon voting system. . . Its passage through the Legislature was only effected by incorporating as a part of it a referendum proposition to submit it to a vote of the people. . . It found some support because of a general complaint respecting the size and arrangement of the present ballot. It is doubtful if it is in safe form to go upon the statutes if it were to become a law. By its terms it is questionable whether a voter would not be permitted to take an official ballot from the booth and establish an endless chain with some party outside, to manipulate the whole ballot, throughout the entire election. . . It may well be questioned whether instead of this new scheme of ballot it would not be better to give the people of Wisconsin the Australian ballot in form more nearly after the original than our present blanket sheet. . . I would commend to your consideration such changes as shall insure a greater freedom of individual expression. . .” 5 D 05, p.24-25

Form

- a Md. Warfield. “. . . I believe that the restoration of the emblem and the grouping of the candidates of each party under separate headings and emblems would be a step backward for Maryland, and accepted as an encouragement of the ignorant, thoughtless and partizan voter.” 3 Ja 06, p.9

- a Pa. Pennypacker. “. . . I again recommend that you pass a proper act providing for [personal] registration.” 15 Ja 06, p.8

Boards. Officers

- a La. Blanchard. “The assessors are now the registrars of voters in their respective parishes. While you are making assessors elective, you should consider the advisability and desirability of separating the office of registrar of voters from that of assessor. I need not say more. The reasons for this separation will readily occur to you.” 14 My 06, p.25

- a Ky. Beckham. "You could do no greater service for your constituency than to make more effective, more certain and swifter the administration of your laws against crime. . . If the accused, no matter how guilty, is possessed of means or influence he can, with the assistance of able counsel, delay unreasonably, and frequently prevent, the punishment that is due him. . ."

2 Ja 06, p.19-20

- b U. S. Roosevelt. "In my last message I asked the attention of the Congress to the urgent need of action to make our criminal law more effective. . . Some antiquated and outworn rules which once safeguarded the threatened rights of private citizens, now merely work harm to the general body politic. . . The criminal process of any court of the United States should run throughout the entire territorial extent of our country. The delays of the criminal law, no less than of the civil, now amount to a very great evil."

Expenses. Costs. Fines

- a Ky. Beckham. Attention again called to excessive expense to the state in the cost of criminal prosecutions. . .

2 Ja 06, p.21-22

Imprisonment for nonpayment

- a Md. Warfield. "Much of my time is taken up by cases, generally trivial in their character, of persons who have been sent to jail by police magistrates in Baltimore City in default of payment of fines for assaults or violation of city ordinances. . . I ask that you relieve the Governor from the hearing of all such cases by amending section 3 of article 38 of the Code of Public General Laws, by giving the court or magistrate the power to designate the time of imprisonment, basing the same on the amount of fine imposed, instead of the minimum of 30 days for a fine of $50 or under. Now, a man whose offense merits a fine of only $1 has to serve as long as the man who is fined $50."

Death penalty

- a Ky. Beckham. "I recommend that you provide that all executions of the death penalty be done in the Frankfort penitentiary. The hanging of a man in the community where he is tried produces a sensation, a nervousness and excitement upon the part of the people, and it has a brutalizing effect upon the large numbers, in spite of the law, who witness it." 2 Ja 06, p.21

Jury

See also 726. Civil procedure

- a Ky. Beckham. "I suggest as one remedy that you adopt the practice followed in the federal courts, and by most of the states in their courts, and provide that in the trial of any offense, the jury shall merely pass upon the guilt or innocence of the defendant, and if found guilty that the court shall fix the penalty, subject, of course, to the limitations prescribed by law. This would reduce at least half of the number of hung juries, for it is undoubtedly true that the majority of the juries which disagree do so upon the question of the amount of the penalty to be imposed and not upon the question of guilt or innocence. . . ." 2 Ja 06, p.20

Challenge

- a Ky. Beckham. "I recommend that you reduce at least half the number of challenges allowed the defendant in the formation of the jury. The large number of challenges now given him is frequently used to get upon the jury some professional bystander, who is unfit for the service." 2 Ja 06, p.21

Crimes and offenses

Weapons

- a Ky. Beckham. "In the matter of carrying concealed deadly weapons, a misdemeanor so fruitful of felonies, I advise that you amend the law in such a way as to increase the penalty beyond the reach even of executive clemency, and I shall show how it may be done. . . . As the law now is, when the Governor grants a pardon for any part or all of the penalty, the applicant has to pay to the state a tax of $4 on the pardon, which the Governor can not remit. I advise that you increase that tax to at least $100, and when you do so you can rest assured that there will be a wonderful reduction in the number of pistols carried." 2 Ja 06, p.21
- b O. Pattison. "Some laws should be enacted to prevent the indiscriminate sale of revolvers and pistols. . . . No such instruments of death should be purchased or sold except with the approval of some probate or common pleas judge residing in the county, and any one purchasing a revolver after having received such a permit should pay a license of $5 a year during the continuance of said permit, which permit should be for one year only." 8 Ja 06, p.20

Rape

- a Miss. Vardaman. Penalty for rape should be death.

Burglary

- a O. Herrick. "The State Board of Pardons reports that during the last two years a very large portion of the cases submitted to it are of persons convicted under section 6835 of the Revised Statutes for burglarizing uninhabited buildings. This section provides a minimum sentence of five years for such an offense, and in a majority of the cases it has been found that the law is too severe. . . I suggest that the minimum sentence for this offense should be changed to one year."

- a O. Herrick. ". . . It is a recognized fact that a new penitentiary is needed. A new site should be secured as soon as possible. . . 10 Ja 06, p.5

Reform schools

- a S. C. Heyward. "The bill to establish an industrial school and reformatory was defeated at the last session of your body because you failed to agree upon minor differences which developed during the discussion of this measure. I trust that at this session these differences may be adjusted and the school established, for I feel that much good would be accomplished by such a reformatory." 9 Ja 06, p.24

Reformatories

- a Ia. Cummins. "I am most heartily in favor of the plan for the division of our convicted criminals, making the institution at Anamosa a reformatory for men and boys and the institution at Fort Madison the penitentiary for the more hardened and habitual criminals." 8 Ja 06, p.17
- b N. Y. Higgins. "Your attention is directed to what seems an anomalous condition in regard to our laws regulating the punishment of boys 16 years of age and over, convicted of misdemeanors. No class needs reformatory treatment and trade instruction more than these boys, of whom some ten thousand are committed annually to jails and penitentiaries, because no other provision is made for them. Youthful male felons may be sent to Elmira; boys under the age of 16 may be sent to Randall's island or Rochester. . . The county penitentiaries might be taken under state control and one or more of them utilized for this purpose . . ." 3 Ja 06, p.32

- a Va. Montague. "My former recommendation made in two several messages for the utilization of convicts, either in the preparation of road material or in actual road building, I repeat. . ." 10 Ja 06, p.12
- b Va. Swanson. "At once, as far as existing contracts will permit, the convicts in our penitentiary should be utilized upon our public roads. Many can profitably be employed by the counties in working directly upon the roads. Others, it seems to me, could be used with great advantage in crushing and preparing rock in quarries located in the different sections, owned and operated either by the state or counties. . ." 1 F 06, p.15

- a Va. Montague. "The use of convicts in the Capitol square is poor economy, and their presence in prison garb, in full view of strangers and children, is at once forbidding and humiliating, and long practice in this respect should not be invoked for the continuance of a custom so revolting." 10 Ja 06, p.4

- a Md. Warfield. ". . . Among the changes proposed by the [Corporation] Commission, the following are the most noteworthy:
First. Corporations are permitted to be formed under the general law for any lawful purpose, thereby doing away, so far as the Constitution permits, with any resort to the Legislature for special privileges. . .
Second. . . . Under the proposed law, an ordinary business corporation, after the year 1906, will no longer be taxed on its shares, but will be assessed upon its property, real and personal, just as an individual owner would be.
Third. The existing method of condemnation by corporations having the right of eminent domain is radically changed. The sheriff's jury is abolished, and hereafter such condemnations will be judicial proceedings. . . ." 3 Ja 06, p.17-18
- b U. S. Roosevelt. ". . . Experience has shown conclusively that it is useless to try to get any adequate regulation and supervision of these great corporations by state action. Such regulation and supervision can only be effectively exercised by a sovereign whose jurisdiction is coextensive with the field of work of the corporations—that is, by the national government. I believe that this regulation and supervision can be obtained by the enactment of law by the Congress. . . ." 5 D 05, p.3

- b U. S. Roosevelt. ". . . What is needed is not sweeping prohibition of every arrangement, good or bad, which may tend to restrict competition, but such adequate supervision and regulation as will prevent any restriction of competition from being to the detriment of the public." 5 D 05, p.4

- b Va. Montague. "I renew my recommendation that commonwealth's attorneys be required to report at least quarterly to the Attorney General the style of every cause, civil or criminal, to which the commonwealth is a party, together with the disposition of each cause; if continued, the reasons therefor, and if concluded, the judgment therein. . ." 10 Ja 06, p.8

Supreme courts

Including only those highest in state of whatever name, e. g. Court of Appeals but not Supreme Court of New York. In New York, New Jersey and elsewhere the Supreme Court is a district court and is classed below others. The Court of Appeals in New York, New Jersey, Kentucky and Maryland is the highest court, but in Colorado, Kansas, Missouri and Texas it is subordinate to the Supreme Court.

- a Ga. Terrell. "The crowded condition of the docket of our Supreme Court is a serious menace to the general business interests of the state. . . In a few years, should no remedial legislation be enacted, we are almost sure to witness the spectacle of a majority of the cases brought to a term of our Supreme Court being affirmed by operation of law on account of the inability of the court to hear and determine the same in the time required by the Constitution. . . We should establish an additional court of review to be known as the Court of Appeals. This court should have exclusive and final jurisdiction in all cases originating in all courts other than the superior courts, and in all misdemeanor cases, irrespective of the courts in which such cases are tried. The Supreme Court alone should have final jurisdiction over constitutional questions. . . An examination of the present docket shows that a Court of Appeals, as above outlined, would relieve the Supreme Court of about 40% of the business. . ." 27 Je 06, p.5-8

- a Ky. Beckham. "There is much complaint in some parts of the state over the crowded dockets in the Circuit Courts. . . It may be necessary in one or two instances to create a new judicial district. I suggest as one means to greatly improve the condition . . . and it is that a law be passed permitting . . .

the circuit judge to call a special term of the court at any time and have a special judge appointed to hold it, even at such times when the regular judge is holding court in some other county of the district. . . ." 2 Ja 06, p.22

b Miss. Vardaman. Number of Circuit and Chancery Court districts should be increased. 3 Ja 06, p.23

c S. C. Heyward. "In increasing the number of judicial circuits in the state I understood it to be your intention to abolish the holding of special courts for the transaction of civil business. . . I recommend that you make no appropriation for special courts, and, in addition to this, that the law creating them be repealed." 9 Ja 06, p.20

726 Jury. Verdict

730 Qualifications. Drawing. Impaneling

a N. J. Stokes. ". . . Jury duty should not be the reward of political service nor be made a means of political patronage. . . The professional juror has no part in a system of justice. . . Last winter the Hudson County Bar Association . . . suggested that two lists of jurors be kept, to be designated respectively a grand jury list and a petit jury list, with a card index of names and numbers; that each name upon the jury list be designated by a number, and that in the drawing of grand juries and petit juries by law each paper shall contain only the number in lieu of the name which it designates on the jury lists. This would seem to reduce to a minimum any chance of favoritism in the selection of jurors. I would suggest, however, that the judge of the Court of Common Pleas be made the determining party in the selection of the panel. . ." 9 Ja 06, p.14-15 a U. S. Roosevelt. "There has been demand for depriving courts of the power to issue injunctions in labor disputes. Such special limitation of the equity powers of our courts would be most unwise. . . The remedy is to regulate the procedure by requiring the judge to give due notice to the adverse parties before granting the writ, the hearing to be ex parte if the adverse party does not appear at the time and place ordered. . ."

This was a reduction from 2.89 mills, and if the recommendations I have made with respect to the sinking fund levy are adopted by the General Assembly, the total levy for state purposes may be still further reduced to 1.29 mills on the dollar."

- b La. Blanchard. "With regard to assessors I recommend three things, and they should be linked together:

1 The election of assessors by the people of the parishes respectively in which their duties are to be performed, including the parish of Orleans, one assessor for each municipal district of the city.

2 That the police juries of the parishes and the city council of New Orleans be given authority to sit as boards of reviewers to equalize assessments as between individual property holders, or taxpayers, in their respective jurisdictions.

3 That a state board of equalization of assessments be provided for, to the end of equalizing assessments as between the parishes—one parish with another parish, or one group of parishes with another group, or other groups. . .

In Louisiana assessors are now and have heretofore been distinctively state officials, their responsibility being direct to the state government. . . When, however, the assessor is made elective the practical result will be to change his status and his responsibility. . . Hence the necessity of a state board of equalization of assessments. . ."

Personal property

- a Miss. Vardaman. "I recommend the enactment of such laws as may be necessary to force the holders of solvent credits to list them for taxation to the extent that the functions of the courts should be withheld from the holders of such solvent credits in the enforcement of the payment thereof which had escaped taxation. . ."

3 Ja 06, p.20

- b N. J. Stokes. ". . . Apparently nearly \$500,000,000 of tangible personal property escapes the assessor. This is about 50% of the present assessed valuations of all property in the state, and, if assessed, should result in reducing the tax rates 33 $\frac{1}{3}$ % on the present basis of expenditure. . ."

9 Ja 06, p.26

- c Va. Montague. ". . . Some years since the state created officials called examiners of record, and one of whom in each judicial circuit must make assessments of all moneys, bonds, notes, stocks and every species of personal property under the control of the court, as well as of all watercraft over 5 tons burden. . . I, therefore, recommend that you pass a joint resolution submitting an amendment to the Constitution making those members of the State Board of Appraisers chosen from the congressional districts elective by the people of such districts—one for each district to be chosen by the qualified voters of such district either at the general state election or at every alternate congressional election.”
14 My 06, p.27
- b N. J. Stokes. “. . . In some states uniformity is secured by a state board or a county board making a complete valuation of all property at periods of from three to five years. . . The adoption of some such method as this in our own state is worthy of consideration.”
9 Ja 06, p.27
- c O. Pattison. Municipal boards of review should be appointed by the mayor in place of the State Board of Appraisers.
8 Ja 06, p.15-16
- d Wis. LaFollette. “. . . All doubt in the present law as to the authority of the commission to assess the property not upon the local tax rolls should be removed. But it is manifestly unjust that the commission, when increasing the valuation of the property of the state should, by so doing, impose additional burdens upon classes of property already assessed at full value and upon counties which have fully returned all taxable property, in compliance with the statute. In other words, it seems clear that in adding to the assessed valuation the commission should subdivide and distribute such increases, showing the nature and location of the property upon which the increases have been made, in order to insure a just valuation of all property and an equitable distribution of the tax burden.”

I would suggest that they [tax lands] be sold only for a price approximating their value, and I invite you to consider the advisability of turning over these lands, and others that may revert to the state under similar circumstances, to the State Land Office as part of the state's public domain, to be disposed of under such conditions and at such price as you may determine. . . .”

Inheritance taxes

- a Ga. Terrell. "In my message to the General Assembly in 1905 I called attention to the importance and advisability of the enactment of a law taxing inheritances. . . Large estates being acquired solely by the accident of birth may fairly be taxed. While the time has not yet come in Georgia when immense estates may threaten the public good, yet it must be admitted colossal fortunes capable of being handed down from generation to generation constitute a serious menace to the general welfare in some parts of the Union. . ." 27 Je 06, p.9
- b La. Blanchard. Article 235 of the Constitution gives power to the General Assembly to levy for the support of the public schools a tax upon all inheritances. And article 236 provides that the inheritance tax shall not be enforced when the property donated or inherited shall have borne its just proportion of taxes prior to the time of such donation or inheritance. This latter article well nigh emasculates the inheritance tax authorized by the preceding article, and we can never have in Louisiana an inheritance tax that amounts to much until article 236 is taken out of the Constitution. . . Two years ago . . . a statute was enacted imposing an inheritance tax . . . The tax should be collectable on inheritances, legacies and donations whether the succession of the dead man be formally opened or not. . . With proper safeguards to protect against evasion, the tax on direct inheritances and on donations and legacies to ascendants or descendants might well be reduced to 2½% and the tax on collateral inheritance and on donations and legacies to collaterals or strangers to 5%. I recommend such changes in the present law and that the inheritance tax be made progressive. . ." 14 My 06, p.38-40
- c O. Pattison. "I do not hesitate to say that I believe it is the wish of the great majority of the people of the state that the law enacted at the last session, known as the inheritance tax law, should be repealed." 8 Ja 06, p.13-14

the franchises of public utility corporations that lay their pipes or wires or conduits underground or that use only so much of the street above ground as is necessary to string wires on poles, and between the value of franchises like those of trolley companies that use a large portion of the streets and highways. If a 2% tax on the gross receipts is imposed upon the first class of public utility franchises, the latter class of franchises should justly be expected to pay more. . . . A plan for the division of dividends declared by public utility corporations in excess of a reasonable amount is well worthy of the consideration of the Legislature. . . . When this law relative to tuberculosis in cattle was first passed, the board was given the responsibility of searching out the diseased animals on its own initiative, and the rules and officers necessary for such an effort were provided, great care being taken to prevent any possible injustice being done to the owners of suspected cattle. But after a very short practical experience it was proven that if such a search were made for the cattle the expense of killing them would be so great that the appropriation then available, or any likely to be available, would not meet it. Therefore the method was changed, with the result that now it is the owner of the diseased animal that first moves to have the cow examined; unless his neighbors, for some reason, interest themselves enough to do so. . . I am convinced that this amount of money, annually appropriated, is no longer doing for the state what it was intended to do, and that it can not do it until the whole system under which it is expended is changed." 9 Ja 06, p.8-10

It can, however, in some degree repair the mischief already done (1) by limiting the amount of water which may be taken from the river by the New York companies now engaged in developing power, (2) by repealing all undeveloped charters, of which several remain on our statute books, dormant if not defunct, and (3) by instituting legal proceedings for the forfeiture of the charters of any companies which may be guilty of misuse of their franchises or abuse or usurpation of powers. . . .” 3 Ja 06, p.22-23

- a U. S. Roosevelt. ". . . As I said in my message of December 6 last, the immediate and most pressing need, so far as legislation is concerned, is the enactment into law of some scheme to secure to the agents of the government such supervision and regulation of the rates charged by the railroads of the country engaged in interstate traffic as shall summarily and effectively prevent the imposition of unjust or unreasonable rates. . . In my judgment the most important provision which such law should contain is that conferring upon some competent administrative body the power to decide, upon the case being brought before it, whether a given rate prescribed by a railroad is reasonable and just, and if it is found to be unreasonable and unjust, then, after full investigation of the complaint, to prescribe the limit of rate beyond which it shall not be lawful to go—the maximum reasonable rate, as it is commonly called—this decision to go into effect within a reasonable time and to obtain from thence onward, subject to review by the courts. . ." 5 D 05, p.5

Grain warehouses and inspection

- a Wis. LaFollette. “At the last session, the Legislature enacted chapters 19 and 317, creating a grain and warehouse commission for the state of Wisconsin, and providing for licensing and regulating warehouses and elevators, and for the storage, weighing and inspection of grain in the city of Superior, and conditionally at other points in said state. . . I would recommend that the act be carefully considered and such amendments thereto enacted as will make the legislative intent clear, and afford a remedy for the evils complained of, to the full extent of the constitutional power of the state.” 5 D 05, p.28-30

Investments

- a Ia. Cummins. "I believe that the time has come to enlarge the field of investment. In harmony with the plan already adopted, life insurance companies should be permitted to invest in drainage bonds, and in such securities as paving, curbing, sewerage or other public improvement certificates. . . I believe, also, that every life insurance company organized under the laws of this state should be permitted to invest a reasonable sum . . . in a home office. . . The law . . . ought to be changed, so that if the companies desire to loan money upon real estate in other states, they should first apply to the Executive Council, and receive authority from that body, prescribing in what states or parts of states, other than our own, such loans can be made. . ."
- 8 Ja 06, p.9-10
- b Ky. Beckham. "I would also advise that you pass a law along practicable lines requiring a company doing business in the state to invest a certain portion of its earnings in Kentucky. It is a constant drain upon our money to send out every year a large sum for insurance and to have no part of it reinvested in the state. . ."

- c Va. - f N. Y. Higgins. ". . . The funds of insurance companies should sacredly be safeguarded for the policy holders by the state and every element of personal gain eliminated from their management. To accomplish this result it has been suggested that large amounts ought, for the safety of the insured as well as for the good of the community, to be invested in bonds secured by mortgages on real estate at a conservative valuation; that deposits with or loans to moneyed corporations should be subject to suitable restrictions; that the control of subsidiary companies should not be permitted; that insurance directors should have no conflicting business connections; that investments in corporate bonds should be regulated so as to prevent speculation and loss from an attempt to float doubtful enterprises; that policies should be of standard forms so that the abuses arising from ambiguity, complexity and incompleteness of the contract may be eradicated and the contract made definite in form and substance; that a uniform system of audits and accounts should be prescribed by the Insurance Department; that full publicity to policy holders should be assured; that deferred dividend policies should be prohibited or greatly restricted; that policies should be further safeguarded from forfeiture; that an equitable distribution of the gains of the company to the policy holders entitled thereto should be required; that policy holders should have an effective voice in the government of the companies and that the discretion of the directors should be subject to judicial or administrative review. . ." 3 Ja 06, p.12-13

Negroes

- a Miss. Vardaman. ". . . I believe every dollar invested for negro education under our present free school system is an indefensible and unwarranted prodigality of cash. It is a crime against the white man who furnishes the dollar and a disadvantage to the negro upon whom it is spent. . ." 3 Ja 06, p.15

Compulsory attendance. Truancy*See also 2118, Employment (children)*

- a Md. Warfield. "The State Board of Education, after several years' study of methods adopted by other states where conditions closely resemble those in Maryland, have prepared a bill establishing a plan for compulsory primary education, and will recommend to you the passage of the same. . ." 3 Ja 06, p.19
- b N. Y. Higgins. ". . . The rate of illiteracy will be reduced by perfecting and enforcing the compulsory school attendance law and the child labor law. To these ends the interest of the Legislature is earnestly invited." 3 Ja 06, p.29
- c S. C. Heyward. "It was a matter of sincere regret to me that the compulsory education bill discussed at your last session did not become a law. . ." 9 Ja 06, p.12

- d Va. Montague. "Compulsory attendance prevails in every state of the Union with the exception of the Southern States, and even here Maryland and Kentucky have broken the reactionary fetters, and it may be generally affirmed that wherever the free school is efficient, either in America or abroad, legalized compulsory attendance prevails. . . . If the General Assembly is unwilling to take this step for the whole state, I earnestly recommend your honorable body to empower any county or city of the state with the option of establishing compulsory attendance. . . ." 10 Ja 06, p.11

2354 State libraries

- a Md. Warfield. "I recommend that the Library Committee be authorized . . . to take into consideration the question of the establishment of some effective means by which expert information can be collated for the use of the members of the Legislature during the sessions of the General Assembly, thus enabling them to keep track of effective legislation in other states and communities. . . . Committees and members could have before them in compact shape the experience of every other state on any given subject. Fewer laws would be declared unconstitutional and less litigation would result. Greater economy and efficiency would be assured in the administration of the laws."

3 Ja 06, p.37

- b Va. Montague. ". . . Increased compensation should be given to the librarian and his chief assistant; additional stack space should be allotted; traveling libraries, by all means, should be established, and the plan of the librarian for the rehabilitation of our history should have legislative sanction and support."

Municipalities

- a Ia. Cummins. "It has been the policy of the state in the past to extend some aid to certain associations which deal with agriculture. . . The growth of population is now largely in the cities and towns, and there are constantly arising problems of the most important character which require intimate association on the part of those who are administering municipal affairs to solve. I believe, therefore, that a small appropriation in aid of the work of the League of Iowa Municipalities would be a wise expenditure of the public funds. . ." 8 Ja 06, p.24

Consolidation

- a Pa. Pennypacker. "The union of the cities at the junction of the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers into one municipality is a subject of importance to the commonwealth, and of interest to the people who there have their residences and conduct their occupations. . ." 15 Ja 06, p.5

Mayor

- a O. Herrick. "The present provision adopted as a part of the municipal code which gives to the Governor the power to remove mayors for misconduct should be repealed. It has been held inoperative by both the last administration under Governor Nash and the present one. Salaries. Fees

- a N. J. Stokes. ". . . I recommend that [the salary system] be extended throughout the state, that the offices of sheriff, county clerk, surrogate and register of deeds be made salaried instead of fee offices. . ." 9 Ja 06, p.14
- b O. Herrick. "The present fee system of compensating county officers ought to be abolished at once. . . I do not believe in niggardly salaries, but . . . it is intolerable that any county officer in Ohio should receive as much or more per annum than the President of the United States, and it is unjust to the people who pay the bills that many county officers in this state should receive 5 to 10 times what their services are fairly worth. . . I earnestly recommend not only a county salary law, but the abolition of the fee system wherever it exists in the state. . ." 1 Ja 06, p.15-16
- c O. Pattison. Enactment of a salary law for county officers recommended. 8 Ja 06, p.10

- a La. Blanchard. "Our maximum rate of parish and municipal and levee district taxation remains each at 10 mills, or $1 on the $100 valuation. This has been the case for 27 years. It is much too high, and by legislative enactment the maximum should be reduced to 8 mills, leaving to the police juries and town councils and levee boards to cut under the maximum, if they can. . ." 14 My 06, p.16

- a S. C. Heyward. "I must repeat to you my recommendation of last year in reference to county auditors and treasurers. 2600

Deposits and depositories

- a O. Herrick. ". . . I understand that at present the depository laws for counties are special and possibly unconstitutional, and that with respect to cities, villages and school districts the duty of placing the public funds on interest under proper safeguards and restrictions is merely optional with the local authorities. A general county law should be passed. The deposit of public funds should be made compulsory. . ." 1 Ja 06, p.8-9

Municipal utilities (general)

See also 1337, Street railways

- a N. J. Stokes. ". . . Public utility corporations should report, under proper directions, to some state official as to the cost of constructing and extending trolley lines, water, gas, electric light and telephone plants, or pipe lines, as the case might be. Bonded indebtedness and capitalization could then be made upon this basis, with a proper margin for working capital and for such contingencies as the expenses of banking and financing. Legislation to this end I earnestly recommend." 9 Ja 06, p.40

Franchises (general)

- a La. Blanchard. "Valuable franchises are too often given away; nothing, or no adequate compensation, received for them. There should be restrictions placed upon municipal councils, boards of aldermen, etc. in this respect." 14 My 06, p.50
- b N. J. Stokes. ". . . If the highways are to be used for business purposes, the people, who own the highways, should be in a position to demand an increased rental as their property becomes more valuable, just as the owner of the business block is able to raise the rent thereon in proportion as increased trade and traffic center about it. . . The passage of a law limiting the right of the governing board of municipalities to grant public franchises for a longer period than 25 years would not only protect the rights of future generations, enable a readjustment of terms according to conditions at the end of this period, but would eliminate the opportunity to grant concessions other than upon strictly business conditions. That this limitation may not restrict enterprises or arrest progress in the rural districts, it might be provided that any ordinance granting a franchise for a longer period than 25 years should be submitted to a vote of the people, with a limitation as to a maximum term of years.

Provision should be made for publicity in the granting of franchises, both with regard to the proper advertising of applications and the preventing of undue haste in the passage of ordinances for such purposes." 9 Ja 06, p.38-39

- c O. Pattison. "Immediate action should be taken by the General Assembly to prohibit any municipality from giving away or selling any franchise of any nature, or from extending any franchise without first submitting it to a vote of the people of said city." 8 Ja 06, p.13

2629 Municipal ownership (general)

- a O. Pattison. "I desire to call your attention to the interest that is being taken in the subject of home rule for cities, particularly as to the right of each city, town or village at large to decide for itself all questions of local policy, especially those of public or private ownership of all public utilities, including street railways, waterworks and lighting systems. . ." 8 Ja 06, p.12-13

2633 Electricity. Gas2643 Rates

- a N. Y. Higgins. ". . . A careful investigation of the gas problem in New York city by a competent and conscientious legislative committee resulted in the recommendation of an 80-cent rate to be established by law. A prima facie case was made out. The action of the Legislature was subject to judicial review. Yet relief was refused. I urge a further consideration of this question on your part." 3 Ja 06, p.24

2648 Water

See also 1079, Pollution of water; 1180, Control of water

2650 Municipal works

- a N. Y. Higgins. "The present law requires only municipal corporations to submit their plans for sources of water supply to the state board for approval. This provision should be amended so as to include persons and private corporations condemning lands for sources of public water supplies." 3 Ja 06, p.25

2700 Roads. Streets

- a Miss. Vardaman. "The improvements of the public roads by taxation, or working them with convict labor under the direction of competent state and county officers is one of the pressing necessities of this state. . ." 3 Ja 06, p.29-30

2702 State road systems and state aid

- a Va. Montague. "My former recommendations respecting the improvement of our common public highways, I renew. . ." 10 Ja 06, p.11
- b Va. Swanson. ". . . The state should first create a department of roads, equip it with scientific men experienced in road construction, and let this department subsequently submit a practical and comprehensive plan. The state could then extend its aid with the assurance that its money would be intelligently spent and accomplish good results. . ." 1 F 06, p.15

2723 Automobiles and motorcycles

- a Mass. Guild. "A more effective and uniform regulation of automobiles, and especially of reckless chauffeurs, is desirable. . . Those who make a rational use of a modern vehicle should not be made subject to petty persecution. . . All fines for over-speeding should be paid to the commonwealth and applied to the repairs of highways." 4 Ja 06, p.20-21

- b N. J. Stokes. ". . . The damage done through the use of these machines [automobiles] to the surface of our macadam and gravel roads should be compensated for and means to prevent reckless driving provided. A graduated license fee for cars might be charged and devoted to the repair of our damaged roadways. . . An automobile capable of running from 50 to 75 miles an hour is granted the right of way upon our streets and highways and is driven in some cases by amateurs who have had little or no experience in the handling and management of such powerful machines, whose eyesight may be defective or who for other reasons may be entirely incapable of appreciating the responsibility they have assumed. It would seem that drivers of automobiles or chauffeurs should be required to have a license, and this license should be revoked upon the violation of its provisions. . . It might be provided that deliberate reckless driving, whether of automobiles or horses, resulting in injury to person or property, should be punished by imprisonment. Vehicles of all kinds using the public highways should be required to carry lights at night for the protection of themselves and the public."

Hon. A. S. Draper

Commissioner of Education

DEAR SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith and recommend for publication the annual Index of Legislation, the 17th of its series. Thirteen regular and seven special legislative sessions were held during the year. Out of a total of 5125 laws passed, 2009 have been listed or briefly digested in the present Index. This includes all general and permanent laws passed during the year but excludes private, local and temporary laws, excepting a few of great general interest. The Index also includes references to 104 statutes that have been declared unconstitutional by the courts during the year and it indicates the result of the vote on 69 constitutional amendments submitted to the people for adoption or rejection.

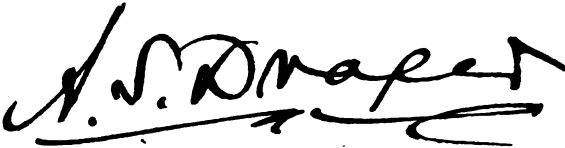

Very respectfully

EDWIN H. ANDERSON

Director

INDEX OF LEGISLATION 1906

OCTOBER 1, 1905 TO OCTOBER 1, 1906

PREFATORY

EXPLANATIONS

These must be carefully read to understand the bulletin.

Scope. All general permanent laws are included. Private, local and temporary acts, unless of great general interest, are omitted. Many acts general in form but special in their application are also omitted. Private acts applying to particular persons or granting relief to specific public officers and local acts applying to a single political division or to but a small proportion of the political divisions belonging to the same class are omitted. Important local acts other than amendatory, on subjects of general interest, are included. New city charters are included but amendments thereto are omitted. Constitutional amendments both local and general are included. All general appropriation bills are omitted. Special appropriation acts providing for the establishment of a new institution or making some extraordinary appropriation of great general interest are included. Laws providing for the general management and control of a particular state institution are included but those relating to some detail of its administration are omitted. All laws legalizing acts already performed are omitted. Laws of Congress and of the non-contiguous territories of the United States are omitted.

Method. Usually but one entry is made for a law. To ascertain what legislation has been passed concerning a subject it is necessary for the reader to refer also to the more inclusive heads and to observe carefully the cross references. For example, in looking up laws relating to illegal voting, the user, in addition to consulting entries under 155, Illegal voting, must look under 149, Election offenses, and 126, Elections. Laws relating to illegal voting alone are classed under 155, those relating to illegal voting and other offenses under 149, the general head for election offenses and those relating to illegal voting and various other election matters under 126, the general head for elections. In addition the cross reference under 126, Elections, to 2225, School elections, must be observed as illegal voting at school elections would be placed under that head.

The plan is a combination of index and digest. A large portion of the entries simply indicate in the most definite manner practicable the exact subject treated by the law. Many entries, however, digest in a line or two the substance of a law or the exact change made by an amendment. Other entries are a combination of the above forms, partly index, partly digest. The aim always is to convey the greatest amount of information possible within a very limited space. Unimportant laws relating to details of procedure or administration are indexed most briefly.

The exact change made by the amendment is often shown by italics to indicate new matter and by brackets inclosing matter superseded: e. g. salary of Governor $5000 [$3000] means that the Governor's salary has been increased from $3000 to $5000.

The title of acts other than amendatory if concise and definite, is given either in full or in part. The title is included in quotation marks and is annotated when necessary. The number of sections contained in each law is given to show its length and complexity.

Citations. A citation to the act indexed or summarized is set off at the end of the entry. It contains year, chapter number or page, and day and month of approval or passage. The abbreviation ch. is used for chapter and p. for page: e. g. '05 ch. 94, 5 J1; '05 p. 164, 9 My. In all states except Georgia, Alabama, Illinois, Missouri, and Ohio the session laws are numbered consecutively, and references are to chapter.

In North Carolina and Rhode Island where the Governor's approval is not necessary, in a number of states where joint and concurrent resolutions do not require the approval of the Governor and in the case of bills that become laws by the expiration of time without the signature of the Governor, the date of passage by the Legislature is given. In a few cases the date of passage and approval are both omitted in the session laws, and in these cases the year only is given.

ABBREVIATIONS

Citations to statutes amended or repealed by the act indexed always begin with the most general part and end with the most specific; e. g. '95 ch. 859 §2; '98 p.78; R. S. '96 t.3 art. 10 §3 ¶4. For abbreviations used in citing compilations of statutes see below.

Classification. The classification of the summary is the same as that used in the Digest of Governors Messages and will continue unchanged from year to year, except for insertion of new headings necessitated by new subjects of legislation. The numbers assigned to headings will also remain unchanged so that readers can follow recommendations and laws on any subject by looking under the same marginal number in each bulletin. The numbering corresponds to the consecutive numbering of headings in our card index of legislation 1890 to date. Where there is no legislation this subject number is omitted. The entries under each head are alphabetized by states and each entry is designated by a letter or letters; e.g. b, da.

Subject index. This is an alphabetic list of the subjects included. References are to the marginal class and entry numbers.

The volume of Michigan Local Acts 1905 were received too late to include in the 1905 Index. Nine of the 339 local acts published in that volume are included in the present bulletin.

In Oregon at an election held June 4, 1906, 11 propositions were voted on by the people. One proposition was submitted as the result of a referendum petition and resulted in sustaining the action of the Legislature. Ten propositions were submitted by initiative petition and of these seven were adopted and three rejected.

^aThe laws of the Delaware special session of 1906 will be published with the laws of the Delaware regular session of 1907. It is understood that but two acts were passed: one relating to corporation reports and entitled "An act to amend 'an act to raise revenue for the state by taxing corporations'"; the other is entitled "An act to provide for the collection of the revenue of the state." These will be indexed in the Index of Legislation, 1907.

REVIEW OF LEGISLATION 1906

LEGISLATION BULLETIN 33a

LABOR¹

ADNA F. WEBER PH.D., CHIEF STATISTICIAN, NEW YORK
DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

Of the six state Legislatures that hold annual sessions, no general labor legislation is recorded in 1906 in Georgia, South Carolina and Rhode Island; while of the seven Legislatures with biennial sessions in 1906, all but Mississippi appear in the Index of Legislation relating to labor, although the single act listed for New Jersey is nothing more than a resolution continuing the special commission appointed in 1905 to codify the law of master and servant. In the leading industrial commonwealths of New York and Massachusetts, the labor legislation at the annual session of 1906 was unusually important and receives separate attention in the following review. Separate paragraphs are also devoted to Ohio, Kentucky and Louisiana, as well as Arkansas, whose session laws of 1905 were printed too late for inclusion in the review of last year. The other states represented in the Index under the subject of labor legislation — Iowa, Maryland and Virginia — enacted only one or two laws each, which will be mentioned under the appropriate topic below.

Factory and mining laws. The recommendations of the new Commissioner of Labor in New York, an attorney by profession, led to sweeping amendments to those sections of the factory law which are especially designed to protect operatives from unclean and insanitary workrooms and surroundings. The authority to stop work had already been found the most efficacious remedy for persistent refusal or neglect to "clean up" in the case of the tenement workers, and this remedy has been applied with excellent results to bakeries and small factories or workshops in leased buildings. The changes in the Massachusetts factory law have to do more particularly with the inspection of boilers, as a consequence of the fatal explosion in a Brockton shoe factory in March 1905. Kentucky added to its recent factory inspection law provisions requiring safety appliances, toilet rooms, and seats for female employees; while Louisiana adopted somewhat similar provisions and instituted a system of municipal inspection in the principal cities and towns. Virginia, following a recommendation of its Governor, took the first steps toward the regulation of factory conditions by authorizing the Commissioner of Labor Statistics to investigate violations or evasions of the laws and make report of the established violations to the court and district attorney ('06 ch.55).

Arkansas, Kentucky, New York and Ohio enacted additional legislation for the protection of mine workers, but Virginia failed to act upon the recommendation of the Governor in behalf of such regulation. The Illinois courts in the same year set aside as special legislation and therefore unconstitutional the provision of the act of 1903 requiring owners of coal mines to provide washrooms for miners (Starne v. People, 78 N. E. 61). It is interesting to note that Massachusetts in the same year, following the example of Connecticut, required owners of foundries to provide lockers and washrooms for the use of the molders.

Hours of labor. Three states enacted important laws for the limitation of the hours of work of wage earners. Owing to the unconstitutionality of the eight hour and prevailing rate of wages law as applied to work done by contract for municipalities, the people of New York by a vote of 2 to 1 adopted a constitutional amendment in 1905 expressly conferring upon the Legislature the necessary grant of authority. The Legislature thereupon reenacted the old law, which had remained in force so far as it applied to work done by a municipality and by or for the state. Massachusetts, which had before been satisfied with a nine hour law for laborers employed on public work, enacted a comprehensive eight hour law, and the United States eight hour law of 1892, as is well known, was for the first time actively enforced through President Roosevelt's special order. Maryland became the first state to enact an eight hour law for railway employees. As its statute ('06 ch.454) applies only to telegraphers engaged in despatching trains, its constitutionality may very well be upheld on the ground of public safety. There is more of a question respecting the law of Arkansas establishing a maximum day of 10 hours for workmen employed in saw-mills and planing mills. Louisiana was the only state that joined the commonwealths which prescribe a maximum 60 hour week for women and minors employed in factories. The slow progress of this movement led the Massachusetts Legislature to adopt a resolution favoring an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which would enable Congress to enact a general law regulating the hours of labor.

Assignment of wages. Five states enacted laws for the protection of wage workers who in time of distress are compelled to borrow money, at usurious terms, on the pledge of their future earnings. The most comprehensive law of 1906 is that of Maryland (ch.399), which like the acts of Iowa and Massachusetts requires notice of assignment to be given to the employer. Louisiana goes further and provides that the assignment shall not be binding upon the employer without his written consent. Massachusetts prescribes a standard form, while Virginia enacts a law to regulate the business of "loan sharks" and imposes a license tax ('06 ch.156).

Miscellaneous. This review would be incomplete without specific mention of the splendid service rendered by the President of the United States in his annual messages to Congress in 1905 and 1906, which constitute an almost epoch-making discussion of the principles of social legislation. The most important fruits of that discussion are seen in enactments just outside the domain of labor legislation; but the beginnings of the model federal labor laws recommended by the President are to be seen in the employers liability act (interstate commerce) and the act regulating employment agencies in the District of Columbia. The important legislation on these two subjects in New York and Massachusetts is reviewed below.

New York legislation

The extent and variety of its industrial and commercial interests and the effectiveness of the organization of its working people make New York a leader among the states in the enactment of social legislation of the kind that is conveniently termed labor laws. The Empire State has, indeed, only a few mines; but they are sufficiently extensive to require some regulations of the kind elaborated in Pennsylvania and Illinois. Its textile industry is not so important as that of Massachusetts, but nevertheless employs women and children in such large numbers as to require legal protection through factory legislation and inspection, which aims to place reasonable limits upon the hours of labor of women and children and to put safeguards about machinery for the protection of all classes of workers. In addition to such regulations, New York has had to deal with conditions peculiar to the industry of a metropolis like New York city, where work is largely carried on in small work places that hardly deserve the name of factory. The word "factory" commonly brings to mind the picture of a mill or other substantial building on its own premises; but in New York city the typical factory building is occupied by 10 or 20 or 50 separate manufacturing concerns, with the result that responsibility for defects in structural conditions, power-conveying apparatus, etc., becomes greatly confused. Moreover, the leading industry of the city, the manufacture of clothing, is dispersed to an even greater degree through the performance of finishing operations in the homes of the workers, especially in the tenement districts. Finally, the strength of organized labor in the state has enabled it to develop in a larger degree than elsewhere the idea that the state should use its influence as the largest employer of labor to establish more equitable conditions for the wage earner in the way of hours, wages etc.

With the growth of factory and labor legislation since the earlier 80's there was for a long time a corresponding increase in the strength of the administrative bureaus concerned with the carrying out of that legislation; the factory inspection staff, for example, increased from two in 1886 to 66 in 1900. But the following year brought an era of retrenchment, which resulted in the consolidation of the factory inspector's office with the Bureau of Labor Statistics and the Board of Mediation and Arbitration and a general reduction in appropriations, so that the Commissioner of Labor was able to employ only 37 of the 50 inspectors authorized by law. To aggravate matters, the Legislature almost every year added to the duties of the officers of the department. The natural consequence appeared in 1904, when the Commissioner of Labor undertook to enforce the eight hour and alien labor laws on public contracts in New York city, to the detriment of the work of inspecting factories and stopping child labor. In May 1905, the appointment of Commissioner of Labor went to a New York attorney, whose legal training revealed to him many defects in the construction of the statutes as well as the organization of the department. His recommendations to the Legislature led to the numerous amendments of the factory laws listed in the Index of Legislation of 1906.

1 In the first place, the Legislature supplied appropriations for 12 more factory inspectors, thus bringing the force up to within one of the number employed in 1901 before the period of retrenchment. Then it dealt with the problem of New York city sweat shops¹ in two new sections relating to "tenant factories," which not only defined the responsibilities of landlord and tenant, respectively, but also placed in the hands of the Commissioner of Labor the only thoroughly efficacious remedy for the characteristic evil of city workrooms (uncleanliness), namely, authority to stop work until the premises have been cleaned ('06 ch.178). This remedy already existed in the case of articles unlawfully manufactured in tenement houses. It was also applied to bake shops ('06 ch.401). The law regarding tenement manufactures was amended in several particulars, notably by the addition of confectionery, ice cream, preserves etc., to the articles that may not be manufactured in an unlicensed tenement house ('06 ch.129), and in other ways ('06 ch.275). Other statutes permit the Commissioner of Labor to use discretion in ordering exhaust fans installed in factories for the purpose of carrying off dust from woodworking machinery ('06 ch.366); encourage factory owners to report accidents in detail by making their reports inadmissible as evidence in damage suits ('06 ch.216);

¹The commissioner's recommendations were as follows:

"There exist in New York city and in some few other localities in the state a large number of workshops classed as factories, but presenting different conditions and different difficulties in enforcing the law from those of the usual factories, and which are therefore for convenience and because of the appropriateness of the term defined as above. These shops are generally located on floors or in lofts of buildings leased out to different tenants, and sometimes in tenement houses. Their products and materials are usually those of the clothing or similar trades. Sometimes steam machinery is employed but more often only machinery run by hand or foot, and sometimes none at all. Frequently the buildings are old and ill adapted to their use, and generally the sanitary conditions are bad. These concerns are often transient and evanescent, and the proprietors irresponsible, poor, ignorant of the English language and difficult to find. The orders of the department in regard to them generally relate to toilet provisions, light and ventilation, safety, the lighting of halls and stairways, and cleanliness; and they are seldom voluntarily obeyed. Where, as is often the case, such orders require structural changes in a building, the landlord will not make them and the lessee can not; or it becomes a matter of dispute between them which should bear the expense, and the law is indefinite as to which party this department can hold responsible. A large proportion of prosecutions by the department in New York city are against proprietors of such shops, but the results of such prosecutions are discouragingly inadequate and the conditions are growing worse. The primary liability for the parts used in common, where a landlord lets his building to two or more tenants for factory purposes, should, as before recommended, be imposed upon him. And where uncleanliness which admits of prompt, cheap and simple remedies, exists, the department should be armed with the only practicable means of enforcement against the lessee, that is, the right to stop work until the premises be cleaned, in the same way that it can now be done in tenement houses."

and add to the safeguards of mining operations ('06 ch.375). A bill was also enacted ('06 ch.521) to give the Commissioner of Labor or his representative admittance to tunnels, a considerable number of which are in course of construction in New York city at a great hazard to the life and limb of workmen. Unfortunately the companion bill providing for the appointment of properly qualified tunnel inspectors failed of passage and thus prevented the exercise of the power of inspection conferred by the bill that became law.

2 The foregoing list of important statutes concerning factories and mines by no means exhausts the labor legislation of 1906 in New York. Much popular interest was manifested in the bills for the reestablishment of an eight hour day on public contract work, which had been in abeyance as the result of judicial interpretation. The first eight hour law in New York had been enacted in 1867, but, despite numerous changes in subsequent years, remained of no practical effect until 1899, when the Legislature, upon Governor Roosevelt's recommendation, amended it so as to prohibit agreements to work more than the legal eight hours, which then became an actual maximum that could be exceeded only in cases of extraordinary emergency. The subsequent history of the law is given in a memorandum filed by the Governor with his approval of the bill reenacting the act of 1899 with one change, which excepted highway work performed outside the limits of cities and villages:

The Court of Appeals held, in 1894, that the Legislature has power to pass a general law regulating the compensation of laborers employed by the state, or by officers under its authority (Clark v. State, 142 N. Y. 101); and the same court held in 1904 that the provisions of the labor law as to prevailing rate of wages, so far as it relates to state or municipal employees, was constitutional (Ryan v. City of New York, 177 N. Y. 271).

The Court of Appeals in 1903 (in the case of the People v. The Orange County Road Construction Co., 175 N. Y. 84) by a divided court, upheld the right of the state, when the state itself prosecutes a work, to dictate every detail of the service required in its performance, prescribe the wages of workmen, their hours of labor and the particular individuals who may be employed, but denied that such right exists where it has let out the performance of the work to a contractor.

In 1901 the Court of Appeals held (in the case of People ex rel. Rodgers v. Coler, Comptroller, 166 N. Y. 1) that a municipal contractor who has fully performed his contract might compel the city to pay the amount due by mandamus, although he had failed to comply with his stipulation to pay the prevailing rate of wages; and that if he failed to pay such rate the contract should be void, since the labor law, so far as it relates to such a case, was unconstitutional.

Subsequent to the decision of this case, the Supreme Court of the United States (in Atkin v. State of Kansas, 191 U. S. 207) upheld a similar statute prescribing an eight hour day and the prevailing rate of wages for employees of municipal contractors. Atkin, a municipal contractor, was prosecuted criminally, convicted and punished under this statute. This case might be deemed to be controlling, were it not that thereafter the Court of Appeals of this state (in the case of People ex rel. Cossey v. Grout, Comptroller, 179 N. Y. 417) again by a divided court, held that the Atkin case did not control the decision in the Rodgers case, so far as that case held that the labor law was an unconstitutional violation of the city's rights and powers.

Last year the people of the state determined that if the Legislature lacked the power to enact such laws in behalf of labor's hours and wages on public works as were deemed wise and salutary, the fundamental law should be so changed as to grant such powers in unmistakable language and by an overwhelming popular vote the Constitution was amended by adding a new section to read as follows:

"The Legislature may regulate and fix the wages or salaries, the hours of work or labor, and make provision for the protection, welfare and safety of persons employed by the state or by any county, city, town, village or other civil division of the state, or by any contractor or subcontractor performing work, labor or services for the state or for any county, city, town, village or other civil division thereof." (Art. XII, § 1, end of section)

Under the authority of this section, the power of the Legislature to enact labor laws is extended to cover the case of employees of municipal contractors, to authorize the Legislature to fix for such employees an eight hour day, to establish the prevailing rate of wages as their compensation, and to punish violations thereof. The reenactment of section 3 by this bill reenacts the legislative will as heretofore expressed and vitalizes so much of the section as the courts had heretofore held inoperative.

3 In 1902 the Legislature enacted an employers liability law, which extended the employers common law responsibility for negligence to the acts of employees whose sole or principal duty is that of superintendence. As this act did not meet the cases of railway employees injured as a result of error or negligence on the part of trainmen or train despatchers, which cases were specifically included in the liability acts of England and Massachusetts, the railway men had urged an amendment each succeeding year. The law enacted in 1906 is not an amendment to the liability act of 1902 uniformity of labor legislation in the United States. The Massachusetts Legislature in 1906 adopted a resolution favoring an amendment to the Constitution of the United States so "as to put it clearly within the power of Congress to enact laws regulating the hours of labor in the several states according to some uniform system," and requested the senators and representatives of the commonwealths "to use their influence to secure the adoption of the pending resolution proposing such an amendment to the Constitution."

Although the "welfare" movements fostered by several industrial associations have enlisted the sympathy of many large manufacturers, they have not obviated the necessity of legislation in both Connecticut and Massachusetts requiring owners of foundries to provide washrooms and dressing rooms for their workmen. The Massachusetts law ('06 ch.250) prescribes running hot and cold water, to be provided in a toilet room connected with a foundry but protected from its dust, and properly heated and ventilated. A similar measure passed one branch of the New York Legislature at the sessions of 1905 and 1906.

There is a new law relative to the assignment of future wages ('06 ch.390), which places a time limit of two years on such assignments and also allows them to be made only to secure debts contracted prior to or simultaneously with the assignment, which must be executed on the standard form prescribed in the law and a copy thereof delivered to the employer.

An amendment ('06 ch.427) to the weekly payment law adds employees of counties to those of cities, who must be paid weekly except when the privilege is waived.

Mention has elsewhere been made of the statute ('06 ch.296) requiring the chief of the Bureau of Statistics of Labor to collect and publish in his annual report financial statements of all towns and cities. A still more important enlargement of his duties is made by an act ('06 ch.435) providing for the establishment and maintenance of free employment offices in cities to be selected by him after investigation, and appropriating $5000 for the first year's expenses. It will not escape notice that one month earlier the New York Legislature, following the recommendation of the Commissioner of Labor, had abolished the free public employment bureau maintained by the department in New York city since 1896, and repealed the provisions of the labor law requiring the maintenance of free employment offices in all cities of the first class. Insufficient appropriations had limited the usefulness of the New York office; the sum of $5000 a year was an insignificant amount to carry on such work in a city the size of New York, where private agencies, with better equipment, served all classes of labor except the more highly skilled men taken care of by the trade union officers. Trade was so active that there were few unemployed in New York city. In fact, the argument for a public employment bureau had shifted entirely from the standpoint of the wage earner to that of the employer looking in vain for unemployed labor; and a year or two previously the state had established a bureau of agricultural statistics in the Department of Agriculture for the purpose of bringing laborers to the farms and promoting also the occupation of abandoned farms.

Other important Massachusetts legislation relating to labor but reviewed elsewhere included several statutes in regard to boiler inspection and the licensing of engineers and firemen; the establishment of a permanent commission on industrial education; and the employment and education of children.

Arkansas legislation of 1905

Although Arkansas has not as yet become one of the great manufacturing commonwealths, it has enacted a considerable body of labor legislation relating to railways, mines and other extractive industries. At the session of 1905¹ the mine inspection law was considerably amplified and strengthened (ch.225). Its application was extended from mines employing 20 or more men underground to all employing 10 or more; the mine inspector's salary was increased; and 13 new sections were added to the law, while a separate act (ch.219) made it a misdemeanor for mine owners to screen coal before it is weighed and credited to the workman who mined it.

Another act (ch.233) requires railway companies, under penalty, to provide shelter for workmen permanently employed in the construction or repair of cars and other equipment. For this purpose a building or shed must be erected over the repair tracks at every division point so as to afford shelter during inclement weather.

A maximum 10 hour day has been prescribed for men employed in saw and planing mills (ch.49). The statute applies to corporations and associations and makes it a misdemeanor for them to exact more than 10 hours labor a day. In contrast with the usual exception permitting agreements to work overtime (with the effect of nullifying the law), this act permits only agreements for less than 10 hours as a day's work.

A new statute requires all persons to pay wages in cash or in checks, drafts or other evidence of indebtedness that are redeemable in lawful money (ch.143). The act also makes it a crime for an employer to compel his employees to purchase goods or supplies in payment of wages or to sell them supplies at prices above reasonable or current market values. Another law (ch.210) requires railway companies to pay wages due discharged employees within seven days from dismissal.

The law against enticement was modified both by reducing the fine imposed and the amount of damages that may be recovered by an employer or landlord who has made advances to the laborer under contract (ch.298). Finally, there is to be mentioned a law against blacklisting (ch.214), which makes it a misdemeanor to publish a false statement or "that any one is a member of a secret organization" for the purpose of preventing such person from securing employment.

Kentucky, Louisiana and Ohio

In 1902 Kentucky made provision for the appointment of a labor and factory inspector, whose principal duty in the way of enforcement of laws pertained to the protection of children and women. The reports of the inspector and his assistant have supplied abundant information as to the need of additional regulations and in the revised factory laws of 1906 (ch.52) the Legislature not only improved the child labor provisions but added provisions to secure the safeguarding of machinery, ventilation, cleanliness, sanitary conveniences, seats for women and girls. Kentucky also passed a law to increase the efficiency of the office of inspector of mines, provide for the inspection of mine scales and of miner's oil, etc. (ch.108), which directs the appointment of two additional mining inspectors.

Louisiana in 1906 entered upon the path of factory inspection by an act (ch.34) providing for municipal inspection in incorporated places of 10,000 or more population, instead of imposing the duty upon the State Bureau of Labor Statistics in the usual fashion. To permit the appointment of female inspectors it was necessary to secure an amendment to the state Constitution. The new factory law also established a maximum 60 hour week for women and minors, required owners of factories to provide safe exits and stair rails in all cases and toilet facilities whenever they employed children or women. Louisiana also enacted a law requiring the written consent of the employer to validate an assignment of unearned wages (ch.5) and amended the law on enticement to include share hands (ch.54).

Many of the states have laws requiring street car companies to provide screens or vestibules for the protection of motormen from the inclemency of the weather, but the Ohio Legislature is the first to require such vestibules to be heated in the winter months. The minimum temperature is fixed at 60° Fahrenheit. The same Legislature required railway companies to equip locomotives with self-cleaning ash dump pans and to forbid employees to go under locomotives for the purpose of removing ashes, except in cases of emergency. To prevent the explosion of dust-laden air and gas in mines, mine owners are required to spray or sprinkle with water the entries and air ways of mines that are so dry that the air becomes charged with dust. A fourth Ohio statute makes the employment of a man or an independent miner of coal conditional upon a year's experience in the mines either as a miner or as a miner's helper or laborer.

CRIMES AND CORRECTIONS¹

SAMUEL J. BARROWS, COMMISSIONER FOR THE UNITED STATES ON THE INTERNATIONAL PRISON COMMISSION

Crimes

The volume of legislation during the past year concerning crimes and offenses is small. It is not marked by any radical change in the conception of crime or its treatment. The old method, the heritage of centuries, of meting out a certain amount of penalty for a particular offense remains the irrational and arbitrary basis of our criminal codes. It is of some importance to see what new crimes or offenses are catalogued in different states as social dangers. It indicates social recognition of further means for social protection. It represents from time to time new and higher standards of conduct. In this respect it may be said that our penal legislation is nearly always progressive. It is seldom that any deliberate step is taken to lower the tone of our civilization. From this point of view a study of our new laws is always interesting and instructive.

From the standpoint, however, of the correction of the offender our criminal codes with their gradations of penalties are of little practical value. They classify offenses according to a threefold standard of weight or enormity. They compel the offender to be classified in the same way. A single act, however, does not furnish the entire clue to the character of an offender. His classification in a corrective system may be very different from his place in a merely punitive system. A few states have broken away from the limitations of the time sentence which punishes the offense instead of correcting the offender. The indeterminate sentence slowly makes headway. A luminous indication, from the point of view of the penologist, in the laws of the year is the appointment by the state of Maryland of a commission to study and report upon the indeterminate sentence. The systematic chronicle of this fact belongs under the head of criminal procedure; but no measure is more intimately connected with the meting out of penalties for crimes and offenses. The general adoption of such a law would mean two things: first, that our code makers and legislators would be relieved from the necessity of that kind of divination which consists in guessing what penalty shall be attached to each offense; in the second place it would lead to the making of our prisons into houses of correction or reformation. When that time comes the reviewer of this department will be relieved from the necessity of measuring the oscillation and variation of penalties.

New crimes. Most of the changes made in the laws during the last year have been but variations of the familiar category of crimes and offenses, to supply omissions or to strengthen weak points in the law. But two or three titles in the whole list of laws create or nominate new offenses. One of the most evident of these is the law of Kentucky making it unlawful to present plays in that commonwealth that excite race prejudice. The law is brief but definite. It reads:

It shall be unlawful for any person to present, or to participate in the presentation of, or to permit to be presented in any opera house, theater, hall or other building under his control any play that is based upon antagonism alleged formerly to exist between master and slave, or that excites race prejudice.

Any person violating the provisions of the act shall be subject to a fine of not less than $100, nor more than $500, or to imprisonment in the county jail of not less than one or more than three months, or both such fine and imprisonment.

The effect of this law will be to prevent the performance of Uncle Tom's Cabin in Kentucky and also of some more recent plays; but there is an opportunity for judicial decision as to what constitutes race prejudice.

Another offense, not common in the criminal codes, is that of hazing. Offenses of this kind, when they involve bodily injury or destruction of property, are covered by existing laws or police regulation in case the injured party makes them the subject of complaint, which as a matter of fact is seldom done. But there are many foolish practices coming under the designation of the word "hazing" which could not be reached by the penal codes even if they were invoked. Ohio in 1893 passed a law against "what is commonly called hazing" with a penalty of from $10 to $100, or imprisonment from 30 days to a year or both. This law was not precise in its definition. It is replaced by a new act so as to make it cover all educational institutions and to define what is meant by "hazing." The law says: "Whoever being a student or being a person in attendance at any public, private, parochial or military school, college or other educational institution conspires to or does engage in the practice of hazing or of committing any act that injures, frightens, degrades or disgraces or tends to injure, frighten, degrade or disgrace any fellow student or person attending such institution shall be held guilty of a misdemeanor."

The maximum fine is increased to $200 and the maximum imprisonment is reduced to six months, but provision is made for the imprisonment of the offender until the payment of the fine, the law reading "in case of fine the sentence shall be that the defendant or defendants be incarcerated until said fine shall be paid."

The new law places a new responsibility upon the teacher. It provides that, "Whoever being a teacher, superintendent, commandant or other person or persons in charge of any public, private, parochial or military school, college or other educational institution shall knowingly permit any act of hazing or of attempting to haze, injure, frighten, degrade or disgrace any person attending the institution in which he is in charge, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and he shall be fined not more than $100."

New instruments of crime. Next to the cataloguing of new crimes or offenses, an annual review of our penal laws shows that their scope must be widened from time to time to protect society from the employment of some new invention or instrument in a criminal way. Thus Lombroso has lately written on the new forms of crime that are possible through the rapid transit furnished by the automobile, not to speak of the manslaughter which may be committed by the automobile itself. This new vehicle has forced its way into our statute books and 11 laws were passed concerning it during the last year. As several of these have penalties attached they likewise come within the domain of penal law, and a chauffeur when he starts out with an automobile can not be sure that he will not be a criminal before he gets back. The most effectual way to prevent the offense of overspeeding is a mechanical governor on every machine which will prevent it from running at an unlawful rate. And now the phonograph must be very careful how it talks in the state of Ohio. If it is guilty of any profane or immoral language, the law can not of course indict the instrument; but it can indict the exhibitor, who may be fined from $50 to $500 or be imprisoned from 30 days to six months. The biograph or other picture machines must be operated with similar care for they come under the provisions of the same law.

The blackjack, and brass or metal knucks continue to be a menace to the peace of the community. In Virginia a fine of $25 to $100 is now imposed for selling or bartering or even having them in one's possession, "except in the case of a conservator of the peace."

Louisiana has also amended its law in regard to carrying concealed weapons and raised the maximum of imprisonment from three to six months. Massachusetts regulates the carrying of loaded pistols or revolvers by license.

Governor Beckham of Kentucky in his message advised that the law be amended in such a way as to increase the penalty beyond the reach even of executive clemency, saying: "As the law now is, when the Governor grants a pardon for any part or all of the penalty, the applicant has to pay to the state a tax of $4 on the pardon, which the Governor can not remit. I advise that you increase that tax to at least $100, and when you do so you can rest assured that there will be a wonderful reduction in the number of pistols carried."

Governor Pattison of Ohio likewise urged that some laws "should be enacted to prevent the indiscriminate sale of revolvers and pistols." He proposes that "no such instruments of death should be purchased or sold except with the approval of some probate or common pleas judge residing in the county, and any one purchasing a revolver after having received such a permit should pay a license of $5 a year during the continuance of said permit, which permit should be for one year only."

Another modern instrument of crime is the use of explosives either for burglary or for arson. Louisiana has strengthened its law against arson by penalizing the use of explosive substances with intent to destroy houses or vessels in which human beings may usually stay or reside, the penalty being imprisonment from 10 to 20 years.

Maryland makes the use of explosives to break and enter buildings either by day or by night, whether inhabited or not, a form of burglary with a maximum penalty of 20 years.

Changes in classification or penalty. Laws are modified in various states so as simply to affect the penalty. Generally these amendments mean that a loose law is screwed up a little tighter in the way of penalty with the view of greater deterrent effect. Occasionaly it is discovered that the penalty is too high. The reviewer of this department has never found, and he challenges anybody else to find, any principle upon which such modifications of penalty may be based. This as pointed out in the introduction to this review is one of the most arbitrary aspects of our code makers. An example of the reduction of the penalty is found in the recommendation of Governor Herrick of Ohio who says: "The State Board of Pardons reports that during the last two years a very large portion of the cases submitted to it are of persons convicted under section 6835 of the Revised Statutes for burglarizing uninhabited buildings. This section provides a minimum sentence of five years for such an offense, and in a majority of the cases it has been found that the law is too severe . . . I suggest that the minimum sentence for this offense should be changed to one year." In accordance with the Governor's recommendation the law has been so changed.

In Kentucky the age of consent has been raised to 16 years. The laws of that state have also been amended so that prosecution for seduction may be renewed if a husband has abandoned his wife within three years of marriage.

In Arkansas an age limit as to vagrancy has been introduced. Convictions can not be had under this head for minors 14 years of age or under.

In Kentucky "in all civil actions for damages inflicted by an assault or assault and battery the defendant shall have the right to plead as a defense to the claim for punitive damages, and to introduce as evidence in mitigation of damages, any matter of provocation which preceded the assault or assault and battery."

New Jersey has somewhat broadened its laws so as to cover various forms of modern fraud, of which there are many, and to make more effectual its law against the receiving of stolen goods.

Both New York and Louisiana provide that contradictory statements under oath shall be presumptive evidence of perjury. Thus if a person testified before the grand jury one way and subsequently before the trial court another way, he may be indicted for perjury. In Louisiana, however, it is made to depend upon "the belief of the jury that such person in either of the above instances did wilfully, corruptly and intentionally swear falsely upon any material point at issue."

Massachusetts has made a new definition as to domestic animals. It is well known that a dog is not regarded at common law as a species of property. Not having any intrinsic value he can not be stolen, or more accurately the thief can not be indicted for larceny. However, England, Pennsylvania, Texas and Utah now admit that a dog is property. Massachusetts settles the question not only for dogs but for a variety of domesticated animals by enacting "Whoever without the consent of the owner and with a felonious intent, takes any domesticated animal, or a beast or a bird which is ordinarily kept in confinement and is not the subject of larceny at common law, shall be guilty of larceny."

The attempt in California to make the sale of theater tickets by speculators a crime has failed under decision of the Supreme Court, declaring this section of the Penal Code unconstitutional. The code provides that "every person who sells or offers for sale any ticket or tickets to any theater or other public place of amusement at a price in excess of that charged originally by the management of such theater or public place of amusement is guilty of a misdemeanor." The court holds that "the constitutional guaranty securing to every person the right of 'acquiring, possessing and protecting property,' refers to the right to acquire and possess the absolute and unqualified title to every species of property recognized by law . . . it includes the right to dispose of such property in such innocent manner as he pleases, and to sell it for such price as he can obtain in fair barter . . . These rights are in fact inherent in every natural person and do not depend upon constitutional grant or guaranty . . ." A theater ticket represents a species of property. The holder "has the clear right to dispose of it, to sell it to whom he pleases and at such price as he can obtain."

Liquor legislation. Liquor legislation constitutes in some respects a class by itself. Yet physically as well as legally alcoholic drinks have a very intimate relation to crime. This relation is at once recognized when it is known that different authorities, as the result of various statistical investigations, ascribe from 50 to 90% of crimes committed to the use of alcoholic drinks. During the last year 46 laws relating to intoxicating liquors have been passed in 20 different states. Most of these laws are of minor importance and embody no new principle. They are local barometers showing fluctuations in the temperance sentiment, or they relate to the regulation and restriction of the traffic. Many of these laws are sufficiently indicated by the Index and they require no special analysis.

Georgia authorized in 1895 the appointment of a commission to investigate the dispensary system in that state. A law passed in 1906 gives the committee additional powers. Another law provides that local option elections may be held once in four years to abolish dispensaries in counties in which the sale of liquors is unlawful except through dispensaries.

Kentucky and Ohio have passed various laws relating to local option. Some 15 laws were passed in different states relating to liquor licenses. The new regulations and restrictions imposed relate to the sale of liquors to minors or limit the sale to certain localities.

The question of the regulation of the liquor traffic is not merely a question of public morals but involves sometimes the rights of property or the question of interstate commerce. In Alabama it has been declared unconstitutional to prohibit residents of other states from soliciting orders for spirituous liquors to be transported into the state on the ground of interfering with interstate commerce. Louisiana, on the other hand, has just enacted a law to prohibit and punish soliciting orders for liquor within prohibition districts in that state. In Texas a law of 1905 providing for the seizure of liquor in prohibition counties in the state has been declared unconstitutional. The decision recognized that intoxicating liquors kept for sale in violation of the law might be seized and condemned; but the court holds that intoxicating liquors, unlike gambling apparatus, may be owned and kept for a number of legitimate uses, and that the owner of such property can only be deprived of such possession by due process of some law.

Corrections

Nothing of fundamental importance has been enacted during the past year in relation to the penal institutions or corrective system of the different states. The word "correction" suggests rather an ideal than a realization. Our penal institutions reflect the spirit of the penal law which is punitive rather than corrective. The most important departure from the purely punitive method has been in the establishment in various states of a reformatory system not only for juveniles, but also for the younger adult offenders of both sexes. The movement of legislation in this respect goes slowly but steadily forward.

The great majority of laws affecting penal institutions relate to their relocation or improvement or to details of administration. Nothing important touching the jail system, one of the most defective features of our penal system, was passed during the year.

CHARITIES¹

WILLIAM BRADFORD BUCK, SUPERINTENDENT OF THE SEYBERT
INSTITUTION FOR POOR CHILDREN

The greater part of the legislation of 1906 dealing with charities may be grouped under two headings: state supervision and administration and dependent and delinquent children, though there also seemed to be some interest in and some attempt to improve the condition of dependent blind and deaf persons. In amount and importance, however, the legislation dealing with the subject of child saving and care was greatly in excess of that upon any other single topic. No less than 15 states and territories placed such laws on their statute books during the year, and in some instances a single state has two or more such acts to its credit. The phrase "to its credit" is used advisedly in view of the fact that a majority of these acts represent carefully considered action along lines already approved by experience in dealing with children, namely the development of the juvenile court and probation system and the work of placing children in family homes. The amount of such legislation each succeeding year makes evident the increasingly firm hold which these two methods of child saving and care have upon American charities. Particularly in the case of juvenile courts and probation legislation they indicate a willingness to adopt new methods which are based on sound principles and have demonstrated their usefulness — a tendency which is a tangible expression of the common feeling that child saving is perhaps the most hopeful field of charitable effort.

In the field of supervision and administration the tendency to establish state boards of control to manage the charitable institutions of the state, which has been observable for some years, particularly in the Middle West, is still alive if we may judge by the only statute of importance on that subject during the year. This law places Kentucky in the column of states having that form of management for its state charitable institutions. In this instance the primary purpose of the law is obviously to secure greater coordination and better adjustment in the management of the state's charities, while the purpose of providing suitable supervision seems secondary. In this respect the tendency toward boards of control in these states is based on the sound business principle that a number of institutions of a similar kind, established for similar purposes, can be managed more efficiently and harmoniously by a central board than by several boards working independently and sometimes antagonistically to each other. The need of independent supervision of such management whether central or divided, which is felt strongly in the Eastern States, is not yet so well recognized in the Mississippi valley. Nor are the disadvantages of centralized management, particularly the loss of the volunteer services of public-spirited citizens, keenly felt as yet in those states which have adopted the system of control by a single board.

Supervision and administration. The amount of legislation in this field during the year was not large, but throughout it may be observed a persistence of the movement toward closer, more harmonious and better adjusted management of the charitable institutions of a given state, in short a tendency toward greater centralization. A number of states, notably in the Middle West, have adopted the plan of giving over the entire management and control of their charitable institutions to a central board composed of a small number of salaried officers. Other states, New York for example, have centralized the financial management of their institutions with the same end in view. In a number of states, conferences of the superintendents of state institutions are held at regular intervals to discuss matters of common interest, to adopt uniform methods of work, and in some cases to arrange joint purchases of supplies. Ohio gave legislative sanction to the same idea during the past year by an act which permits the State Board of Charities to call such conferences at its discretion. The value of these conferences has been demonstrated in the states where they have been held heretofore, and Ohio experience should be similar if the plan is equally well carried out in that state. Maryland adopted an original method for securing greater centralization by authorizing the Governor to send delegates to meetings of the boards of managers of those institutions which receive assistance from the state. This act places in the Governor's hands an instrument for reaching and influencing the boards of managers which might be open to serious abuse in the hands of an ignorant or unscrupulous executive, but which, in good hands, may be made to serve a useful purpose in bringing about greater cooperation and better adjustment among the institutions of the state.

Kentucky is the latest state to go on record in favor of the board of control idea. The act signed by the Governor is similar to the Iowa law but applies only to institutions for the insane and feeble-minded, which are placed under the management of a board of three members, appointed by the Governor for a term of four years each, at a salary of $2500 a year. The board is given the appointment and removal for cause of the superintendents and stewards of state institutions and the right to make rules for the government of such institutions. The new Board of Control supersedes the various boards of managers of each state institution, these boards being abolished and their powers vested in the central Board of Control. Attempt is made in this act, as in similar laws in a number of the Middle States, to ride the two horses of supervision and management at the same time, and the new board is given most of the supervisory functions and powers of the New York State Board of Charities, the Kentucky statute being modeled after the New York law so far as these sections are concerned. In their supervisory capacity the members of the board will visit and inspect the institutions of which they are themselves the managers, and under these circumstances it should not be difficult for them to find their own work as managers deserving of their highest commendation as supervisors.

In an act adding a seventh member to its board of trustees for the charitable institutions of the state, Arkansas expressly sanctions and continues the objectionable practice of changing the entire personnel of the board every two years, as authorized in the original act.

Juvenile courts and juvenile probation. The amount of legislation dealing with the various phases of juvenile delinquency is much less in 1906 than in the preceding year. There were some amendments to existing laws on this subject but only two or three original acts. One state, Kentucky, made provision for the punishment of parents or other persons who "knowingly encourage, aid, cause, abet, or connive at delinquency" in children, as against eight such statutes in 1905. The Kentucky statute covers dependency as well, and supplements a general act with reference to the care, treatment and control of delinquent, neglected and dependent children in this state. The latter statute follows the Colorado law and similar acts in other states in many of its provisions. It defines delinquency and dependency in children and provides for a juvenile record and docket in the county courts of the state and for the appointment of probation officers by these courts; defines carefully the procedure to be followed in considering and disposing of cases; and provides for a board of county visitors to institutions and societies receiving children under its terms. While separate sessions of the court for the purpose of hearing cases involving the care of children are not specifically required by the terms of the act, they are implied therein, and, it is to be hoped, will be adopted. The purpose of the statute is admirably stated in section 10 which reads:

“This act shall be liberally construed, to the end that its purpose may be carried out, to wit: That the care, custody and discipline of a child shall approximate as nearly as may be that which should be given by its parents, and in all cases where it can be properly done, the child be placed in an approved family home with people of the same religious belief, and become a member of the family by legal adoption or otherwise.”

Similar acts were adopted by Louisiana and Massachusetts, the latter, contrary to its custom where progression measures are concerned, being one of the last states to adopt the Juvenile Court idea. The Louisiana statute is modeled after that of Pennsylvania, which has worked very unsatisfactorily up to this time. It gives the city and district courts outside of New Orleans jurisdiction over juvenile offenders, but does not specifically provide for separate hearings. It does not require detention apart from adult offenders and contains the usual provision for unpaid probation officers. As in the case of the Pennsylvania law, the act is loosely drawn, and affords opportunity for badly managed courts and houses of detention.

The Massachusetts act just mentioned gives jurisdiction to the police, district or municipal courts, and requires both separate sessions of the court for children's cases and detention apart from adults. A distinguishing feature of the Massachusetts statute is a clause giving the State Board of Charities supervision of probation work. A special act also provides for a Juvenile Court for the city of Boston with salaried probation officers and deputy probation officers without pay. This act is somewhat unique in that it creates a new municipal court presided over by a judge appointed solely for this court, instead of providing for a separate session of an existing court to be presided over by the regular judge or judges of that court. While the act in placing the full responsibility upon a single judge makes the usefulness of the court depend almost entirely upon the personality of this one man, yet its wisdom will be appreciated by those who have observed the lack of continuity in those Juvenile Courts where the presiding justices rotate, or the lack of privacy in so called Juvenile Courts which are in no respect different from regular Police Courts save in the age of the person on trial.

By an important amendment to an existing general statute of Ohio relative to dependent and delinquent children, dependency and delinquency are defined more at length along the lines of the Colorado law. The act further provides salaries for probation officers, raises from 16 to 17 the age of children affected thereby, and makes abandonment by parents or responsibility for delinquency or dependency a misdemeanor.

The Michigan Juvenile Court act of 1905 has been held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of that state because of a provision of the act which gives Circuit Court commissioners jurisdiction over delinquent children in counties having more than 25,000 and less than 100,000 population. The court held that the act extended the constitutional powers of the Circuit Court commissioners which are limited to those of a circuit judge in chambers.

Other states and territories might well follow the example of Maryland in appointing a commission to revise the laws of the state relative to the care of minors, to Juvenile Courts, the probation system and detention homes. The commission consists of five members to serve for two years and report in 1908. In many of the states there is confusion in these enactments, which usually spread over a term of years and contain much obsolete matter. There are likely to be omissions and superfluities which need correction as well as new methods of work requiring additional legislative sanction.

An act of Congress approved March 19, 1906, establishes a Juvenile Court for the District of Columbia after the plan of the Boston Juvenile Court. The presiding judge is appointed by the President for a term of six years and he may appoint two salaried probation officers. This act contains the usual provisions of Juvenile Court statutes in other respects and was adopted as a result of local efforts supported by the friends of the Juvenile Court principle throughout the country.

Protection and care of children. In Massachusetts hereafter, no child under 17 may be admitted to a dance hall or roller skating rink between 6 p. m. and 6 a. m. unless accompanied by a parent or some other adult person. The prohibition does not apply to church, charitable or school entertainments.

In Iowa three acts dealing with the subject of placing children in family homes became laws. These laws authorized the superintendents of the State Industrial and Soldiers' Orphans Homes to place in families of good standing and character, orphaned and abandoned children, and also children whose home surroundings would be vicious if they were returned to their parents. Adoption or merely a contract agreement is permitted. Provision is made for the appointment of not more than two placing-out agents by the State Board of Control, which is also empowered to fix their salaries. The agents are likewise to act as parole officers for children so discharged from the State Industrial School. These acts in effect establish the Michigan system of child care, and if wisely carried out should prove as satisfactory as that has proved. Their usefulness depends on the character and ability of the state agents, as the laws do not outline, define or stipulate either methods or principles of work.

A stringent law on the model of a New York statute has been adopted by the Maryland Legislature for the purpose of regulating baby farming in Baltimore. No midwife or institution except one duly incorporated for the purpose of caring for children may hereafter receive infants unless leave from the board of health is secured. Violation of the act is a misdemeanor. The law is stringent in its provisions but so carelessly drawn as to leave many loopholes.

An Ohio enactment provides for the establishment of a state institution for the care and education of crippled and deformed children, and a preliminary appropriation of $50,000 is for the purpose of securing a site and plans for the institution.

The deaf, dumb and blind. The interesting experiment of providing day schools for persons of defective hearing in connection with the public school system of the state, which has been tried in Illinois and one or two other states, is now to be undertaken in Ohio. Schools may be organized in any school district for three or more pupils, and the sum of $150 per pupil may be collected from the common school funds of the state. In Virginia, a state school having two distinct departments, one for deaf and dumb, and one for blind children of the colored race, is provided for in a special act. The act carries no appropriation, however, and it is difficult to see how much progress is to be made with the enterprise before another Legislature meets and makes an appropriation. A Maryland act extends the provisions of the compulsory education law to blind children.

Three different eastern states have provided commissions with reference to the adult blind. In Maryland and New York these commissions are to be appointed to investigate the condition of the adult blind, and to report on the expediency of establishing institutions for their care and training. The acts provide also for complete registers of the blind in each state.

The New York act is in substance and effect very similar to a statute enacted in 1904. The commission appointed under that act prepared a partial register of the blind and made a preliminary report recommending the establishment of industrial shops in the large cities of the state. No action has been taken upon the recommendation of this commission up to this time, however, and the second commission is doubtless established for the purpose of completing the work done in the first instance. The act carries with it an appropriation of $5000. The Maryland law contains similar provisions to those of the New York statute and in addition authorizes the commission to aid the blind with implements, materials and tools to an amount not exceeding $50 to any one individual and to place indigent blind women in homes at an expense not to exceed $200 a year for each person. The Maryland commission has two years in which to work and is given an appropriation of $1500 a year. The Massachusetts act provides for a permanent commission for the blind, consisting of five persons appointed by the Governor, to serve for terms of five years each. This commission is the outgrowth of a temporary investigating commission which was appointed some years ago. The permanent commission established by the present act is authorized to maintain a register of all the blind in the state, to support a bureau of information and industrial aid, to furnish material and tools, to establish one or more schools for industrial training, and to devise means for the sale and distribution of the products of schools and workshops. The commission may also provide temporary lodgings and support for persons working in shops or schools for the blind, and devise means to facilitate the circulation of books, but is not permitted to undertake the permanent support or maintenance of any blind person. An appropriation of $20,000 is made for the work of the commission, but the members serve without any compensation other than their necessary traveling expenses.

In comparison with the preceding year, the legislation of 1906 dealing with charities is not large in amount or of very great importance, but for the most part it may be said to proceed along approved lines and in one or two instances to represent an advance either in methods of care or in public information with regard to those methods. The amazing lack of uniformity in the enactments of the different states, representing as it does a corresponding divergence in systems of care, in principles and methods of work, in point of view, and in the differing degrees of development of our American charitable institutions, is as striking as ever to an observer of the year's grist of legislation. In view of this diversity the fact that there is friction and maladjustment at the points where the charities of one state are in contact with those of another ceases to be noteworthy. The surprising fact is that the friction is so comparatively slight.

THE INSANE¹

T. E. MCGARR, SECRETARY NEW YORK STATE COMMISSION IN LUNACY

Kentucky ('06 ch.18) establishes in pursuance of the recommendations of Governor Beckham a State Board of Control for charitable institutions consisting of three members who serve for four years. Each member receives an annual salary of $2500 and traveling expenses. The board holds regular meetings at each of the institutions under its control at least once in each month and makes a minute and thorough examination of the affairs, management, property, clothing, food supplies, condition of buildings and grounds and the conduct of each and every official and employee of said institution, "of which they shall make a complete record together with such rules and regulations as they may give." The board is empowered to appoint at each of the three insane asylums a medical superintendent, first, second and third assistant physician, also a steward, and to appoint similar officers at the feeble-minded institute. The statute fixes the term of the medical officers as four years. The board is authorized to embrace all of the asylums in its purchase of supplies for the same or to purchase supplies for each asylum separately as it may prefer. All purchases exceeding $1000 must be made under competitive proposals. The salary of each hospital superintendent is made $2000 a year — a remarkably low stipend.

Massachusetts ('06 ch.313) changes the title of the Northampton Insane Hospital to "Northampton State Hospital," thus following the lead of other states which have omitted the word "insane" from the titles of state institutions for the care and treatment of the insane. Arkansas ('05 ch.15) changes the title of the Arkansas State Lunatic Asylum to the "State Hospital for Nervous Diseases," which is permitting the pendulum to swing a little too far away from lunatic asylum nomenclature.

New York ('06 ch.107) provides that any religious body, missionary corporation or society may erect a building on the grounds of any state hospital for holding religious services, to be used exclusively for the benefit of the inmates and employees of the said hospital, subject to such conditions as may be imposed by the State Commission in Lunacy. These chapels are designed for the accommodation of employees as well as patients under treatment in the state hospitals.

New York ('06 ch.284) increases the limit of cost of buildings on the grounds of the state hospitals which may be designed for the strictly acute and curable class to $1000 per capita.

New Jersey ('06 ch.272) relieves the boards of managers of the state hospitals of the duty and responsibility of visiting and inspecting all private institutions and lodges with the State Department of Charities and Corrections the duty of licensing these private sanatoriums after they have been inspected and shown to be appropriate institutions for such license. The fee for this license, $25 a year, is to be paid to the Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, who transmits it to the state treasury.

New Jersey ('06 ch.324) outlines the procedure to be followed in the commitment of the insane. The statute makes the following persons liable for the support of insane relatives committed to state institutions: father, grandfather, mother, grandmother, and the children and grandchildren. New York ('06 ch.181) amends the statute regarding the filing of reports of committees of lunatics by providing that in addition to the filing of committee reports annually with the clerk of the court by which the committee was appointed he shall file a duplicate of "such inventory, account and affidavit with the superintendent or officer having special jurisdiction over the institution where the incompetent is confined." Massachusetts ('06 ch.418) further specifies the qualifications of physicians who desire to become examiners in lunacy and safeguards the rights of the insane patient in the matter of commitment. New Jersey ('06 ch.308) provides that in future commitments of the public insane the county physician of the county from which the patient is committed must be one of the examining physicians.

Virginia ('06 ch.115) provides that no citizen of Virginia whose estate is of less value than $2000 shall be subjected to any charge for his maintenance while in a state institution. If the estate is "less than the amount sufficient to support his or her family (where said family is primarily dependent upon such insane person for support) he must be maintained at the expense of the state." The statute authorizes the Governor to select an agent to enforce the collection of the claims of the state hospitals for the maintenance of insane patients in cases where the patient's estate is worth over $2000 or where the estate is not required for the maintenance of the patient's family. Such agent is to receive 5% of the money actually paid into the state treasury.

Governors recommendations

Governor Herrick of Ohio recommends the establishment of a new hospital for the insane. This state has faced the necessity which other states appear slow to realize of establishing new institutions for the insane and other defectives at practically regular intervals. In this way only can a comprehensive and easily adjusted system of caring for the insane be provided. By the establishment of institutions in various parts of the state proximity to relatives is insured and convenience of visitation provided.

Governor Montague of Virginia criticizes the niggardliness of the commonwealth in fixing the compensation of the superintendents and other officers of the hospitals for the insane of Virginia. He states: "We can no longer retain our best men nor hope to fill vacancies by good ones at the present rate of pay." The salary of the medical superintendents of state hospitals is $2000 which from a northern point of view appears too small. Governor Montague also recommends that the statute permitting the care in the custody of relatives or friends of insane persons at the expense of the state should be repealed and recommends that the insane be committed directly to state hospitals. He expresses the opinion that the policy of officially placing the insane in the care of relatives or individuals without state or local supervision is unwise and too susceptible of abuse, a statement which certainly can not be gainsaid.

LEGISLATION BULLETIN 33d

PUBLIC HEALTH AND SAFETY¹

C. E. A. WINSLOW, ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF BIOLOGY, MASSACHUSETTS INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY

General supervision. The only commonwealths which modified the powers of their State Boards of Health in any important respect during 1906 were Louisiana and Mississippi. In the former state the Board of Health was authorized ('06 ch. 98) to revise the sanitary code and "to incorporate therein rules and regulations governing the manufacture, sale and inspection of foods, liquors, waters and drugs," "in so far as the same may affect the public health," and to provide for the establishment of a laboratory for the analysis of these substances. The power further to amend and revise the sanitary code in the future is conferred upon the board; and the president of the board is required to make an annual report of its operations to the Governor. In Mississippi ('06 ch.112) the State Board of Health was directed to prepare regulations for the disinfection and sanitation of public buildings, railroad depots and railway coaches and sleeping cars and for the improvement and amelioration of their hygienic and sanitary condition; and penalties were provided for failure to comply with the rules of the board.

Legislation dealing with the organization of local sanitary authorities was more widespread and important. In New Jersey ('06 ch.131) and Ohio ('06 p.205) acts were passed providing for annual conferences of local boards of health, the expenses of one delegate to be paid by each board. South Carolina ('06 ch.82) provided for the organization of local boards of health, in unincorporated towns and villages of over 100 inhabitants, to be appointed by the executive committee of the state board on application by one quarter of the electors. No expert assistance is provided; and even in cities and towns of from 5 to 10 thousand population another act passed by the same Legislature ('06 ch.63) only authorized the appointment of one of the city or town policemen to act as health officer. The important problem is to secure not merely the formal organization of health boards but the services of expert sanitarians; and this end is very difficult to attain in small communities. A significant step toward the solution of this problem was taken in New Jersey ('06 ch.129) by the provision that adjacent townships or municipalities may join in employing a health officer. County sanitary organization offers another way out of the difficulty, a course pursued by New York in providing a bacteriologist for the county of Ontario ('06 ch.271).

Vital statistics. The year 1906 marked very few changes in the laws relating to vital statistics, the only important legislation being in Iowa and Maryland. In Iowa the whole system of collecting statistics was recast. Under the earlier law ('04 ch.100) statistics were collected by local health officers and forwarded by them to the State Board of Health, which acted as a central bureau. The new act ('06 ch. 109) makes the secretary of the state board, Registrar of Vital Statistics. $2500 is appropriated for office expenses, of which $300 may be applied to increasing the salary of the secretary. The registrar is to furnish blank certificates to physicians and undertakers, who shall file them with him on the fifth of each month. The gain in thus centralizing responsibility upon a single state officer is somewhat offset by the necessary repeal of the regulation requiring a permit for burial. It is provided, however, that the certificate of death must be exhibited before interment or transportation of dead bodies, and considerable penalties are provided for violations of the law. Records of births are to be furnished by assessors to the clerks of the district courts, who shall report them with the records of marriages and divorces to the State Registrar. Such a centralized system as created by this act is obviously to be preferred to the work of a number of inefficient local boards. On the other hand, a good local board can collect statistics with more completeness than a state authority of the same grade. Certain advantages of both general and local organization seem to be combined in the ingenious law enacted in Maryland ('06 ch.124). This provides that if the state board suspects the accuracy of the work of any local registrar it may take charge of the local office and operate it for three months. If the registration during that time exceeds by 10% the registration for the corresponding three months of the preceding year the local board must pay the expenses incurred; if not the cost is borne by the state board.

License to practise. The only important addition to the laws regulating the practice of medicine, not previously noted in this bulletin, was a law passed in Arkansas ('05 ch.286) providing for the revocation of the license of any physician or surgeon upon proof submitted to the State Board of Examiners that such physician is rendered unfit for the exercise of his profession by habitual indulgence in alcohol, opium, cocaine or any similar agent. The California law providing that a physician's certificate may be revoked for "all advertising of medical business in which grossly improbable statements are made" (Cal. '01 ch. 51) has been declared unconstitutional as depending on a "vague, uncertain and indefinite provision" (Hewitt v. Bd of Medical Examiners 84 P. 39).

Minor changes in the laws governing the registration of dentists were made in several states. In Louisiana ('06 ch.57) and Virginia ('06 ch.154) it was provided that the acts regulating dentistry should not prohibit the clinical work of students carried out in recognized dental schools under the supervision of their instructors.

Legislation in regard to the registration of pharmacists was more considerable in amount. The law was strengthened in minor details in Kentucky ('06 ch.140), Maryland ('06 ch.585) and Ohio ('06 p.207), and in some important respects in Iowa. The latter state ('06 ch.115) repealed an earlier provision permitting graduates from the State University or from a school of similar grade to be registered without examination. All applicants must now be examined; and before taking the examination, four years of practical experience as clerk in a drug store under a registered pharmacist, or the completion of a course of at least two years at a reputable pharmaceutical school or college is required. In Massachusetts ('06 ch.120) new provisions were made for the registration of pharmacists who have passed examinations in other states which require a similar degree of competency. An important decision was rendered in Vermont which prevents certain exemptions from the general pharmacy laws. The existing law ('02 ch.112) in prohibiting the sale of drugs, chemicals and poisons except by a licensed pharmacist, expressly exempted dealers in general merchandise and the widows or administrators of deceased registered pharmacists. The court declared that this discrimination, being not based on any difference relating to the safety of the public, was class legislation and could not be sustained. Finally, the national Congress enacted a pharmacy law for the District of Columbia (U. S. '05-'06 ch. 148) even more complete than the many elaborate laws of this type passed by several of the states in preceding years. The act provides for the creation of a board of five pharmaceutical examiners to be represented upon the Board of Medical Supervisors (to be known as the Board of Supervisors in Medicine and Pharmacy). Candidates for the practice of pharmacy, except those now registered under the previous act of 1878, must have had four years' experience in the practice of pharmacy or have served three years under the instruction of a licensed pharmacist or have graduated from a recognized school or college of pharmacy, and must pass an examination and pay a fee of $10. Pharmacists intending to dispense homeopathic remedies are to be examined and licensed separately. Registered pharmacists from other parts of the United States and foreign countries are licensed without examination if standards are of equal value and if the state or country concerned accords reciprocal recognition to licentiates of the District. Licenses may be revoked for the usual causes. The dispensing of drugs by physicians is permitted; and special permits are provided for dealers in poisonous substances to be used exclusively in the arts or as insecticides. Proprietary remedies and certain chemicals commonly used in the household are specifically exempted from the operation of the act. The sale of poisons is guarded by an elaborate series of restrictions, limiting the dispensing of certain of them to the physician's prescription, forbidding the sale of others to minors or to habitual users and regulating the proper labeling of poisons.

Communicable diseases. The laws relating to the control of the contagious diseases were notably strengthened in Massachusetts and New Jersey. In Massachusetts, the act relating to the establishment of contagious disease hospitals was revised so as to permit the isolation of such diseases to be carried out in a hospital jointly maintained by two or more cities and towns ('06 ch. 365). Another act ('06 ch. 225) provided for compensation to a wage earner isolated on account of contagious disease, such compensation to equal three fourths of his regular wages, up to $2 for each working day. A third act ('06 ch. 371) extends the law excluding from school children who have been exposed to infection with smallpox, diphtheria, scarlet fever and measles to any other infectious or contagious disease. In New Jersey the vaccination law was reinforced to permit the exclusion of teachers or pupils who have not been "successfully vaccinated or revaccinated" instead of "duly vaccinated" (as it read before), and by providing that certificates of exemption must be signed by the medical inspector in districts where such an office exists (N. J. '06 ch. 104).

The quarantine against yellow fever was taken over by the national government in 1906 in an act (U. S. '05-'06 ch.243) empowering the Secretary of the Treasury to select quarantine stations on or near the coast line of the United States where infected vessels may be detained and disinfected, and to place the same in the charge of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service. $500,000 was appropriated "for the purpose generally of preventing the importation of yellow fever and other quarantinable diseases into the United States, and for the further purposes, in cooperation with state or municipal health authorities, of eradicating them should they be imported, of preventing their spread from one state into another state, and of destroying their causes." The Secretary of the Treasury was authorized to negotiate the acquisition for the purposes of this act of local quarantine stations already established; and the transfer of the Louisiana station has been already authorized ('06 ch.203).

Special diseases. Legislation in regard to special communicable diseases was not of great importance in 1906. Georgia ('06 p.112) directed the State Board of Health to manufacture and distribute free antirabic virus, a progressive measure, which has been adopted by few Legislatures as yet. Rhode Island appropriated two sums of $1500 each for the study of the cause and control of diphtheria and tuberculosis respectively. In Mississippi the new science of yellow fever control was recognized in two acts. The first ('06 ch.113) empowered the Board of Supervisors to appropriate money "for screening cisterns and other water containers and fumigating and disinfecting houses where yellow fever existed; or to prevent the introduction of yellow fever by distributing coal oil where stagnant water may be found," whenever such action is deemed necessary by a county health officer. The second act ('06 ch.130) authorized the appointment by the Governor of a field officer of the State Board of Health at a salary of $2500 with $1000 more for expenses. His duty is to be to visit all places on the coast where yellow fever may appear and to report thereon to the Board of Health.

A considerable number of new laws as usual dealt with the establishment and maintenance of hospitals for consumptives. In Iowa ('06 ch.120) and Maryland ('06 ch.308) state sanatoria were created during the year. The Iowa act establishes in some detail the conditions for admission, the charges for treatment of those able to pay, etc. The institution is to be under the charge of a superintendent, at a salary not to exceed $2500, who is responsible to the Board of Control of State Institutions. $50,000 is appropriated for purchase of land and construction, and $4000 a month is to be credited for running expenses to be drawn on at the rate of $20 a patient. In Maryland the control of the sanatorium is vested in a board of managers, three holding office ex officio and six appointed by the Governor. $100,000 is appropriated for land and buildings and $15,000 a year for maintenance. Governor Warfield suggested other important measures of control, including the establishment of dispensaries and the development of a system of district nursing. In Massachusetts a resolution was passed creating an unpaid commission to investigate the extent of tuberculosis in the state, the advisability of the care of tuberculous persons by the state, the probable cost of such an undertaking, and the best sites for the erection of new hospitals. $5000 was appropriated for the investigation (Mass. '06 r.102). In Kentucky Governor Beckham advised the establishment of a state sanatorium; but the Legislature pursued another line by passing a bill ('06 ch.53) which provided for the erection of local sanatoria. In every county containing a city of the first class the mayor of the city is required to appoint a board of 10 persons having power to erect and maintain a tuberculosis hospital as may seem to them best, the expenses to be met from county and city taxes.

In connection with the subject of tuberculosis, reference may be made to the antispitting ordinances adopted by Massachusetts ('06 ch.165) and Virginia ('06 ch.302). Both laws prohibited expectoration on sidewalks and on the floor of public buildings, steamboats or railway cars. The Massachusetts law specifically exempted smoking cars, while the Virginia Legislature evidently held that decency and hygiene are desirable even in smoking cars and therefore required railroad and steamboat companies to provide an adequate supply of spittoons for smokers.

Practice of embalming and undertaking. Only a single measure passed in 1906 dealt with the disposal of the dead, an act providing for the registration of undertakers and embalmers in New Jersey ('06 ch.219). The act provides for a board of five members which shall conduct examinations and issue licenses to candidates of 21 years of age who shall have obtained a grammar school education and have served a two year apprenticeship with a reputable funeral director, and who shall show a sufficient knowledge of questions that pertain to "the embalming, burial and disposal of dead human bodies, and to the shipment of bodies dying of contagious or infectious diseases, or any other cause whatsoever, in accordance with the rules and regulations of the State Board of Health."

Mosquito control. Besides the Mississippi laws relating to yellow fever above referred to, New Jersey and New York passed statutes bearing on the mosquito problem. New Jersey two years ago ('04 ch.119) specified "water in which mosquito larvae breed" as a nuisance to be abated by local boards of health. A year ago ('05 ch.80) the director of the Agricultural Experiment Station was authorized to investigate the breeding places of mosquitos on the request of the towns involved, and the state agreed to pay one fourth of the cost of abating the nuisance up to $500, in the case of salt marches. This year a more comprehensive law was enacted ('06 ch.134). It required the director of the Agricultural Experiment Station to survey and prepare maps of all salt marsh areas and of fresh-water swamps as requested by local boards of health, locating the mosquito-breeding areas. All salt marsh areas breeding mosquitos are to be reported by the director to the local board of health, which must notify the owner of the land to abate the nuisance and in case of his failure must proceed with the abatement itself. If the municipality has no funds available for this purpose the director at his discretion may pay all expenses and if the municipality appropriates half of the necessary sum he must contribute the residue. In the case of fresh-water breeding places the director must make a full report to the local board of health as to the extent of the danger and nuisance involved and the cost of remedial measures; if the cost of abatement equals or exceeds the value of the land without increasing its taxable value the state may contribute half the cost up to $500 for each municipality. The aggregate sum to be used for the purposes of this act is limited to $350,000. The New York law ('06 ch.583), though less far-reaching, is also a very helpful one. It provides that a local board of health may declare an accumulation of water where mosquitos may breed to be a nuisance and arranges that the cost shall be borne jointly or severally by the owner of the property, by the municipality or by the owners of adjacent property benefited by the improvement, according to the discretion of the board. In case of assessment upon local property owners, other than the owner of the property where the nuisance exists, a commission is to be appointed by the local courts to carry out the work and to assess and collect the costs. A Massachusetts law, apparently relating to water pollution ('06 ch.529) should really be considered under this head. It provides for the improvement of the Mystic river valley in the vicinity of Alewife brook in accordance with a recent report of the State Board of Health (under Mass. '04 ch.445) and the plan as recommended by the state board was essentially one of drainage of swamp lands to abolish mosquito-breeding marshes. The sum of $100,000 is to be expended in the work, the expense being divided among four adjoining cities and towns.

Pollution of water. Louisiana has had upon its statute books in relation to water pollution, only a prohibition of the discharge of material likely to obstruct navigation; but in 1906 this state joined those which have taken specific steps to protect water supplies from pollution. The new law makes it a misdemeanor for a person to "knowingly and wilfully" contaminate, or to allow contaminating substances from his premises to enter any public water supply (La. '06 ch.213).

In New York special commissions were created for the study of pollution in the Bronx river and of methods for its prevention ('06 ch.669), and for the study of the pollution of New York bay ('06 ch.639). The second piece of work is an important one, and provides for the continuance of an investigation begun under an earlier act ('03 ch.539); it contemplates a study of the present and future sanitary condition of the waters adjacent to New York city and the best methods of improving and protecting their purity, including the desirability of a comprehensive plan of sewerage and sewage disposal for the metropolitan district. $15,000 is to be raised for the expenses of the commission by the issuance of corporate stock of the city of New York; and a final report is to be submitted in 1909. New Jersey is to be asked to cooperate in the investigation. No action was taken by the New Jersey Legislature upon this matter in 1906; but the State Sewerage Commission was directed (N. J. '06 p.740) to confer with the proper authorities of Pennsylvania and New York in regard to the purification of the Delaware river.

Smoke nuisance. The smoke nuisance was not dealt with in 1906; but President Roosevelt pointed out that the Washington law had been sustained by the courts and urged that it be made more stringent by increasing the fine, and by providing for imprisonment of persons and injunction against the operation of plants, in the case of persistent offenders.

Buildings: sanitation and safety. Legislation bearing on building construction related, for the most part, to details which are not of general interest. In Massachusetts ('06 ch.340) an act was passed recasting the section of the law passed in 1892 ('92 ch.419), which controls building construction in the city of Boston. The new section deals with strength of materials and covers timber, wrought iron and steel, cast iron, stonework, brickwork and concrete. Three acts of Congress regulated buildings in the District of Columbia. The first ('05-'06 ch.138) created a board consisting of the health officer, the building inspector and the assistant to the Engineer Commissioner in Charge of Buildings with power to condemn insanitary buildings. The second (U. S. '05-'06 ch.259) authorized the establishment of a uniform building line on streets less than 90 feet in width. The third (U. S. '05-'06 ch.53) required the erection of fire escapes in certain buildings. In Louisiana a law was passed authorizing the establishment of fire limits and the regulation of construction within them in all cities of over 1000 inhabitants except in New Orleans ('06 ch.91).

An important step in relation to plumbing inspection was taken in Ohio by an amendment which relieves the Board of Health from supervising the location, construction and repair of water-closets, privies, cesspools, sinks, plumbing and drains in cities having a building department and placing the work where it belongs. Regulations prescribed by the council are, however, to be approved by the Board of Health ('06 p.188). The Health Board may still of course condemn and abate specific nuisances; but the general regulation of plumbing has only an indirect relation to the public health. The same fact lies at the bottom of a judicial decision rendered in Washington (State v. Smith 84 P. 851) which declared unconstitutional the law for the registration of plumbers passed in the preceding year (Wash. '05 ch.66). Mr Justice Rudkin in delivering the opinion of the court declared that the act had "no such relation to the public health as will sustain it as a police or sanitary measure, and that its interference with the liberty of the citizen brings it in direct conflict with the Constitution of the United States," and quoted freely from a dissenting opinion of Mr Justice Peckham in a similar case in New York (People v. Warden, etc.) and from the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, voiced by the same justice in the famous Baker case (Lochner v. N. Y.). How far the state may restrain the liberty of the individual in the protection of his health and the health of others is a large question which can not be considered as yet settled; but it is certainly a severe straining of the facts to compel the licensing of plumbers as a health measure.

Boilers and engineers. The subject of boiler inspection received much attention in Massachusetts, the Brockton explosion being still fresh in the minds of the legislators. Governor Guild pointed out in his message that there were 13,000 steam boilers in the state not inspected by any company, and four acts were passed strengthening the system of supervision. The boiler inspection department of the state police was fortified by the addition of five new members ('06 ch.522) and by the creation of the office of chief inspector ('06 ch.521). It was provided ('06 ch.387) that every steam boiler not examined by state inspectors or by representatives of authorized insurance companies, should be inspected once each year by the licensed engineer or foreman in charge, report being made to the chief of the district police.

Miscellaneous. Among miscellaneous measures dealing with the public safety one or two deserve brief mention. An important step was taken in Maryland ('06 ch.244) by the creation of a board to examine and license electricians in the city of Baltimore, broadly defined as persons "conducting or managing a business for installing any wires or electric apparatus to convey electrical current or be operated by such current." The board is to be appointed by the Governor from nominations presented by specified technical associations and has power, not only to examine applicants for license but also to draw up regulations for the installation and operation of electrical devices in the city. The conditions of licensing are severe. Applicants must be 21 years old, must have had three years' experience in electrical work, and must pay a fee of $25 and file a bond of $1000 to protect the owner in case of loss entailed by defective work. A rejected applicant may appeal to a board of arbitration. New Jersey enacted an elaborate law ('06 ch.91) of 30 sections (14 printed pages), regulating the use of power boats above tide water and providing for the licensing of vessels, their masters, pilots and engineers.

AGRICULTURE (GENERAL)¹

J. I. SCHULTE, UNITED STATES OFFICE OF EXPERIMENT STATIONS

In 1906, 11 states enacted laws relating to state departments of agriculture, farmers institutes, agricultural associations, fairs and weeds.

State departments. Georgia ('06 p.110) enacted a law increasing the salary of the Commissioner of Agriculture to $3000 a year. In Iowa ('06 ch.66) an amendment was passed by which each member present at the agricultural convention is entitled to but one vote and no proxies are recognized. This state also enacted an amendment ('06 ch.67) increasing the salary of the secretary of the State Agricultural Department from $1500 to $1800 a year.

The General Assembly of Kentucky ('06 ch.90) passed an act creating a State Board of Agriculture, Forestry and Immigration, consisting of nine members, viz, the Commissioner of Agriculture, Labor and Statistics, ex officio chairman, the director of the Kentucky Experiment Station, an ex officio member, and one intelligent, experienced and practical farmer from each of the Appellate Court districts in the state. It is provided that the Governor shall appoint as members of the board the director of the Experiment Station, together with seven members, one from each Appellate Court district. The director of the Experiment Station is reappointed by the Governor every four years, beginning with the first of January, 1908, and in case he resigns or is removed from the directorship of the station, his successor is appointed to fill his place on the board. Of the members first appointed from the Appellate Court districts, two serve until March 1, 1907, two until March 1, 1908, two until March 1, 1909, and one until March 1, 1910, and their successors are elected by the State Industrial Institute, also established by this act. The board is to meet at least every two months to consider general agriculture and other industrial interests of the state and to take necessary steps to carry out the provisions of this act. Five members constitute a quorum. It is the duty of the Commissioner of Agriculture, Labor and Statistics, with the approval of the board, to see that a farmers and industrial institute of at least two days' duration is held in each county annually for the instruction of the agricultural and industrial public. The county institutes are to select one or more crop reporters from each magisterial district in the county, who are to serve one year without pay, and also one or more delegates to represent the county at the State Industrial Institute. The initial arrangements for this institute are also to be made by the Commissioner of Agriculture, Labor and Statistics and it is to be held at a place agreed upon by the board during January and February of each year. The duration of the institute is to be at least three days and only county delegates are entitled to vote, each county having one vote. At the first state institute, to be held in 1907, two citizens are to be elected from the Appellate Court districts by delegates of these respective districts as members of the State Board of Agriculture, Forestry and Immigration for a period of four years, to fill the vacancies occurring at the expiration of the term of office of the two members appointed to serve until March 1, 1907, and each year thereafter the delegates to this institute from the respective appellate districts shall elect a member of the board for a term of four years to fill the vacancies which shall occur on the first of March of the same year. Vacancies occurring between elections are filled through appointment by the Governor, who has also the power of removing any member of the board for just cause. In addition to the duties specified the board is to aid the Commissioner of Agriculture, Labor and Statistics in the distribution of seed, collection of information concerning crops, and in the promulgation of industrial information generally. It is also to act as a Forestry Commission for the state and as an Immigration Committee. The Commissioner of Agriculture, Labor and Statistics may appoint a clerk and stenographers for the board, subject to the approval of the same. Among other duties of the commissioner are the annual preparation of a report on the state and county institutes, of which 25,000 copies are to be published in book form and distributed free as nearly as possible in proportion to the agricultural population of the several counties. The members of the board are to receive $5 a day and actual traveling expenses while attending the meetings of the board, such meetings not to aggregate more than 30 days a year. $25,000 a year is appropriated to carry out the provisions of this act.

Louisiana ('06 ch.201) passed an act authorizing the Commissioner of Agriculture and Immigration to use $700 of tag funds to pay for the services of the receiver and depositor of said funds, auditing and warrant clerk, and bookkeeper. By this law the secretary to the Commissioner of Agriculture is made receiver and depositor of said funds, auditing and warrant clerk, and disbursing officer, and his bond placed at $2000.

A Department of Agriculture and Immigration was created by an act of the Mississippi Legislature ('06 ch.102) and placed under the control of the Commissioner of Agriculture, Statistics and Immigration, his term of office being four years, beginning January 1, 1908. This office is to be filled through appointment by the Governor, who also fills vacancies by appointment. The commissioner is to take an oath of office, give a $5000 bond, and to have an office in the city of Jackson. His annual salary is $2400. The commissioner has the right to appoint a clerk at a salary not to exceed $1200 a year. The duties of the commissioner are the encouragement of the proper development of agriculture, horticulture and kindred industries, and for this purpose he shall foster the organization of agricultural clubs and associations, collect and publish agricultural and other industrial statistics, cause investigations to be made of diseases of crops and the value and cultivation of grasses, and inquire into the different branches of animal husbandry and of agricultural engineering, and also into the market conditions for cotton and cotton goods. The endeavors of the commissioner are not in any way to conflict with the Agricultural and Mechanical College and the Experiment Station, but rather to cooperate with these institutions. The commissioner is also to have collected specimens of wood suitable for manufacture and other purposes, and specimens of agricultural, mineral, phosphate and marl deposits of the state and have analyses made of such as may be deemed expedient. He is also to prepare a handbook of the state, setting forth its resources, and in this connection may call upon the heads of state departments and manufacturing concerns to supply data. By a joint resolution of both houses of the Legislature ('06 ch.103) the name of the department was changed to Department of Agriculture and Commerce.

In New York ('06 ch.29) an amendment was enacted in relation to joining causes of action for penalties incurred for violations of the agricultural law in a complaint. According to this amendment plaintiff may unite in the same complaint two or more causes of action belonging to 11 different categories set forth.

The General Assembly of Virginia ('06 ch.2) by an amendment increased the salary of the Commissioner of Agriculture and Immigration from $2000 to $2800 a year, and by an act ('06 ch.27) abolished the office of State Assayer and Chemist, created to analyze soils and assay ores and metals.

Farmers institutes. By an amendment the General Assembly of Ohio ('06 p.307) provided that instead of basing the amounts expended for farmers institutes on the population of the county there be drawn each year on the county treasurer, after the existence of one or more farmers institute societies and their compliance with the law have been certified, one order in favor of the president of the State Board of Agriculture for the sum of $125 and one in favor of the president of each such farmers institute society for a sum not to exceed $31.25 for the payment of necessary local expenses. The total annual sum paid out in any county is not to exceed $250 and the payment to any farmers institute society shall not exceed the expenses.

Associations and fairs. In Maryland ('06 ch.746) the law was amended to the effect that agricultural associations entitled to state aid are required to forward to the comptroller of the treasury a statement giving in detail the financial condition of the association for the year immediately preceding the application for the benefits to which such associations are entitled under the law. The Maryland General Assembly ('06 ch.387) further passed an amendment by which the executive board of the Maryland State Horticultural Society is to consist, in addition to the president, vice president and secretary of the society and the president or first vice president of the Peninsula Horticultural Society, of three members of the Maryland State Horticultural Society elected by the society, and that the existing board shall remain in office until the next regular election of the board. The annual appropriation of the society is increased by this amendment from $1000 to $2000. An amendment ('06 ch. 722) was also passed including poultry associations for the purpose of dealing in eggs, increase of poultry and other things connected with poultry farming in the law providing for the formation of corporations.

In Kentucky ('06 ch.99) an amendment was enacted including among the different lines of exhibits at the annual state fair, in addition to agricultural, mechanical, horticultural, dairying, forestry, poultry and live stock, also mineral and all other industrial interests of the state, and placing the management and control of the state fair in the hands of the State Board of Agriculture, Forestry and Immigration, which is given power to determine the time for holding said fair each year and may also receive bids for a site upon which to hold the fair and to determine its permanent location. It is provided that the city or county where the fair is proposed to be held for any year shall give security in the sum of $10,000 to indemnify and guarantee said board against any loss which may be sustained by it in holding the fair for that year. If at the close of the fair the board has on hand funds representing the profits of previous fairs held at that place these funds shall be applied to the payment of any loss sustained before the guarantors in the bond or other security become liable for any sum. After the board shall have determined upon a place for the permanent location of the fair, it is empowered to receive special donations of lands and other things of value for the benefit of the fair and to purchase grounds and erect buildings and make other necessary improvements out of any funds it may have on hand from donations or profits from holding fairs but not from the annual appropriation for the fair. Provision is also made for the disposal of such donations in case of discontinuance of the fair at that place. Heretofore the fair was under the management and control of the Kentucky Live Stock Breeders Association and this amendment makes provision for transferring the affairs and funds to the State Board of Agriculture, Forestry and Immigration and prescribes what is to be done with the unexpended funds the board may have on hand at the time of making the report required in the amendment. Any profits derived from the fair are to be used for succeeding fairs or for the purchasing and providing permanent grounds and buildings when permanently located by the state.

Mississippi ('06 ch.147) passed a law granting a conditional lease of the old Capitol and grounds to the Mississippi Industrial Exposition Company for state fair purposes.

Weeds. In Illinois court decisions declared unconstitutional the law ('03 p.87) authorizing the levy of assessments for destruction of noxious weeds against the owner of land in townships in which the board of town auditors has been abolished, on the ground that it imposes an unequal tax and one not based upon valuation.

An act was passed in Michigan ('05 special laws, ch.584) providing for the destruction of noxious weeds in the city of Detroit.

In Texas court decisions declared invalid the law ('01 ch.117) prohibiting companies from permitting Johnson grass or Russian thistles from going to seed on their right of way and providing a penalty in so far as it authorizes recovery of damages.

EXPERIMENT STATIONS AND INSPECTION¹

W. H. BEAL, OFFICE OF EXPERIMENT STATIONS, UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Experiment stations. The most important piece of legislation during 1906 affecting the agricultural experiment stations was the act of Congress of March 16, 1906, known as the Adams act (U. S. '05-'06 ch.47), which provides for "the more complete endowment and maintenance of agricultural experiment stations now established or which may hereafter be established in accordance with the act of Congress approved March 2, 1887" (known as the Hatch act). The Adams act provided for an appropriation of $5000 to each of the experiment stations for the year ending June 30, 1906, with an annual increase of $2000 thereafter for five years, making a total annual appropriation at the end of that period of $15,000, and thus doubling the amount provided by the Hatch act. The act provides that this fund shall be applied "only to paying the necessary expenses of conducting original researches or experiments bearing directly on the agricultural industry of the United States." The administration of the fund is placed in the hands of the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, and in his interpretation of the act the secretary holds that the fund provided can be used only for the more advanced scientific investigation relating to agriculture and that "accordingly, expenses for administration, care of buildings and grounds, insurance, office furniture and fittings, general maintenance of the station farm and animals, verification and demonstration experiments, compilations, farmers institute work, traveling, except as is immediately connected with original researches in progress under this act, and other general expenses for the maintenance of the experiment stations, are not to be charged to this fund."

Legislative action accepting the terms of this act and naming the beneficiaries under it was taken during the year in Georgia ('06 p.1161), Iowa ('06 ch.213), Louisiana ('06 ch.50), Maryland ('06 ch.217), Massachusetts ('06 ch.330), Mississippi ('06 ch.233), New Jersey ('06 ch.204), New York ('06 p.1900) and Rhode Island ('06 r.2).

During the year the General Assembly of Virginia passed an act appropriating $5000 "for the more complete endowment and maintenance of the Virginia State Agricultural Experiment Station." This act is of special importance as providing for the first direct state appropriation supplementing the federal appropriation for this station. The fund is to be used in harmony with the provisions of the Hatch act.

An act of importance in connection with the Arkansas Agricultural Experiment Station ('05 ch.231), passed in 1905 but not noted in the Review of Legislation for that year, is one which provides for a course of study in agricultural lines in connection with the experiment station, for the establishment and maintenance of substations in different parts of the state, defining certain lines of investigation, providing for the appointment of assistant veterinarians and for veterinary inspection for contagious and incurable diseases of stock, and appropriating $35,500 for the maintenance, improvement and development of the Arkansas Agricultural Experiment Station for the two years beginning April 1, 1905. Features of special interest in this act are (1) the fact that it confuses the proper functions of the experiment station with those of the agricultural college by providing for the establishment of courses of instruction in connection with the experiment station, and (2) the fixing in detail of the salaries of the employees of college and station without clearly defining the relation of these employees to the two institutions.

Commercial fertilizers. Legislation relating to fertilizers was limited during 1906 to amendments of the existing law in South Carolina ('06 ch.49, 96, 97), fixing the time within which analyses must be made at 40 days instead of three months as heretofore; making the inspection apply to cotton-seed meal as to other fertilizing materials; abolishing the imprisonment penalty and eliminating the provision for determining the agricultural value of fertilizers by field experiments, etc.; giving the board of trustees of Clemson College discretionary power to exempt such natural materials containing less than 1% of the constituent elements of plant food as may be deemed expedient; providing for the determination of available phosphoric acid instead of soluble and precipitated phosphoric acid; and numerous minor amendments. The amendments simplify the act somewhat and at the same time make it somewhat more comprehensive. It is still, however, very long and complicated. The fertilizer inspection under this law with its tonnage tax of 25 cents has been a source of large revenue to the Clemson Agricultural College, and under the clause providing for experiments to determine the agricultural value of fertilizers a certain proportion of this income has heretofore been available for the work of the agricultural experiment station.

Commercial feeding stuffs. Legislation on this subject during 1906 included the enactment of laws regulating the sale of concentrated commercial feeding stuffs by the Legislatures of Kentucky ('06 ch.48) and South Carolina ('06 ch.62) and the amendment of existing law in Louisiana ('06 ch.125). The Kentucky law follows in the main the usual lines of legislation on this subject, providing that the methods of analysis of the Association of Official Agricultural Chemists shall be used in the inspection, and making the director of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station responsible for the enforcement of the law. An inspection fee of 20 cents a ton is provided for. This act is not intended "to restrict or prohibit sales of concentrated commercial feeding stuff material in bulk to each other by importers, manufacturers or manipulators who mix concentrated commercial feeding stuffs for sale, or as preventing the free, unrestricted shipment of these articles in bulk to manufacturers or manipulators who mix concentrated commercial feeding stuffs for sale." The law is explicit and direct in its terms and should insure efficient inspection.

The South Carolina law also provides that the methods of analysis of the Association of Official Agricultural Chemists shall be used, and the board of trustees of Clemson Agricultural College is charged with the enforcement of the law. The materials exempted from inspection include "wheat bran, wheat middlings and wheat shorts, separated or mixed, and when not mixed with other substances, and whole seeds and grains and pure meals made from whole grains and seeds." A clause also specifically prohibits the adulteration of feeding stuffs with "foreign mineral or other substance or substances, such as rice hulls, or chaff, peanut shells, corn-cobs, oat hulls, or other similar materials of little or no feeding value, or with substances injurious to the health of domestic animals." This law is also simple and explicit in its provisions.

The Louisiana law was simplified by leaving out the long list of materials subject to inspection. It was also made more specific as regards the guaranty required.

Grain and grain products. Acts were passed during the year by the Legislatures of Louisiana ('06 ch.157) and Mississippi ('06 ch.140) to regulate the sale of mill products and cereals and defining the weights and contents of standard packages of these materials.

Paris green. The Legislature of New Jersey passed an act during the year providing for inspection of this substance by the director of the State Agricultural Experiment Station. The law fixes the following standard for paris green or any product analogous to it sold in the state: "First. It shall contain arsenic, in combination with copper, equivalent to not less than 50 per centum arsenious oxid. Second. It shall not contain arsenic in water-soluble forms equivalent to more than $3\frac{1}{2}$ per centum of arsenious oxid" ('06 ch.93).

Seeds. The legislation on this subject during the year was limited to an amendment of the Kentucky law of March 24, 1904, by the inclusion of timothy in the list of seeds subject to inspection ('06 ch.37).

HORTICULTURE: DISEASES AND PESTS¹

E. P. FELT D.SC., NEW YORK STATE ENTOMOLOGIST

The large number of laws relating to this subject and enacted within comparatively recent years appears to have met most of the necessities, judging from the relatively few amendments and additions made in 1906. Iowa ('06 ch.112) has amended the horticultural law and requires that nursery stock be inspected by the State Entomologist or an inspector duly approved by him, and insists upon a broader certificate, in that it covers dangerously injurious insects or plant diseases. The laws of Maryland ('06 ch.509) have been amended to make the duties and appropriations of the State Horticulturist coordinate with those of the State Entomologist and State Pathologist.

Gipsy and brown tail moths. The special legislation relating to these insects has been strengthened in minor details in Massachusetts ('06 ch.268) by giving the superintendent charged with this work power to make, subject to the approval of the Governor, rules and regulations governing all operations by cities, towns or individuals under the act, and designating additional stages of the insect which may be proceeded against. It is also prescribed that the percentage limit of expenditure for any city or town shall be exclusive of any reimbursement received from the commonwealth, and renders liable any person knowingly failing to comply with any of the rules or regulations issued by said superintendent. Rhode Island ('06 r.38) appropriated $5100 for work against these two insects and provided for the appointment of a commissioner, without salary, giving said commissioner or his agents authority to enter at all proper times on any land for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the resolution, the entire work being subject to the approval of the Governor.

Tobacco. The interests of the tobacco grower have been conserved in Kentucky ('06 ch.33) by the passage of an act making it a felony, punishable by not less than one or more than three years in the penitentiary, for any person to wilfully or unlawfully take or destroy on the premises of another tobacco plants growing in the bed.

Resume. The tendency in horticultural legislation, particularly that relating to the inspection of nursery stock, has been toward uniformity, though unfortunately not much has been accomplished. The regulations of the various states, even at the present time, vary in a manner most perplexing to nurserymen shipping stock over a considerable proportion of the United States. Repeated efforts have been made to secure uniformity through the national government, and it is hoped that within a few years this purpose will be accomplished.

The extensive depredations and spread of the gipsy and the brown tail moth in the New England States have resulted in the enactment of several laws, and Massachusetts in particular is making an earnest effort to keep the gipsy moth from spreading. The federal government, through its Bureau of Entomology, is cooperating with this commonwealth and also with Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Connecticut, where this pest has become established. The control of this insect is already a question of national importance. The federal government, cooperating with Massachusetts, has imported large numbers of beneficial parasites, but, while it is hoped that some of these will prove efficient natural checks, it will not do to rely too largely upon such agencies. No efforts should be spared to prevent the further spread of these insects, and residents of adjacent states should be deeply concerned in the matter and at least give every possible aid in the early detection of the insects before they have become firmly established in a locality. Adjacent states can hardly make provision for controlling these insects until there is imminent danger of their introduction, though influence may be brought to bear upon Congress and as a result liberal appropriations for fighting them obtained from the federal government.

DOMESTIC AND NOXIOUS ANIMALS¹

E. V. WILCOX PH.D., OFFICE OF EXPERIMENT STATIONS, UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Communicable diseases of animals

During the year under review much less attention than usual has been given to the subject of animal diseases by the state Legislatures: One of the chief difficulties which has been experienced in the control of infectious diseases is the payment of indemnities. Wherever indemnities have been offered to the extent of nearly the full value of the animal, it has been found that the operation of the law places an immense burden upon the funds of the state. On the other hand, if the position is taken that diseased animals are without value and should, therefore, properly be slaughtered by the state for the protection of other animals and without indemnity to the owner, opposition is at once met with from the owners of stock, and the consequent lack of cooperation between the authorities and stock owners makes it practically impossible to enforce such laws effectively.

The Governor of Rhode Island in his message to the Legislature stated that the money which had been appropriated for the payment of indemnity was not sufficient for this purpose if a thorough search was made for tuberculous cattle in the state. Even where the number of animals slaughtered and paid for out of the state funds was not large it was held that the payment of the indemnity is not accomplishing the purpose for which it was intended. The suggestion of the Governor was not carried out by the Legislature but an amendment was made to existing statutes (R. I. '06 ch.1354) whereby the State Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals may notify the State Board of Agriculture through their veterinarian or other official of the existence of tuberculosis in any part of the state. This amendment simply serves to make the notification of cases of tuberculosis more certain.

Indemnity. In Maryland ('06 ch.431) the law relating to the State Live Stock Sanitary Board was amended and made more specific with reference to the payment of indemnity. The amendment had reference to the slaughter of tuberculous animals after a diagnosis of the disease by physical symptoms or even after a tuberculin test. It is also found necessary in Mississippi ('06 ch.122) to provide more definitely for the payment of indemnities for glanderous horses and mules.

Importation. On account of the great interest shown by leading stockmen throughout the country in the improvement of their farm animals, it becomes an important matter to regulate the importation of breeding animals in order to prevent the introduction of dangerous diseases. In Iowa ('06 ch.170) this emergency has been well provided for by a law which requires a satisfactory certificate of inspection with all registered cattle imported into the state for dairy and breeding purposes.

Special animals. The continued spread of foul brood among bees in states where honey production is an important industry has caused a great deal of trouble among bee raisers and has brought about a necessity of legislation to control the disease. In Ohio ('06 p.55) an already existing act was amended giving the county commissioners more power in the appointment of bee inspectors and in supporting their actions. The effect of such laws is gradually becoming more beneficial as the bee raisers understand better the danger of the disease and the functions of the inspectors.

In 1902 a commission was appointed in Maryland for the study of cerebro-spinal meningitis in horses. Since cases of this disease are rare or almost unknown at the present time, and since other diseases of cattle and horses require the attention of a commission of this sort, an amendment was passed (Md. '06 ch.482) extending the term of the commission until 1908 and empowering them to carry on investigations of tuberculosis and other contagious diseases.

Noxious animals

Foxes. The payment of bounties on foxes has, in many instances, been found unsatisfactory, and in New Jersey an amendment to existing laws was passed (N. J. '06 ch.320) providing that bounties need not be paid in any county if the authorities do not so desire.

Domestic animals

As usual in legislation relating to the control of domestic animals, attention was chiefly directed during 1906 to the regulation of stray animals, the matter of ownership and dog taxes. The only matter in this connection worthy of special mention is the increased necessity of the control and supervision of pedigrees on registered stock. Unfortunately the plans made regarding pedigrees of registered stock of various breeds have not always been clearly substantiated and in many instances serious falsifications have been detected. All breeders recognize the importance of having the matter of pedigrees under complete control so that the ancestry of any registered animal can be determined without question. It has been found possible to regulate this matter through the cooperation of state authorities and the Bureau of Animal Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The registration and publication of pedigrees has received legislative attention in Iowa ('06 ch. 98). According to recent federal law the general supervision of studbooks has been placed under the control of the Bureau of Animal Industry. The legislators in Iowa recognizing this fact require that the owners or keepers of male animals intended for breeding purposes should keep such animals registered in a studbook recognized by the Bureau of Animal Industry and that the pedigree in each case must be passed upon by the federal and state authorities and shall serve as the only basis for the issuance of a certificate by the owner of the stock.

Dogs. Unimportant amendments to laws relating to the control of dogs have been found necessary in the laws of New Jersey ('06 ch.259), New York ('06 ch.212), Ohio ('06 p.87) and South Carolina ('06 ch.12), while in Kentucky a new law was passed providing for the promotion of the sheep industry by the better control of stray dogs.

Public Control of Water R. P. Teele

PUBLIC CONTROL OF WATER¹

R. P. TEELE, EXPERT IN IRRIGATION INSTITUTIONS, UNITED STATES
DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Very little legislation on this subject was enacted in 1906 as few Legislatures held sessions, and the legislation which was enacted is of little importance. One very interesting feature is the recommendation of Governor Stokes of New Jersey that a commission be appointed to investigate the supply of potable water in the state and to estimate the cost of the acquisition of this water supply by the state. In recommending this commission the Governor said: "But the question will arise as to the right of individuals or corporations to appropriate and sell potable water within the state without the consent of the state." This message of Governor Stokes's shows that the states of the East are rapidly coming to the same situation as regards the use of water for domestic and power purposes that the Western States have reached as regards irrigation. In both sections the old idea that water was free and could be acquired by any one prevailed for a long time, and individuals and corporations were allowed to appropriate the water without restraint, but as the demands have approached the limit of supply there arises in both sections a demand for public control. Throughout the arid region this has been met in most states by the provision for some form of state control of water resources. In a number of Eastern States there is some provision for such control of the use of water for power purposes, while in New Jersey the commission recommended by Governor Stokes has been provided for by law ('06 ch.154, 25 Ap.).

Arkansas has gone farther than any other state in its provision for state control of the use of water for power. In that state any person or any corporation authorized by its charter to do so, may maintain dams for the development of water power. Such a person or corporation is required to file with the Secretary of State, and in the counties in which lands pertaining to the water power are situated, a plat showing the location of the dam site, the stream above the dam site, and lands necessary for the development of the power. This power is to be for public use and to be let to parties desiring it in order of their applications, and the State Board of Railroad Commissioners is authorized to grant franchise for the construction of dams, the franchise to state the maximum compensation per horse power to be received for the use of the power generated. The builders of power plants are granted the right of eminent domain so far as necessary to enable them to condemn lands for the construction of storage dams, provide for the overflow of the water stored, and to acquire right of way for viaducts and transmission lines ('05 ch.323).

In New York the powers conferred upon the River Improvement Commission ('04 ch. 734) have been transferred to the State Water Supply Commission ('06 ch. 418).

The special procedure provided by the Wyoming law for acquiring right of way for irrigation works (R. S. 1899 § 897-900) was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the state because of failure to provide for notice to the landowner of the time and place of hearing before the appraisers (Sterritt v. Young, 82 P. 946). A dictum contained in this decision implies that a law providing for such notice to the landowner would be held constitutional.

LAND DRAINAGE¹

JOHN T. STEWART, DRAINAGE ENGINEER, OFFICE OF EXPERIMENT STATIONS, UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

As few legislative assemblies were in session during 1906 only a small amount of drainage legislation was enacted. A code of new laws was enacted in Mississippi and nine other states remedied defects in existing laws, by passing amendments and substitutes or by adding new sections to the old code.

The trend of legislation for the year was to give drainage officials more authority in securing right of way and providing for the maintenance of drainage channels, both natural and artificial. Louisiana is the fourth state to enact legislation by which the state becomes a participant in drainage improvements. The proposed amendment to the Constitution of Florida as described in the review of drainage legislation for 1905 was defeated in the November election.

Arkansas. An act was passed ('05 ch.53) which provides that levee and drainage boards organized under the laws of the state may enter upon or take and hold any property which may be necessary for drainage or levee purposes. They also have the right to cut and remove timber or other material which in any way may endanger drainage structures. Where it becomes necessary to condemn right of way, three disinterested persons shall be appointed by the circuit judge to act as appraisers. These persons, having been properly appointed and qualified, shall determine the amount of damages due the owner of property by reason of the construction of any drainage structure. In assessing the damages they shall not only consider the property taken, but shall include any inconvenience that may be caused the property holder, interference with natural drainage or damage to crops and buildings. The appraisers shall report their findings to the clerk of the Circuit Court, who shall immediately notify all persons affected and have a notice of the finding published at least four different times, and if no exception is filed by the owner within 10 days after he has been notified, or the publishing of the last notice, the court shall enter a judgment in favor of the owners for the amount of the award against the district. When a property owner files an exception to the award of the board of appraisers, the clerk shall docket the cause, and if a trial is demanded it shall be tried as other common law cases. In case the district refuses to pay the award, they may abandon the line and make a relocation and will not be liable for any damages, except the costs.

The act of 1905, chapter 320, makes it unlawful for any person or corporation in any manner to obstruct the free flow of water in any natural or artificial drainage channel, with the exception of natural streams where logs may be floated or booms constructed, so long as they are not the cause of overflows.

Iowa. A joint resolution was passed and referred to the next General Assembly ('06 p.210) proposing an amendment to the Constitution which would permit the General Assembly to pass laws enabling the owners of land to organize themselves into districts for the purpose of improving land by drainage, and to give to these districts the right to levy special assessments and to condemn and hold such property as may be necessary for improvements.

In the code relating to levees built by the United States, chapter 83 of the laws of 1906 provides substitutes for sections 1976, 1979, 1982 and 1984, and amends sections 1977 and 1986. The important change in the substitute for section 1976 provides that a petition for drainage, instead of requiring 25 signatures, shall be signed by one or more owners of land lying within the proposed district, a map of which shall accompany the petition.

In sections 1977 and 1982 the classification of lands as dry, low and wet has been excluded, and provision is made for the assessment of the land lying within the district by a levy of a rate upon the assessable value. Where the improvement is for drainage only, the lands may be classified and the tax graduated thereon, as provided in chapter 68 of the drainage laws of the 30th General Assembly.

Chapter 84 of the laws of 1906 provides for several minor amendments to chapter 68 of the laws of 1904. The principal points in these amendments are: giving to the supervisors power to recall the engineer at any time and to select another to act in his place; in providing that the engineer shall accompany the appraisers and furnish them such information as they may call for, and giving township trustees having jurisdiction over highways the same rights as landowners to petition for the establishment of a drainage district.

Chapter 86 of the laws of 1906 provides for the payment of the preliminary expenses of the organization of a drainage district, as provided for in chapter 68 of the laws of 1904. County supervisors are authorized to pay all general expenses of district organization out of the general county funds, the amount to be replaced to the credit of the county, by the district, as soon as it is established or out of the petitioner's bond if it is not established. Where there is more than one county interested, each shall pay its portion of the preliminary expense, as determined by the engineer in charge.

Kentucky. Chapter 76 of the laws of 1906 amends subsection 5 of section 2412a, giving the county judge authority to appoint an inspector during the months of April and November of each year, who shall inspect all creeks in the county and notify the owner of the land upon which any obstruction is found to remove the same within 10 days. If the owner fails to remove the obstruction the judge shall have the obstruction removed, and all costs which shall be thereby caused shall be entered on the tax books as an assessment against the land and collected as other taxes.

Chapter 150 of the laws of 1906 provides that the county judge at any regular session of court, shall cause any ditch or drain to be constructed or cleaned out as hereinafter provided.

Chapter 151 of the laws of 1906 provides that corporations having for their object the drainage of swamp lands shall have the benefit of the present laws and laws hereinafter enumerated bearing on drainage. The County Court upon receiving a petition signed by more than one half the landowners residing within the boundary of the drainage corporation shall appoint three commissioners, who shall assess on all lands within the boundary of the corporation a tax of not less than 10 nor more than 25 cents an acre, per year, for a period of 10 years. A report of this assessment shall be filed with the clerk of the County Court. No error in the assessment, in the description or location of the property, or name of the owner shall invalidate the assessment of any property which can be located with reasonable certainty. At the end of 10 years, another assessment for a 10 year period may be established, by a petition of more than one half of the land owners. After the commissioners' report has been filed, all interested persons are notified and have 30 days in which to file written complaints with the circuit clerk. The clerk shall assign these complaints to a hearing in the Chancery Court, where the report may be rejected or the assessments equalized, as justice requires. Taxes shall be assessed on the first day of July, payable to the company on or after the first day of October, and due on the first day of December. All taxes payable in October shall be discounted 3%, in November 2%; after January 1 all unpaid taxes shall bear interest at $\frac{1}{2}\%$ a month until paid. The corporation shall have a lien which shall be superior to all claims except state and county taxes, for all assessments upon lands the same as a mortgage, but said lien shall not continue longer than 10 years before suit is brought for collection. These taxes are to be used by the company for the construction and maintenance of ditches and general drainage purposes. The officers of the corporation may file an affidavit with the Circuit Court, stating on what lands assessments are due and unpaid, and these assessments can be collected in the same manner as other liens, the cost to be added to the assessment, or in case of a suit by the losing party. The corporation has the right of eminent domain for the securing of such lands as may be necessary for the construction and improvement of water courses. In such cases the company is to proceed according to the Kentucky statutes. The directors of the company shall annually, in January, file a detailed report of all their proceedings with the clerk of the County Court. Upon petition of a drainage company to the County Court, an extension of their territory can be made, when the numerical majority of the landowners after being properly notified by the County Court give their consent, such extension shall be subject to this act, and assessments made and collected.

Chapter 152 of the laws of 1906 provides for the organization of drainage districts by the county judge upon receipt of a petition signed by one or more landowners, who file a bond sufficient to cover the preliminary expenses. Three commissioners are appointed by the county judge who are resident property owners in the county, and are not interested or of any kin to any one interested in the proposed district. These viewers shall make a survey and prepare a report showing plans, estimates and specifications of the proposed improvement, a description with the amount of benefits and damages to each tract affected, and make a statement in regard to the public utility of the improvement.

Louisiana. Chapter 29 of the laws of 1906 authorizes drainage districts organized previous to the adoption of the Constitution of 1898 to levy and collect annually an acreage tax, not to exceed 25 cents an acre on all lands in the district, when such a proposition is favored by a majority, in number and amount of property of the taxpayers, who by article 199 of the Constitution of 1898 have a right to participate in such an election.

The Board of State Engineers by an act ('06 ch.103) are required to make surveys and to perform such services as the commissioners of drainage districts throughout the state may require, the expense thus incurred by the State Board of Engineers to be paid by the districts where the services are rendered.

An act ('06 ch.108) makes it a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine and imprisonment, for any one to divert or impede the course of water from a natural drain unless it is returned to the natural channel and the velocity outside of the estate of the one diverting it is undiminished.

Chapter 135 of the laws of 1906 amends section 2 of chapter 159 of the laws of 1902 by giving police juries power to fix the limits of drainage districts and to appoint three of the commissioners, the other two to be appointed by the Governor, each commissioner to be an elector of the district, and owning real estate having an assessed value of not less than $500.

Maryland. Chapter 137 of the laws of 1906 provides that any person who feels aggrieved by the decision of the county commissioners in any drainage proceeding can within 30 days appeal to the Circuit Court, the decision of such court to be final. It is further provided that the commissioners appointed by the county commissioners to make any drainage improvement or assessment shall give at least 10 days' notice before beginning their work, and county commissioners after receiving the report of any drainage commissioners shall give at least 20 days' notice of a date set to hear objections to such report before acting.

Mississippi. Chapter 132 of the laws of 1906 provides for the election, by the Board of Supervisors, of three drainage commissioners for each county in which a drainage district is proposed to be organized. A petition for the organization of a drainage district shall be signed by a majority of the landowners, who represent one third the area of the land in the proposed district or one third the landowners, owning more than one half the area of the land in the proposed district. This petition is to be filed with the clerk of the Chancery Court. When the proposed district lies in more than one county, the petition shall be filed in the county in which the greater area lies. The clerk shall give three weeks' notice of the filing of the petition to all persons interested, which shall be heard at any date which may be fixed by the chancellor of the court. At this hearing the court shall determine whether the petition is properly signed, whether all persons interested have been properly notified and whether the lands described by it require a combined system of drainage, and if the court find in favor of the petitioners, the petition shall be referred to the drainage commissioners of the county. The drainage commissioners may employ an engineer, and as soon as practicable go upon the land and determine the route of the proposed improvement, its size and an estimate of its cost, with the damages and benefits to the district lands. If they find that any of the lands described in the petition will not be benefited, they shall report that the same be excluded from the district when organized. Upon the filing of the commissioners' report, the clerk shall fix a date for the hearing and give three weeks' notice to all those interested. The court at the hearing may refer the report back to the commissioners for amendment, reject or confirm the report, as in its opinion may seem best. If confirmed the court shall issue an order organizing the district as a corporate body, under a name mentioned in the petition. As soon as practicable after the order organizing the district, the commissioners shall go upon the lands and assess the benefits and damages to each tract, and shall procure the right of way for the construction of the ditch. In case the commissioners have to pay damages by agreement or condemnation to any person the commissioners shall allow to each landowner through whose land the ditch passes a reasonable amount of damages, so that all lands may be equally compensated for damages sustained. The assessment when completed shall be filed with the clerk of the Chancery Court, and a hearing shall be granted in not less than 15 nor more than 30 days after the date of filing. All interested parties are to receive at least two weeks' notice of this hearing. The court after the hearing shall act on the assessment as justice may require. Any person feeling aggrieved may appeal to the Supreme Court upon such terms as are required by law. At the time of confirming the assessment the court shall state how the assessments or any bonds that may be issued are to be paid. The collection of assessments shall not exceed 10 separate instalments. The county treasurer is to act as treasurer for the drainage districts in his county. Bonds may be issued not to exceed 80% of the levy; they shall not be sold for less than par or bear interest greater than 6%, nor extend over a period longer than 20 years. Contracts for construction shall be let after not less than 22 days' advertising, to the lowest responsible bidder who can give a satisfactory bond. The commissioners and their successors shall have charge of the ditches in perpetuity, and shall annually see that they are cleaned out and kept in repair, and when necessary make additional assessments for maintenance. Where two or more landowners desiring to construct a lateral ditch in a drainage district can not agree upon the cost to be borne by each, any one of such parties may petition the drainage commissioners, who, by giving due notice, shall lay out the ditch and make assessments in the same way as described for the main district. Commissioners shall receive $5 a day and expenses for the time actually spent and shall annually make a report showing all proceedings. From the time a petition to organize a district is referred to them, they shall have a right to enter upon all lands for the purpose of making surveys and estimates, or for cleaning out and repairing ditches. Where an upper district is organized which will discharge its waters into the ditches of a lower district previously organized, the lower district shall receive just compensation for furnishing an outlet, and where the commissioners can not agree upon the amount to be paid for such outlet privileges, the matter shall be referred to the Chancery Court in which the districts were organized. Roads and railroads shall be assessed for drainage purposes according to benefits; they shall also remove all bridges which are in the way of ditch construction and replace them after the ditch is completed, expense to be paid by the drainage district. If the owners of any lands lying outside of the drainage district make connection with any district ditch, the commissioners shall make complaint to the court, and after 25 days' notice the court shall give a hearing, and if the complaint is found to be true, such lands shall be annexed to the district and assessed the same as district lands. County property where benefited shall be assessed the same as other lands and the assessment paid out of the general county funds by order of the board of supervisors. Any person who shall in any manner injure a ditch shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and fined not more than $100 and liable for double the expense of repairing the injury.

New Jersey. An act was passed ('06 ch.161) providing that if the outlet of any artificial reservoir or previously drained wet land becomes obstructed and requires cleaning, and the authorities in charge of same shall neglect to do the necessary work, any 10 or more citizens of the municipality, after serving 10 days' notice upon the governing body of such organization, may petition the court for the appointment of three commissioners to construct such drainage channels as may be necessary. The court when satisfied that such work is necessary may appoint three commissioners, to act until discharged, with full authority to proceed with the work. All expenses incurred by the commissioners and approved by the court shall be paid by the municipality in which the work is done.

New York. Chapter 115 of the laws of 1906 amended section 1 of title 16, chapter 8, part 3 of the Revised Statutes by providing that the president of the board of trustees of any incorporated village, the supervisor of any town or any person interested in swamp or wet lands may present a petition to the county court asking that commissioners be appointed for the purpose of opening or deepening drains through the land of others not interested in the drainage.

Ohio. A law was enacted ('06 p.280) providing for the election of a township ditch supervisor in any township where there are township or county ditches. The duties of this supervisor shall be to look after the maintenance of ditches. He shall divide all ditches in the township into working sections, and apportion the same to the various landowners or organizations benefited by the ditch construction. When the ditches are located in more than one township, the supervisor shall cooperate in making the apportionment. Within 10 days after the apportionment is made, each party shall be notified in writing of the date of the completion of the apportionment and of his portion. On the second Saturday after the completion of the apportionment the trustees of the township, or if more than one township is interested, the trustees of the several townships, shall hold a joint meeting. At this meeting any person dissatisfied with his portion shall appear and protest, and it is the duty of the trustees after hearing the protest to modify the apportionment or confirm it, as justice may require. The ditch supervisor or supervisors shall be present at this hearing and be notified by the trustees of any change that is made. Each landowner or organization shall mark the terminus of their portion by a substantial marker, having painted on it the number of the section, and clean out the ditch until it is of the same dimensions as when originally constructed. If there is assessed to any of the land $3 or less, these small sections may be grouped together, and if the parties to whom they are assessed neglect to clean them, or if any landowner or organization shall neglect to clean their portion before October 15 in each year, the ditch supervisor shall let these sections to the lowest responsible bidder, and they shall be paid for out of the township funds and the amount certified to the county auditor, who will enter it in the tax books and it will be collected by the county treasurer and returned to the township funds. For the carrying out of this law, township trustees are empowered to levy a tax upon all taxable property, not to exceed 5/10 mill. The ditch supervisor shall receive a salary of $2 a day and when necessary shall be allowed an assistant at $1.50 a day. Every person or corporation through whose land a ditch passes shall keep it clean of fallen timber and drift. If they neglect to do so, and complaint is made, the ditch supervisor shall examine the obstruction and notify the landowner to remove it. The landowner can within 10 days appeal to the board of trustees, who shall examine into the case and cause the obstruction to be removed at the owner's expense, or have the cost prorated throughout the district.

Sections 4496 to 4498 inclusive, 4553 to 4556 inclusive of the Revised Statutes, and sections 1 to 13 inclusive of an act to provide for the cleaning out and keeping in repair public ditches and water courses, passed April 15, 1902, are repealed by this act.

Virginia. The Legislative Assembly of Virginia passed an act ('06 ch.188) providing for the organization of drainage districts where five or more landowners are interested. The interested landowners are to file a bill in the Circuit Court, setting forth the facts, and shall be made the plaintiffs, while others interested shall be the defendants. The court by its commissioner in chancery shall ascertain all the data in regard to the proposed ditch and lands and the amount each tract of land is to be benefited or damaged, and if the report of this commissioner is confirmed a special commissioner is appointed to collect the assessments and supervise the construction. All landowners assessed have the privilege of draining into the ditch, but no other persons shall use this ditch as an outlet except upon terms ordered by the court. When the ditch has been completed and all matters regarding it settled, the court shall remove the case from the docket.

Washington. The Supreme Court on April 4, 1906, gave the following decisions:

The finding by the court that a system of drainage is practicable and will increase the value of lands to be drained is a judicial question, and does not delegate legislative authority to the court.

That a jury in establishing a system of drainage and determining damages and benefits to each tract of land does not impose on the court and jury the duty of making assessments in violation of the Constitution.

That the amendment to section 5 of the drainage laws is invalid because it was not included in the title.

The fact that section 5 is invalid does not in any way affect the validity of the remaining sections, as none of them were dependent upon section 5.

A petition for the organization of a drainage district may be amended for the purpose of permitting the drainage commissioners to propose a change in the system, providing a notice and hearing of the amendment be given the defendants.

The fact that some other drainage system might be more feasible does not deprive the court of the power to approve a system already before it.

A petition for the organization of a drainage district should give a complete description of the proposed system, with estimates, plans and specifications.

Where a petition is insufficient from the fact that it does not contain a full description, the commissioners may dismiss the proceedings or take leave to amend.

COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY¹

GEORGE MYGATT FISK PH.D., PROFESSOR OF COMMERCE, UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS

The general character of state laws relating to domestic commerce and industry, enacted during 1906, is shown by the following list: weights and measures, adulterations and imitations, branding, inspection, associations, exchanges, speculation, warehouses, markets, the regulation and licensing of trades and occupations, encouragement of industries, navigation, waterways and miscellaneous trade regulations.

Weights and measures. Eleven laws relating to this subject were passed in 1906, five of which were revisions or modifications of existing laws. Most of these laws affected agricultural products. Five states, all in the South, established certain standards of weights and measures and those who neglect to carry out the provisions of the law are subject to penalties. Massachusetts ('06 ch.215) in order to facilitate prosecution against violators of existing laws amended her statutes whereby possession of false weights or measures constituted prima facie evidence of fraudulent intent. This placed upon the suspected individual the responsibility of proving his innocence and thereby rendered prosecution more effective. Two recent laws of California, one ('05 ch.302. Ex parte Dietrich 84 P. 770) requiring packages of butter of certain weight to have the weight marked thereon, the other ('03 ch.251. Ex parte Hayden 82 P. 315) necessitating the marking of packages of fruit which is to be shipped, were both declared to be contrary to the state Constitution on the ground that they were not valid exercises of police-power.

Adulterations and imitations. Branding. Inspection. Legislation affecting these subjects, as well as laws regulating weights and measures, has formed a prominent feature of not only state, but federal legislation in recent years. As far as national legislation is concerned, witness the federal pure food and meat inspection laws. These laws are due largely to an awakened public conscience and are aimed to protect society against the unscrupulous producer and trader. Three laws relating to adulterations, imitations and inspections and affecting the sale of fish, oysters, oranges, farm products (La. '06 ch.112), the manufacture and labeling of mattresses and couches in which wool or shoddy made from cast off clothing is used (Md. '06 ch.358) and the sale and manufacture of turpentine, linseed and flaxseed oil (N. Y. '06 ch.584) have been enacted during the past year. Iowa and Ohio have both amended existing statutes for the purpose of making their oil inspection more effective.

The most prominent legislation in the above category related to the subject of branding, several states prohibiting the unauthorized use of union labels and society badges and insignia. New Jersey ('06 ch.26) increased the penalty of violators of state trade-marks.

Associations. Exchanges. Speculation. Radical legislation relating to these subjects, due largely to a misconception of the true function of speculation, was frequent a few years ago, especially in southern and western states. This movement seems to have spent itself. During the past year Georgia ('06 p.95) passed a general law prohibiting "dealings in futures." It is stated however (§ 8) "that this act shall not be so construed as to prevent or render unlawful the posting or publishing of market quotations or prices of commodities, stocks, bonds and securities by any regularly organized commercial exchange or other bona fide trade organization in which no purchase or sale for future delivery on margin is permitted."

Warehouses. Markets. In 1905 Wisconsin passed acts ('05 ch.19, 317) creating a grain and warehouse commission and providing for licensing and regulating warehouses and elevators and for the storage, weighing and inspection of grain in the city of Superior and conditionally at other terminal points in said state. Complaints being made that unreasonable charges were exacted at the warehouses in Superior, the Legislature at a special session in 1905, upon the recommendation of Governor La Follette, amended the act whereby any warehouseman or other person deeming charges unreasonable may file complaints with the State Warehouse Commission, which may increase or decrease these charges as its judgment dictates. An appeal, however, may be taken to the Circuit Court of the county in which Superior is located.

Aside from this law there were no other important enactments regarding warehouses excepting, perhaps, a Kentucky law ('06 ch.145) which provided for the incorporation and organization of warehouse companies and placed them under the supervision of the State Insurance Commissioner.

Regulation and licensing of trades and occupations. Laws in this category relate to accountants, barbers, coal and coke dealers, commission merchants, hawkers and peddlers, junk and secondhand dealers, transient merchants, veterinary surgeons, et al.

Rhode Island ('06 ch.1370) has fallen in line with Illinois, Washington, New Jersey, Florida and Michigan in passing an act to create a State Board of Accountancy and to regulate the business of certified public accountants. This law presents no new features but is similar in its organization and powers to the accountancy laws of the other states. There is an interesting reciprocity section (8) in the law which provides that the state board may register the certificate of any certified public accountant of another state provided such state "extends similar privileges to the certified public accountants of this state."

As regards barbers the state of New York repealed the law which created a Board of Barber Examiners whose duty it was to regulate barbering ('06 ch.256), while, on the other hand, the Massachusetts State Board of Health has been instructed to investigate the sanitary conditions of barber shops and to report to the Legislature in 1907 upon the desirability of regulating these establishments.

Many of the state courts have declared it to be unconstitutional to exempt from a peddler's license, farmers who sell from house to house the products of their own farm or garden. In order to obviate the constitutional difficulty, Minnesota amended her Constitution by popular vote in November 1906.

Washington passed a law in 1905 (p.372) which provided that every person who peddles out or "after shipment to the state," canvasses and sells by sample any carriage or wagon, and certain other articles, shall pay in advance a license tax of $200 for each calendar year, or portion thereof, to be paid in each county in which the occupation is pursued. The purpose of such a law is evident. It was declared unconstitutional (Bacon v. Locke 83 P. 721) on the ground that it was class legislation and that it impaired the privileges and immunities of citizens of other states. Similarly Michigan passed a law in 1905 (ch.214) providing for the licensing of transient merchants, but giving any municipality power to suspend the act in any specific instance. This was declared unconstitutional, as it denied equal protection of the laws (Brown v. Stuart 108 N. W. 717).

Miscellaneous trade regulations. Under this heading two subjects are especially prominent — legal and public holidays and trading stamps. For various social and industrial reasons there is a general tendency in the United States toward shorter labor hours and an increase in the number of holidays. As in line with the latter South Carolina ('06 ch.68) proclaimed a legal holiday for Thursday in counties where the State Agricultural and Mechanical Society holds its annual fair; the first Saturday of March is designated in Arkansas ('05 ch.209) as Arbor day; June 3, Jefferson Davis's birthday, becomes the Confederate Memorial day in Mississippi ('06 ch.120): January 19, the birthday of Robert Edward Lee, is to be observed in the public schools of Arkansas ('05 ch.35) by patriotic exercises. Most interesting of all is the amended Code of Virginia ('06 ch.110), which designates Saturday as a holiday as regards negotiable instruments and as a half holiday as regards the transaction of business generally.

The organized opposition against the use of trading stamps has led to the enactment of laws in many states prohibiting their use. California passed such a law in 1905 (ch.69) and Massachusetts in 1904 (ch.403) but both have been declared unconstitutional, the former on the ground that such a law is not within the police power of the state (Ex parte Drexel 82 P. 429) and the latter because it was held to be class legislation (O'Keeffe v. City of Somerville, 76 N. E. 457).

Encouragement of industries. The subjects generally considered under this heading are bonuses, exemptions, bounties and expositions. Nebraska passed a law in 1895 (ch.1) for the payment of a bounty on the production of sugar and chicory but this law was declared unconstitutional (Oxnard Beet Sugar Co. v. State 105 N. W. 716) because it was a pledging of public money for private purposes.

As regards "expositions," the governors of several states, including also the President of the United States, recommended governmental participation in the Jamestown Exposition, and a few states made appropriations for this purpose. Governor Higgins of New York sent a special message to the Legislature recommending provision for celebrating in 1909 the 300th anniversary of the discovery of the Hudson river and the centennial anniversary of the first use of steam in the navigation of the Hudson. It is interesting to note a recommendation of Governor Warfield of Maryland "that it would be well for the state of Maryland to establish in Baltimore city, its great center of population, a museum of agriculture and manufactures, where could be displayed the product of the state and the output of our manufacturing establishments, thus advertising Maryland's resources."

While the federal government has been more or less interested in restricting immigration many of the Southern States have in recent years been offering various inducements to encourage immigration within their borders. Governor Montague of Virginia stated "the state needs immigration . . . I would suggest the enactment of legislation for the procurement of desirable immigrants who can contribute to our home-building and developing energies." For the purpose of encouraging immigrants several southern states made appropriations.

Navigation and waterways. Most harbors and inland waterways are interstate in character and are thus cared for by liberal appropriations from the national treasury. The inability of the railroads to provide adequate transportation facilities for our increasing domestic and foreign traffic is sure to cause increased appropriations for the improvement of our inland waterways. This, however, as has been said, is largely a matter for the federal authorities. A noteworthy exception in recent years is the enormous appropriation of the state of New York for the purpose of enlarging the Erie canal. During the past year there has been no marked state legislation relating to navigation and inland waterways. California has appropriated money to repair the water front at San Francisco; New Jersey and New York have done something toward the maintenance of open piers and buoys; Ohio and Kentucky have removed obstructions from the rivers on their borders — but these deserve hardly a passing notice.

LEGISLATION BULLETIN 33h

BANKING¹

WILLIAM A. SCOTT PH.D., DIRECTOR COURSE IN COMMERCE AND PROFESSOR OF POLITICAL ECONOMY, UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN

Legislation pertaining to banking and similar kinds of business during 1906 presents few features of general interest. For the most part the state Legislatures which held sessions during this year were content with amendments of a minor character, which improved the statutes previously existing but inaugurated no new policies. The substance of the most important of these laws and amendments may be summarized under the following heads.

Amendments to general banking laws. For many years the supervision of banking and similar institutions in Massachusetts has been in the hands of a board known as the Board of Commissioners of Savings Banks. This board has now been abolished ('06 ch.204) and for it has been substituted a Bank Commissioner, appointed by the Governor for three years, at a salary of $5000 a year. This officer has authority to appoint a deputy at a salary of $3000 a year, five examiners at salaries of $2000 each, and necessary clerks and other assistants. His duties are substantially the same as those of the old board. The Treasurer, Receiver General and Commissioner of Corporations, however, act with him as a board in matters relative to the incorporation and supervision of trust companies as prescribed in the trust company act passed in 1904 ('04 ch.374) and in certain other matters specifically described in section 2, chapter 114 and section 20, chapter 116 of the Revised Laws of the state.

Two other amendments ('06 ch.66, 347) increase the power of the Bank Commissioner over foreign banking associations doing business in the state. A former act ('02 ch.463) gave the Commissioners of Savings Banks authority to examine the offices of these associations in the same manner as those of domestic banks, but the present amendments go farther and compel foreign banking associations to obtain authorization from the commissioner before beginning business, to report their condition to him on a prescribed date and at other dates specified by him, and to submit to inspection annually, or oftener if required; and give the commissioner authority to apply to the Supreme Court for an injunction to restrain such an institution from doing business in case it has exceeded its powers, or has failed to comply with the law, or is insolvent or in a condition which renders it dangerous to its depositors or to the public.

South Carolina has established the office of Bank Examiner ('06 ch.64). This officer is appointed by the Governor at a salary of $3000 a year, and must be an expert accountant and have had experience in the banking business. His powers are those usually conferred upon similar officers in other states, namely, the examination of banks at least once a year, the publication of bank reports which must be sent to him four times a year at dates fixed by himself, the report to the banks and to the State Treasurer of violations of law, and the winding up of insolvent or fraudulently and dishonestly conducted institutions after receiving permission from the circuit judge.

Louisiana ('06 ch.140) has amended the banking act of 1902 ('02 ch.179) in several particulars. It now requires all persons engaged in the business of banking to become incorporated and prohibits any other person or persons from using the title "Bank, Banking Association, or Savings Bank." It further requires banks, before beginning business, to furnish "satisfactory proof that they have complied with all the requirements of the law concerning the adoption and recordation of their charter." The old law required only that they should furnish satisfactory evidence of having received in lawful money one half of the subscribed capital. The time fixed for the payment of the balance of the capital stock is now within 90 days after the bank "shall have opened its doors for business" instead of within 90 days after the filing of the articles of association in the office of the Secretary of State. Any increase in capital must now be paid within 30 days after subscription, instead of 10 as formerly prescribed. Instead of calling for reports on or before the first Tuesday in April, June, July and October, and for a date in the quarter just ended, the Bank Examiner is now required to call for reports four times each year, and the date of the report shall be "a certain day then past." The loans which may not be counted in applying the statutory limitation regarding loans to any one borrower must be secured by "good collateral securities or solvent indorsements" instead of simply by pledged collateral as formerly. Loans to officers or employees of the bank may now be made only when approved by a resolution of the Board of Directors, at which the applicant shall not be present or participate. Loans and discounts, overdrafts or other debts which are past due for more than 12 months and on which interest has not been paid must be classed as bad debts, and either charged off or reduced in value after an appraisal by the Bank Examiner and two stockholders before any dividend be declared out of the profits of the bank.

Other amendments worthy of notice are by Kentucky ('06 ch.44) requiring incorporation of all persons engaged in the business of banking and another ('06 ch.155) modifying her reserve regulation so as to require only 10% against savings deposits not subject to check and only withdrawable on 30 days' notice, instead of 15% in small towns and 25% in large ones, as formerly; one by Iowa ('06 ch.81) increasing the number of bank examiners from four to five, and another ('06 ch.65) prescribing the procedure to be followed in the extension of bank charters; one by New York ('06 ch.572) permitting the purchase, from a person who already has borrowed from the bank up to the limit prescribed by law, of commercial or business paper actually owned by him, provided that in no event his total liability to the bank or trust company shall exceed 40% of the actual paid-up capital and surplus; two by New Jersey ('06 ch.130) authorizing the Commissioner of Banking and Insurance to apply to the Chancellor for the appointment of a receiver for a bank which does not possess unencumbered assets of at least $20,000 in excess of its liabilities, and another ('06 ch.156) extending the power of the Chancellor to proceed against a bank to cases in which a bank is in an unsound condition or is violating the laws or its charter or refuses to submit to the legal demands of the Commissioner of Banking and Insurance. Another amendment passed by the last New Jersey Legislature ('06 ch.190) requires bank directors to take an elaborate oath, which must be kept on file by the commissioner.

Savings banks. A savings bank act was passed by the last New Jersey Legislature ('06 ch.195). It contains 15 chapters and covers 25 printed pages. The features especially worthy of notice are the following: It is made the duty of the Commissioner of Banking, to whom application for charters must be made, to satisfy himself before granting such requests that the convenience of the region in which the proposed bank wishes to locate will be promoted by such an institution, that the density of population affords reasonable promise of adequate support for such an enterprise, and that the applicants possess the characteristics necessary to commend the respect and confidence of the community. Managers must not borrow from the banks of which they are officers nor be interested in its profits except as depositors. The investments of such banks must be confined to the following classes of securities: United States bonds; bonds of the state of New Jersey; bonds of other states which have not defaulted in payment of the principal or interest on any debt authorized by their laws; county, township, municipal or school district bonds of New Jersey, provided these corporations have not defaulted in the payment of the principal or interest of any legal obligation for five years, and provided the total indebtedness of the borough or village does not exceed 10% of its assessed valuation, and provided that school district bonds are by law charged upon all the property of the inhabitants of the district; any interest-bearing obligation (other than obligations commonly known as improvement certificates) issued by the city, county, town, township, borough or village in which such bank is situated; bonds of cities or counties of other states, provided the issuing corporation has not defaulted in the payment of the principal or interest of any of its debts in 10 years and its total liabilities do not exceed 10% of its assessed valuation; first mortgage bonds of railroad companies which have paid dividends of not less than 4% regularly on their entire capital stock for a period of not less than five years; bonds secured by first mortgage on real estate in New Jersey, the amount loaned not to exceed 50% of the value of improved and 30% of the value of unimproved property, the total of loans of this class not to absorb more than 80% of the deposits subject to loan. Investments in real estate, other than that obtained upon foreclosures and in satisfaction of debts, must not exceed 50% of the net surplus of the bank, and loans upon notes, bills of exchange and drafts are permitted only in case they be secured by collateral consisting of the kinds of securities in which the bank is allowed to invest or of the stock of national and state banks, or the stock and bonds of other corporations which have not defaulted in the payment of interest and dividends during the two preceding years, provided the loan does not exceed 80% of the value of such collateral, and the aggregate of such loans does not exceed 15% of the total deposits of the bank.

Banks are permitted to keep a reserve fund equal to 10% of their deposits, and in addition to accumulate deposits until the amount of the fund is large enough to render investment profitable. These funds may be kept on deposit in other banks or invested on pledged collateral of the kind above described. The managers of savings banks are also authorized to accumulate a surplus fund equal to 15% of the deposits, said fund to be taken from the net profits. They must report to the Commissioner of Banking the condition of the bank on the 31st of December of each year and more frequently if he shall demand, and the commissioner must examine each bank at least once in two years. It is also the duty of the commissioner to notify the bank in case it is violating its charter or the laws or is conducting its business in an unsafe manner, and, in case it does not comply with his orders, to direct the Attorney General to proceed against it.

Besides this general law, the New Jersey Legislature extended the provision of its general banking act which makes it a misdemeanor for any bank officer to overdraw his account, to embezzle money or to keep false accounts, so as to include the officers of savings banks, trust companies and safe deposit companies ('06 ch.192).

New York and Iowa also slightly amended their laws relative to the investments of savings banks. The New York amendment ('06 ch.581) makes definite and clear the precise date from which the period of default in the interest or principal payments of a city or state shall be counted in applying that section of the law which prohibits investment in the bonds of cities or states which have defaulted in payments since January 1, 1878, for more than 90 days. The Iowa amendment ('06 ch.78) permits savings banks to invest their funds in the bonds of drainage districts.

Trust companies. The most important legislation of the year regarding trust companies was that of New York state, compelling such companies to keep a reserve. A new paragraph ('06 ch.337) was inserted in the banking laws, which requires trust companies in cities with a population of 800,000 or over to keep a reserve of 15% of the deposits and in other cities one of 10%. In cities of the first class one third, and in those of the second class 30% of such reserves must consist of lawful money of the United States, gold certificates, silver certificates, or notes or bills of national banks; the same percentage in each case may consist of bonds of the United States, or the state of New York or cities of the state of New York, and the balance of deposits subject to call in banks or trust companies in the state with a capital of at least $200,000 or a combined capital and surplus of at least $300,000, and which have been approved by the Superintendent of Banks. Whenever the reserve of any trust company falls below the lawful amount, it must not increase its liabilities, except by discounting sight bills, nor declare any dividend, until said reserve shall have been restored, and this restoration must take place within 30 days from the notification required of the Superintendent of Banks. In case of failure to comply with this requirement, the company shall be deemed insolvent and proceeded against according to the laws pertaining to insolvent moneyed corporations.

This amendment is the result of a movement started some time ago by the Associated Banks of New York city to more nearly equalize the conditions under which they and their trust company competitors are permitted to do business. Heretofore the responsibility for maintaining adequate cash reserves in New York city had been borne by the Associated Banks, which are subject to much more severe legal limitations than the trust companies, both as to reserves and as to loans. To this end the power of the Clearing House Association was first employed, with, however, only partial success. The law just described accomplishes only in part what the Associated Banks desire.

Slight amendments to their trust company acts were also made by New Jersey and Maryland. The former ('06 ch.157, 191) increased the power of the Court of Chancery over such companies in precisely the same manner as was indicated above in the description of New Jersey ('06 ch.156) and requires from the directors of such companies the same oath as is required of bank directors by New Jersey ('06 ch.190) described above. Maryland ('06 ch.118) forbids foreign trust and fidelity companies to do business in the state before they have made the deposit required by law and indicates the procedure to be followed in case of a failure to comply with the regulation.

Building and loan associations. The New York Legislature passed four amendments to the laws of that state pertaining to building and loan associations. Two ('06 ch.438, 573) make slight changes only; a third ('06 ch.600) facilitates the dissolution of these associations by carefully defining, under four heads, the circumstances under which dissolution is authorized and by specifying in detail the procedure to be followed; the fourth ('06 ch.432) permits directors of such associations to reserve 5% of the net earnings of each dividend period, until a fund equal to 5% of the dues and dividends credited to members by series or otherwise, and to at least 50% of the book value of all real estate owned, has been accumulated.

A New Jersey act ('06 ch.5) permits trustees appointed to wind up building and loan associations to count as assets property acquired under mortgage foreclosure, and another ('06 ch.54) amends the provisions of the law pertaining to the loans of such associations so as to permit loans to the amount of two thirds instead of one half of the cash value of improved real estate. Kentucky ('06 ch.96) repealed the provision of law which limited the total value of shares in building and loan associations to $5,000,000; Ohio ('06 p.173) permits payments to minors or to their order and declares a receipt from such minor or from a properly authorized person acting for him to be a valid acquittance of his rights; and Massachusetts ('06 ch.280) permits payments on loans of amounts of $50 or multiples thereof, or of smaller amounts, if so provided in the bylaws.

Pawnbrokers. The state of Virginia ('06 ch.156) imposed a license fee of $100 upon pawnbrokers and requires each one to give a bond of $1000 for the observance of the law. The act also specifies the fees which may be charged for various purposes, the purpose being to prevent extortion and overcharging under any pretext whatsoever. The Supreme Court of Mississippi (Rodge v. Kelly 40 S. 552) declared unconstitutional a law passed in 1904 ('04 ch. 76) imposing a license tax on lenders on personal security. In the opinion of the court this law, which aimed to prevent extortion by pawnbrokers, was so worded as to constitute class legislation. New York ('06 ch.41) amended her law so that, in a prosecution against a pawnbroker for advancing money to a child under 16, the defense that the child was the agent of another can not be entered by the courts.

FORESTRY¹

GEORGE W. WOODRUFF AND PHILIP P. WELLS, FOREST SERVICE, UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

General forest laws were enacted by several states during the year. Maryland passed a comprehensive forest law ('06 ch.294), creating a nonpartizan State Board of Forestry which appoints a State Forester of technical training and practical experience, at a salary not to exceed $2000. He supervises forest wardens, extinguishes fires, enforces laws, protects and improves state parks and forest reserves, cooperates with owners of forest lands, collects information, lectures in the State Agricultural College and at farmers institutes and similar meetings, is secretary of the state board, prepares an annual report on the state forest work and recommends improvements therein. He may cooperate with municipal and private corporations and individuals in forest protection and management, nominate forest wardens and allow them compensation for special services actually rendered. They enforce forest laws, protect the state forest reserves and have the powers of constables to arrest and prosecute. $3500 annually is appropriated for 1907 and 1908 and penalties are paid into the forest reserve fund, and counties may spend money for forest protection, improvement and management. New York ('06 ch.206) empowers the State Forester to appoint a secretary and fix his compensation. Ohio ('06 p.54) creates, at the State Agricultural Experiment Station, a Department of Forestry for the investigation of forest conditions, methods and management, and of wood preservation, which may cooperate with the United States Department of Agriculture to these ends. Bulletins are to be published and reports made, recommending necessary legislation. No extra compensation is to be paid for these services. Rhode Island ('06 ch.1322) provides for a State Forester, who is to publish information and to report annually, recommending needed legislation. Kentucky ('06 ch.90) gives the "State Board of Agriculture, Forestry and Immigration" the power to spend not exceeding $2000 either independently or, if a like sum is expended by the federal government in the same work, in cooperation with the Forest Service of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The only legislation during the year for tax exemption or bounty was enacted by Iowa ('06 ch.52). So called "forest reservations" (in private ownership), which must be at least 4 rods wide and contain not less than 2 acres with not less than 200 growing forest trees of enumerated species on each acre, are to be assessed for taxation at $1 an acre. Not more than one fifth of the living trees in any reservation may be removed in any one year, and within one year after the death or removal of any tree the owner must plant and care for another. Grazing in forest reservations is forbidden and violation of the act forfeits its benefits. The secretary of the State Horticultural Society is State Forestry Commissioner, without salary, and receives from deputies in the counties annual reports on forestry matters and the operation of the act for the use of the society. The act also favors "fruit tree reservations" under like conditions.

Several fire laws have been enacted during the year. Maryland ('06 ch.294) charges the forest wardens with the immediate duty of fire prevention and fire fighting. Their expense accounts are rendered to the State Forester, and paid by the counties on vouchers approved by him, and the county may recover from any landowner money which it has been obliged to pay out for fighting fire for his benefit. Fire notices are to be furnished by the State Forester and posted by the forest wardens. The penalty for negligently or wilfully firing another's woods is a fine of from $25 to $1000 and imprisonment of from 30 days to one year. Landowners setting fire on their own lands must carefully cut and pile the material, or clear around the land to be burned, and failure to do so, or allowing fire to escape to the injury of adjoining lands, is prima facie proof of wilfulness or neglect, creating civil liability for the injury resulting from the fire and for the cost of fighting it. Locomotives and engines in and near forest or brush which do not burn oil as fuel must be equipped with appliances to prevent the escape of fire, under a penalty of from $10 to $100 for every offense. The state and the county may recover from the violator of any of the foregoing provisions for all expenses incurred in fire fighting. New Jersey ('06 ch.123) empowers the State Board of Forest Park

Reservation Commissioners to appoint a State Firewarden and fix his salary. Town firewardens must be appointed by the township committees upon notice from the state board, which may appoint, if the committees fail to act, and are removable by the state board. There may be district firewardens within a township and deputy wardens to act in the absence or disability of the town firewarden. The State Warden supervises the local wardens, instructs them in their duties, notifies the state board of all vacancies on the roll of firewardens, sees that the townships are divided into proper districts, that the district firewardens are appointed, has charge of firewardens reports, ascertains the origin of fires, collects evidence and institutes prosecutions for the violation of the act and supervises bills against the state for fighting fires. The local wardens establish fire patrols when and where the state board prescribes, enforce all forest fire laws and the orders of the State Warden as to forest fires, patrols and fire fighting in their respective localities. They may plow land, set back fires, summon any male inhabitant to assist in fire fighting, and require the use of horses and tools for that purpose, under a penalty of $10 for disobedience. The State Warden, if present, controls fire fighting and may summon firewardens and their assistants from surrounding townships, whose expense in that case shall be paid wholly by the state. Any person may cross or work upon lands of another to extinguish fire. The state board may prescribe additional duties and make necessary regulations for firewardens and may purchase and distribute to them necessary material and equipment. The pay of local wardens and their employees unless fixed by the town committee shall be as follows: for firewardens, while fighting fires, $3 a day, while otherwise employed, $2 a day; for helpers fighting fire, $1, and at the rate of 20 cents an hour for more than five hours; for helpers on patrol or otherwise employed, $1.50. Detailed accounts are to be rendered by firewardens to the township authorities within one month after the service is rendered, with receipts for all disbursements of $1 and over. Such bills, when approved, are to be paid by the township, and one half repaid to the township by the state, but the state pays the entire cost of fire fighting on state forest reserves. The local warden reports within 10 days all fires burning over more than one acre to the State Warden, specifying the area burned over, the kind, age and quality of the standing timber, the quantity of forest products, fences, bridges and buildings destroyed, with estimate of their value, the cause of the fire, the names of all persons known or suspected to have knowledge of the cause, and the means of fighting or putting it out. Fire notices are prepared by the State Warden and posted by the local wardens, and are protected from wilful or malicious removal under penalty of $10. In townships having firewardens the burning of fallows, brush etc. from March 10 to May 31 is not allowed without the written permission of the local firewarden, who shall not grant it if in his opinion any forest or woodland would be endangered. Such permission does not relieve any person from the penalties of the act in case the burning results in a forest fire. All persons burning charcoal, brush, grass or other material must keep a careful and competent watchman in charge while the burning is going on. The wilful, careless or other setting of fire to any waste land, brush land or forest land is forbidden, but any person may set a back fire, ground fire or surface fire upon his own property, to protect it, provided it does not escape to adjoining property. But any firewarden may set or cause to be set any back fire. Violation of the act is punishable by fine of from $50 to $200. Firewardens and their deputies may arrest violators without warrant. The penalty in any action is paid to the prosecutor (the state board) which pays one half to the treasury of the state, the other to the informer. New York ('06 ch.206) empowers the Commissioner to appoint a chief firewarden ($1800) who supervises and instructs town firewardens, enforces the law as to fire districts in towns, commences under authority of the Commissioner prosecution for violations of the forest fire laws, and may from time to time employ expert foresters and a foreman and laborers to hold office during the pleasure of the Commissioner and perform such duties for the preservation of forests as he shall prescribe. The Commissioner must appoint five inspectors, four of whom may serve during the season of forest fires in the forest preserve counties of the Adirondacks, to inspect railroads, report to the Commissioner thereon for the purpose of fire prevention and perform other duties in preventing forest fires.

New Jersey ('06 ch.25) empowers the State Board of Forest Park Reservation Commissioners to cooperate with municipalities, corporations and individuals for the control and management of forest land, the establishment of an arboretum and experiments in forest culture. The state also ('06 ch.46) adopts a new procedure for purchasing lands for state forest reservations. The state board fixes the price and authorizes a contract for purchase, including covenant of title in fee simple, without incumbrance. The executive officer files an accurate map of the lands in the office of the board, which may order and pay for all searches reported by the Attorney General to be necessary, and when the Attorney General shall advise the board in writing that the title is clear and that there are no encumbrances the board may pay the price fixed. New Jersey also ('06 ch.136) empowers municipalities to use any of their lands for forest purposes, to cut and sell any timber thereof and contract with the state board for the control and management of such lands, which, when so used, are declared to be devoted to public use. New York submits to the Legislature to be chosen November 6, 1906, two amendments of article 7, section 7 of the state Constitution: one ('06 p.1895) permitting the storage of water for public purposes and the construction of dams therefor, upon such lands in the state forest reserve as may be necessary; the other ('04 p.1934) authorizing the removal, by officers and employees of the state, but not by contract, of all timber on burned areas so far as necessary for reforestation, also the sale of lands outside the established limits of the Adirondack Park and Catskill Park, the proceeds to be used only for the purchase of lands in such parks. Any citizen of the state may, with the consent of the Supreme Court or notice to the Attorney General, institute a suit to keep the state preserve as wild forest land.

In Washington a proposed constitutional amendment, submitted in November 1906, making the use of the waters of the state for the removal of timber products a public use, was rejected.

Forest legislation was recommended by the governors of various states as follows:

To preserve the pine forests by restricting cutting by private owners to a minimum of 10 or 12 inches (Louisiana); to foster and preserve the forests and to establish a Bureau of Forestry in connection with the State Fish and Game Commission at the State University (Ohio); to exempt from taxation for a period of 10 or 20 years all timber lands in agricultural sections to the extent of one fourth of the entire tract, if used for forest purposes only, a certain number of trees per acre to be required, and cutting, except for the owner's domestic use, to be prohibited during the period of exemption (Ohio); to protect the wilderness constituting the state preserve in its natural state, but also to encourage commercial forestry by precept and example (New York); to require the timber products of the state to be sawed into lumber by mills within her borders if this can be done under the Constitution (Louisiana).

FISH AND FISHERIES¹

M. C. MARSH, UNITED STATES BUREAU OF FISHERIES

The legislation for 1906 was about equal in volume to that of 1904, or of years in which relatively few Legislatures convene. Aside from federal legislation, 14 states participated in passing about 40 acts concerning fish or fisheries. No new fish or fish and game commissions for general purposes were established but Maryland created a Board of Shellfish Commissioners. Only one new hatchery was provided for, on the Hudson river in New York. Legislation on close seasons and restrictions upon methods and apparatus, usually forming a considerable part of the total, is this year meagerly represented. The feature of the year is the increase of comprehensive regulation of the oyster fishery. The necessity of husbanding the oyster supply is everywhere gaining recognition, and there is a distinct trend to the legislation of recent years on this subject as a whole. Its chief feature is rigid control by the state. Water bottoms are coming to be regarded as public lands, natural oyster beds being reserved for public use while barren bottoms capable of growing oysters are portioned off to residents usually by lease for cultivation, instead of in fee simple, the state retaining much authority. States are restricting the shipping of oysters and even shells out of the state, and restrictive regulations are applied to private as well as public oyster bottoms.

Oysters. Maryland ('06 ch.711) enacted to establish and promote the industry of oyster culture in Maryland. Residents, but no corporation or joint stock company, may plant and cultivate oysters, but not on natural beds. A Board of Shellfish Commissioners is appointed consisting of three salaried members, who shall employ a surveyor to survey the natural oyster beds of the state. The Governor is requested to ask assistance of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey and the United States Commissioner of Fisheries to aid in the survey, the completed report and charts of which are to be conclusive evidence of the boundaries of all natural oyster beds and bars, all other regions of Chesapeake bay to be construed as barren bottoms and open for oyster planting. Provision is made for the correction of omissions in the survey. The board is to have marked on the oyster survey maps the grass-grown bottoms of tributaries to the bay which are profitable grounds for soft shell crabs and such areas are exempt from leasing for oyster culture. The barren oyster bottoms are to be offered for leasing after the survey, for 25-year terms, the preference being given to owners of water front and oyster fishermen, under certain restrictions of acreage, for 10 months, after which all applications are considered in order. Assignments of interests acquired under this act, to nonresidents, are void. If such assignment is attempted, or assignment to a corporation or joint stock company, all the interest of assignor reverts to the state. The revenues under this act are to be applied, after the payment of its expenses and a balance of $10,000 each year to the board, to the credit of the "special road fund" in the state treasury.

Congress authorized the cooperation of the two federal bureaus mentioned and appropriated $15,000 for the expenses of the federal survey work.

In Maryland a general repeal and reenactment with amendments was made ('06 ch.188) of the 1904 law relating to oyster inspectors. The number of inspectors is increased and the tax rearranged. The culling law of 1904 is repealed and reenacted with amendments ('06 ch.439), making it necessary to cull oysters before throwing them into the well or bottom of boat. It is unlawful to transport unmerchantable oysters out of the state. A new law ('06 ch.468) applies the culling provisions and size limit (2½ inches) to the Potomac river to take effect only when Virginia passes concurrent legislation.

Governor Warfield in his annual message states the cause of the present oyster famine to be a reliance, "in the face of all experience," solely on the natural supply, while other states with a supply inferior in quality and quantity, have introduced cultivation.

New Jersey increased the appropriation for the protection of oyster beds from $2000 to $4000 ('06 ch.35).

South Carolina ('06 ch.60) likewise has regulated her oyster industry, the act including also terrapin, clams, shad and sturgeon. All beds of bays, rivers and shores of the sea not otherwise appropriated are to remain the property of the state for use as a common by the people for fishing and fowling. The Governor is to appoint a board of fisheries of three salaried members, which is to enforce all laws relative to oyster planting and cultivation, fishing and propagation; to have power to police the waters and make prosecutions; to recommend legislation. Four salaried inspectors may be appointed by the board, whose duties are to collect the taxes imposed by this act. Launches are to be provided for the use of the inspectors. Persons desiring to propagate shellfish, terrapin or fish may lease portions of the state bottoms for 20 years; but not over 500 acres to one individual or corporation. Oysters and clams planted and oyster shells deposited as cultch are made chattels of which larceny may be committed, although there be no interval between the severing and the taking away. Craft violating the law are to be forfeited. Nonresidents may not catch clams, oysters or terrapin from public grounds. May 1 to October 1 is made a closed season, save for replanting. Dredges must not be used in water less than 12 feet deep. Oysters in the shell must not be transported out of the state. Oysters must be culled and those less than 3 inches long returned to the water. An impost tax is placed upon all oysters, clams, terrapin and shad taken for the market, whether from natural or planted beds or waters. The proceeds go to the support of the board, to defray the expenses of the act and to improve the natural and protect the private beds.

Mississippi ('06 ch.133) amended her oyster laws. The changes increase the number of deputy inspectors, require license fees from small boats as well as the larger ones, and packers must include private grounds in their statistical returns. The appropriation for improving the oyster reefs is increased from $12,000 to $15,000. The funds applicable to the expense of patrolling Mississippi sound are increased. The close season, the culling provision and the oyster tax are all made to apply to private grounds as well as public. Inspectors may spend $15,000 a year in dredging oysters where they are too thick and replanting where they are too thin, and in planting shells. New reefs shall not be fished for two years, unless opened by the board after one year. Exhausted reefs must be closed for one or two years. A standard oyster measure is established, and oysters in the shell are forbidden to be shipped out of the state for any purpose whatever, under heavy penalties.

Louisiana passed a comprehensive oyster law in 1904 (ch.52). The act is now amended and reenacted ('06 ch.178). Salaries are increased. The appointment of a chief surveyor is made mandatory. Appropriations for expenses are considerably increased. The oyster tax is to be collected by the Oyster Commission instead of by the parish officers. Disputed water bottom may not be leased until adjudication. Leases run in perpetuity instead of for 15 years. Dredges may be used in a minimum depth of 10 feet of water instead of 15. The definition of "natural reef" is modified to include areas where oysters "have been found and fished within the past two years."

Virginia ('06 ch.207) forbids the use of "drag boxes," tubs, sacks or other receptacles for taking oysters by dragging over bottoms. This law is apparently aimed at evasions of the dredging law.

Terrapin. New Jersey ('06 ch.63) devotes an act to the protection and regulation of the fishery for this valuable animal. Statutes rarely designate the objects of fisheries by their technical names but this one is entitled: "An act for the protection of Malaclemmys palustris, commonly called diamond-backed terrapin," and the expression is used throughout. The chief features of the law are: close season, April-November; use of nets of any sort, or weirs, in capturing forbidden; size limit, 4 inches; penalty for destroying eggs; fish and game commissioners, protectors and wardens may arrest for violations of act, and may without warrant search for terrapin and liberate in the water those illegally held. There is no liability for damages on account of the arrest, seizure or liberation.

In South Carolina the oyster law ('06 ch.60) cited above covers terrapin in part. The impost tax is 5 cents on each one caught for market. It is unlawful to sell or ship them without the Board of Fisheries stamp certifying to payment of tax. Marshes may be leased for propagating terrapin.

Fishways. Kentucky ('06 ch.115) requires "fish ladders or roads," over dams where the "annual tides" are not high enough to admit the passage of fish, to be maintained during April, May and June. The Governor of Wisconsin in his message called attention to the laws of 1905 requiring dams, booms and piers to be equipped with a special kind of patented fishway, and remarks that there is no necessity for fishways in booms and piers and that a patented fishway should not be required at all. In accordance the Legislature ('05 ex. sess. ch.16) amended chapter 461 of the laws of 1905, leaving power mainly to the Commissioners of Fisheries.

Alaskan fisheries. Federal legislation contained a measure to prohibit aliens from fishing in the waters of Alaska, aimed particularly at the Japanese. But chief importance attaches to the act (U. S. '05-'06 ch.298) for the protection and regulation of the fisheries of Alaska. This deals particularly with the salmon fishery. It taxes all prepared fish products, exempting the salmon pack, in cases where the packers operate hatcheries, at the rate of 10 cases for every 1000 king or red salmon fry liberated. Inspection of these hatcheries is provided for. Various restrictions are placed on the use of nets, and for net-fishing a weekly close season is established from Saturday to Monday. The Secretary of Commerce and Labor, who is charged with enforcing the act, may close over-fished streams and set aside waters as preserves for spawning purposes. Salmon dead longer than 48 hours may not be salted or canned for sale as food. Fishermen and packers are required to report annually to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor such facts as may be required by this official, who is given power to make additional regulations, not inconsistent with law, for the purpose of giving effect to the act. District Courts in Alaska or United States District Courts in any of the Pacific coast states may try violations, and the court has discretion to inflict heavy penalties.

Sponge fishery. Florida statutes forbid the use of diving apparatus in securing sponges. Recently a large number of Greek sponge divers began to ply their occupation off the Florida coast, but outside the territorial limit. A federal law to take effect May 1, 1907, drafted in accordance with suggestions of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, forbids the landing, curing or offering for sale at any place in the United States of sponges taken with diving apparatus, save that sponges so taken between October 1 and May 1, in water more than 50 feet deep, are excepted. A size limit of 4 inches maximum diameter is fixed.

It is worthy of note that this federal legislation was invoked on account of lack of state power to deal with the question; that the fishery affected is outside state or national jurisdiction; and that the desired end is gained indirectly, by barring the product of the offensive fishery from access to the country. Similar legislation in 1887 put an effectual ban for five years on the southern spring mackerel fishery, an American industry, in a futile attempt to increase the abundance of mackerel.

Miscellaneous. In New Jersey ('06 ch.271) it was made a misdemeanor to take fish from nets without permission of owner, or to wilfully mutilate fishing gear. The Governor of New York recommended the recodification of forest, fish and game laws. The Governor of Ohio referred to the statement of the Fish and Game Commission complaining of lax fishing laws for Lake Erie, and asserting the necessity of stringent legislation to stop the rapid depletion of fish in Ohio as a whole as well as Lake Erie. In Louisiana ('06 ch.121) all the fish found in the state were declared to be the property of the state. It was made unlawful to catch bass save by angling and to use drugs, explosives or sawdust to catch or kill fish. No one may kill fish at night by "striking" (spearing). Likewise in Ohio ('06 p.257) a license is required for fishing other than by angling, and ('06 p.250) electricity, poisons or explosives are forbidden. In Rhode Island ('06 ch.1344) waters stocked at the expense of the state may not be fished until three years thereafter. Maryland appointed a joint special committee of the General Assembly to confer with Pennsylvania in reference to propagation of food fishes in the Susquehanna river.

Colorado decision. A court decision in Colorado is of unusual interest in its bearing on the public right of fishery in streams stocked at public expense, and in the diverse opinions of the justices. It is Hartman v. Tresise, Supreme Court of Colorado, June 5, 1905.

Plaintiff owned both sides of a stream stocked with fish by the state. His lands were fenced and posted as required by law, and were acquired from the United States after Colorado had been admitted to the Union. Defendant, against the will of plaintiff, fished in the stream, asserting the right thereto and refusing to desist when requested. Plaintiff brought action. Defendant justified under the state Constitution providing that "the water of every natural stream, not heretofore appropriated, within the state of Colorado, is hereby declared to be the property of the public, and the same is dedicated to the use of the people of the state, subject to appropriation as hereinafter provided" (§ 5 art. 16), and under a state law of 1903 which provides "that the public shall have the right to fish in any stream in this state, stocked at public expense, subject to actions in trespass for any damage done property along the bank of any such stream."

The District Court dismissed the action on the constitutional and statutory grounds above and held that a perpetual easement was conceded to the state over public lands for the natural streams which are a part of such lands, by the ratification of the state Constitution by the United States government, and that therefore lands acquired from the public domain were to this extent subject to the right of the state.

On appeal the Supreme Court of Colorado reversed the judgment, four justices concurring, one concurring specially, and two dissenting. The main opinion held that the state Constitution in declaring unappropriated waters the property of the public and dedicating the same to the use of the public subject to appropriation, did not grant any right of fishery or easement for its enjoyment, nor has such right been otherwise recognized as vested in the state, save by the statute of 1903 which is held void for at least two reasons:

1 By an enabling act and subsequently an ordinance the state relinquished all right to public lands within the territory, and the exclusive right of Congress to dispose of those lands has been recognized. Plaintiff acquired the lands from the United States subject to no right of fishery or easement. The common law holds, and owning both sides of the stream the plaintiff has exclusive right of fishery within his lands. Defendant conceded this construction at common law.

2 Even if defendant had the right to fish, he had no easement over plaintiff's land, and the statute of 1903, attempting to make lawful a trespass by providing for recovery in case of damage, is unconstitutional since it permits the taking of private property for private use without just compensation. It is, moreover, in conflict with laws of Congress relating to the disposition of public domain.

The justice concurring specially agreed in the reversal but not in the reasoning of the main opinion. He excluded the bearing of riparian rights, and resolved the difference under the game law of 1899 which he held to rule by elimination of the law of 1903, in whose unconstitutionality, and reasons therefor, he concurred. He believed the question of issue to be simply summed up by query of amicus curiae: Has a fisherman the right to fish where the game law says he shall not? The law of 1899 governs, which provides that "no person shall shoot from a public highway at game, or fish, or hunt game in any inclosure not public land, without the consent of the owner or persons in charge of the same."

The dissenting opinion is emphatic and at twice the length of the main and special opinion together. It traces the development of fishery rights from early times in England, and insists that despite exceptional rulings in a few cases, as in Illinois, the great weight of authority upheld the doctrine that the public right of fishery ran with the public right of way in streams; that the Constitution (§ 5 art. 16) makes the waters of every natural stream in Colorado public; that the right of fishery has always existed in public streams and this not because they were navigable but because they were public. "There is no higher authority for making a stream public than the declaration of the people themselves . . ." State legislation has habitually assumed right of use of the stream bed as well as public ownership of the water.

Riparian rights depend on state laws and the plaintiff, having filed upon his lands under the State Constitution, never had any right of way in the bed of the stream save subject to the right of the public. The public has believed that the right of public fishery existed in all the streams of the state, and this they have shown by establishing hatcheries and by protecting the fish, having spent more than $300,000 in this way since the adoption of the Constitution.

• If plaintiff's contention is correct all this is to inure not to the benefit of the people at whose expense it has been done, but to that of adjacent proprietors.

The action of plaintiff neither alleges nor pretends any injury whatever and "is unconscionable and should not be tolerated even though it might be maintained on technical grounds. . . All that is complained of is that he (defendant) stepped his foot upon the plaintiff's barren soil, or boulders and gravel (in the bottom of the stream) and this is made the basis of an action. The doctrine de minimis non curat lex ought to apply with striking force in a case so barren of right, equity or justice as this. If not, it may well be inquired as to when, and under what circumstances, the court will cease to take cognizance of trifles."

The denial of right of public fishery will amount to a confiscation of nearly half a million dollars of the people's money and its diversion to the benefit of a few. In that event the Legislature to be consistent should dismantle the fish hatcheries, abolish the fish warden's office, and refuse further appropriations for propagation and protection.

Comment is then made on the special concurring opinion, the reasoning of which is also held untenable. The question is not, Has a fisherman the right to fish where the game law says he shall not? but it is, May a fisherman fish where the game law says he may? Even assuming the unconstitutionality of the proviso in question of the act of 1903 it does not necessarily follow that the act of 1899 governs, for it was possibly repealed by the repealing clause of the act of 1903. Into this question it is unnecessary to go, for in imputing to the clause "subject to actions for trespass for any damage done the property along the banks of any such stream," permission to damage property and consequent unconstitutionality, words are read into this statute which are not there. "The statute gives the right to fish in the stream and that is all that it gives." If this may be done without injuring property then the Constitution is not violated. It is apparent that it may be so done. It is a forced construction which finds in the provision for recovery for damage authority to commit a trespass. The fair construction is that the statute shall not be so construed as to permit damage.

Defendant, against the will of plaintiff, fished in the stream, asserting the right thereto and refusing to desist when requested. Plaintiff brought action. Defendant justified under the state Constitution providing that "the water of every natural stream, not heretofore appropriated, within the state of Colorado, is hereby declared to be the property of the public, and the same is dedicated to the use of the people of the state, subject to appropriation as hereinafter provided" (§ 5 art. 16), and under a state law of 1903 which provides "that the public shall have the right to fish in any stream in this state, stocked at public expense, subject to actions in trespass for any damage done property along the bank of any such stream."

The District Court dismissed the action on the constitutional and statutory grounds above and held that a perpetual easement was conceded to the state over public lands for the natural streams which are a part of such lands, by the ratification of the state Constitution by the United States government, and that therefore lands acquired from the public domain were to this extent subject to the right of the state.

On appeal the Supreme Court of Colorado reversed the judgment, four justices concurring, one concurring specially, and two dissenting. The main opinion held that the state Constitution in declaring unappropriated waters the property of the public and dedicating the same to the use of the public subject to appropriation, did not grant any right of fishery or easement for its enjoyment, nor has such right been otherwise recognized as vested in the state, legislation. Kentucky ('06 ch.90) gives the "State Board of Agriculture, Forestry and Immigration" the power to spend not exceeding $2000 either independently or, if a like sum is expended by the federal government in the same work, in cooperation with the Forest Service of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The only legislation during the year for tax exemption or bounty was enacted by Iowa ('06 ch.52). So called "forest reservations" (in private ownership), which must be at least 4 rods wide and contain not less than 2 acres with not less than 200 growing forest trees of enumerated species on each acre, are to be assessed for taxation at $1 an acre. Not more than one fifth of the living trees in any reservation may be removed in any one year, and within one year after the death or removal of any tree the owner must plant and care for another. Grazing in forest reservations is forbidden and violation of the act forfeits its benefits. The secretary of the State Horticultural Society is State Forestry Commissioner, without salary, and receives from deputies in the counties annual reports on forestry matters and the operation of the act for the use of the society. The act also favors "fruit tree reservations" under like conditions.

Several fire laws have been enacted during the year. Maryland ('06 ch.294) charges the forest wardens with the immediate duty of fire prevention and fire fighting. Their expense accounts are rendered to the State Forester, and paid by the counties on vouchers approved by him, and the county may recover from any landowner money which it has been obliged to pay out for fighting fire for his benefit. Fire notices are to be furnished by the State Forester and posted by the forest wardens. The penalty for negligently or wilfully firing another's woods is a fine of from $25 to $1000 and imprisonment of from 30 days to one year. Landowners setting fire on their own lands must carefully cut and pile the material, or clear around the land to be burned, and failure to do so, or allowing fire to escape to the injury of adjoining lands, is prima facie proof of wilfulness or neglect, creating civil liability for the injury resulting from the fire and for the cost of fighting it. Locomotives and engines in and near forest or brush which do not burn oil as fuel must be equipped with appliances to prevent the escape of fire, under a penalty of from $10 to $100 for every offense. The state and the county may recover from the violator of any of the foregoing provisions for all expenses incurred in fire fighting. New Jersey ('06 ch.123) empowers the State Board of Forest Park

Reservation Commissioners to appoint a State Firewarden and fix his salary. Town firewardens must be appointed by the township committees upon notice from the state board, which may appoint, if the committees fail to act, and are removable by the state board. There may be district firewardens within a township and deputy wardens to act in the absence or disability of the town firewarden. The State Warden supervises the local wardens, instructs them in their duties, notifies the state board of all vacancies on the roll of firewardens, sees that the townships are divided into proper districts, that the district firewardens are appointed, has charge of firewardens reports, ascertains the origin of fires, collects evidence and institutes prosecutions for the violation of the act and supervises bills against the state for fighting fires. The local wardens establish fire patrols when and where the state board prescribes, enforce all forest fire laws and the orders of the State Warden as to forest fires, patrols and fire fighting in their respective localities. They may plow land, set back fires, summon any male inhabitant to assist in fire fighting, and require the use of horses and tools for that purpose, under a penalty of $10 for disobedience. The State Warden, if present, controls fire fighting and may summon firewardens and their assistants from surrounding townships, whose expense in that case shall be paid wholly by the state. Any person may cross or work upon lands of another to extinguish fire. The state board may prescribe additional duties and make necessary regulations for firewardens and may purchase and distribute to them necessary material and equipment. The pay of local wardens and their employees unless fixed by the town committee shall be as follows: for firewardens, while fighting fires, $3 a day, while otherwise employed, $2 a day; for helpers fighting fire, $1, and at the rate of 20 cents an hour for more than five hours; for helpers on patrol or otherwise employed, $1.50. Detailed accounts are to be rendered by firewardens to the township authorities within one month after the service is rendered, with receipts for all disbursements of $1 and over. Such bills, when approved, are to be paid by the township, and one half repaid to the township by the state, but the state pays the entire cost of fire fighting on state forest reserves. The local warden reports within 10 days all fires burning over more than one acre to the State Warden, specifying the area burned over, the kind, age and quality of the standing timber, the quantity of forest products, fences, bridges and buildings destroyed, with estimate of their value, the cause of the fire, the names of all persons known or sus-

now receiving $4500 in place of the former salaries of $4000 for associate justices and $4200 for the president of the court. Governor Vardaman of Mississippi recommended an increase in the salaries of Chancery and Circuit Court judges, but no action of this nature was taken by the Legislature. In Florida, the people were not willing to follow the Governor and Legislature, rejecting, in November 1906, the two constitutional amendments, proposed in the preceding year ('05 p.432), which provided for increases in the salaries of justices of the Supreme Court and circuit judges (Review of Legislation 1905, p.28) and for grading the salaries of judges of criminal courts according to the population of the counties.

In New Jersey ('06 ch.318) a change was made in the classification of judges of the Court of Common Pleas so as to increase the salaries of such judges, in counties containing between 35,000 and 45,000 inhabitants, from $2000 to $3000, while in Massachusetts the privilege of retiring on half pay, when 70 years of age, after 10 years' consecutive service, was extended to judges of probate and insolvency ('06 ch.474). In California, a decision of the Court of Appeal (Johnson v. Gunn 84 P. 370) will probably overturn much of the legislation regulating the compensation of justices of the peace. It was held that the constitutional prohibition upon special legislation prevented the Legislature from fixing ('01 ch.234) the compensation of justices of the peace, in townships of a certain population, in counties of a certain class, at a different amount than that which was established in townships of the same population in counties of different classes. In Missouri, it was held (State v. Messerly 95 S. W. 913) that a similar constitutional provision rendered invalid an act ('99 p.215) which changed the compensation of justices of the peace from fees to salary in cities of a certain population, "lying wholly within one township, except cities operating under special charter."

The increase of judicial salaries has been partly due to a general movement for raising the compensation of officials which has extended to the clerical and administrative officers of courts. During 1906 acts were passed increasing the compensation, in certain cases, of court stenographers in Ohio ('06 ch.6), New York ('06 ch.321) and Virginia ('06 ch.321); of prosecuting attorneys in New York ('06 ch.73), Ohio ('06 p.160) and South Carolina ('06 ch.143). In New Jersey ('06 ch.143) the official interpreter in

in any state. On the contrary, the New York Legislature failed to repass the proposed constitutional amendment ('04 p.1936) authorizing the Legislature to increase the number of judges of the Court of Appeals (Review of Legislation 1904, g3).

Supreme Court commission. Kentucky adopted ('06 ch.6) the plan of a temporary Supreme Court commission to relieve the crowded docket of the Court of Appeals, authorizing a majority of such court to appoint a Commissioner of Appeals to hold during the pleasure of the court which is required to terminate the appointment when the business of the court does not require such commissioner.

Intermediate Appellate Court. Governor Terrell of Georgia called attention to the crowded docket of the Supreme Court, but recommended the establishment of a permanent court of appeals to relieve the situation. The Legislature incorporated this plan in an amendment to the Constitution ('06 p.24), which was adopted by the voters in October 1906. The new court consists of three judges elected for terms of six years with the same compensation as judges of the Supreme Court. In defining the jurisdiction of this court Georgia did not follow the usual practice of considering the pecuniary value of the cases but left to the Supreme Court appellate jurisdiction in all civil cases from the Superior Courts and in all cases of capital felony, and gave to the Court of Appeals appellate jurisdiction in all other cases coming from the Superior Courts and from the city courts of Atlanta, Savannah etc. This division of jurisdiction between the new court and the Supreme Court makes possible the conflict of decisions which has arisen in a number of states which have adopted this plan. While the Court of Appeals must certify to the Supreme Court all questions involving the state Constitution or the Constitution of the United States and may certify any other question of law and is bound by the instruction given by the Supreme Court in such cases, there is no provision for the Supreme Court to order the Court of Appeals to certify any question. In some states a single judge of the Intermediate Appellate Court can secure a transfer of a case to the Supreme Court if he considers that there is a conflict of decisions, but the Georgia act does not contain such a provision. It may be safely predicted that there will be a number of the Court of Appeals which are not in harmony with the decisions of the Supreme Court. There have been five Circuit Courts of Appeal for the parish of Orleans, this Public prosecutor. Slight evidence of a tendency to introduce a degree of central control over local public prosecutors appears in an act of Louisiana ('06 ch.123) requiring the Attorney General, in certain cases, to designate a district attorney to prosecute proceedings for the state in another district than that for which he was elected. Of a similar nature is the renewed recommendation of Governor Montague of Virginia that the commonwealth's attorneys be required to report at least quarterly to the Attorney General the style and disposition made of every cause to which the commonwealth is a party.

Practice of law

During the period under review there was no legislation of importance regarding the practice of law. The voters of Indiana refused to adopt the proposed amendment to the Constitution ('05 ch.171) giving to the Legislature the power to prescribe qualifications for admission to bar, hence the existing provision, under which every voter of good moral character may practice law in all courts, will be retained. A New York law ('06 ch.154) dispenses with the former requirement for an annual publication of all additions to the official register of attorneys.

CORPORATIONS¹

RICHARD C. HARRISON A.M. LL.B.

There was little important legislation affecting business corporations enacted during 1906. Of the leading charter-granting states New York and New Jersey alone had legislative sessions. New Jersey has a commission at work on a revision of the corporation statutes and consequently did little, pending its report. Insurance legislation engrossed the attention of the New York Legislature to the exclusion of other corporation matters.

State supervision and reports. One law, introduced by the Insurance Investigation Committee of New York, is of general interest to corporations. It has been made a misdemeanor for an officer or employee of a corporation to make or concur in making any false entry in the books or accounts or to omit or concur in omitting any statement required by law to be made in any written report of its affairs or pecuniary condition ('06 ch.286).

Georgia has required the filing of an innocuous annual report by all corporations except banks doing business in the state. No information concerning the financial condition of the corporation is required except a statement of its authorized capitalization and only a general statement of the nature of the business engaged in need be included. Beyond furnishing a list for purposes of taxation it is difficult to see what purpose such a report can serve ('06 p.105).

Massachusetts has given the Supreme Judicial Court greater discretion in the matter of penalties for failure to file the annual report or the tax returns by removing the minimum per diem fine ('06 ch.346).

The same state has sought to prevent abuse of power by corporations by permitting the Supreme Judicial Court, upon relation of the Commissioner of Corporations, to enjoin corporations from doing business not authorized by charter and foreign corporations attempting to do business in the state without first having met the statutory conditions (Mass. '06 ch.372).

Incorporation and management. Two interesting statutes affecting incorporation were adopted during 1906.

Massachusetts removed the restriction against the incorporation of companies to distil or manufacture intoxicating liquors under the general act. Theretofore such corporations could be formed only under special act of Legislature (Enterprise Brewing Co. v. Grime, 173 Mass. 252, 256; see also Op. Atty. Gen. June 16, 1899).

Mississippi provided for the domestication of foreign corporations by reincorporation ('06 ch.114). This act does not obligate foreign corporations to become domestic as a condition of doing business in the state since they may still take advantage of chapter 45 of the laws of 1900.

Several minor laws affecting the management of corporations are worthy of notice.

Ohio joined the respectable minority of states which allow the sale of the entire corporate assets and franchise ('06 p.229). A proviso is made that the sale shall not be for the formation of any trust or combination in restraint of trade or competition and the usual provision is made for the appraisal and purchase of the shares of dissenting stockholders.

The same state has increased the maximum number of directors of business corporations from 15 to 30 ('06 p.294). This is the highest number allowed by any state having a fixed maximum and appears of doubtful expediency in view of the unwieldiness of large directing boards.

New York has somewhat simplified its cumbersome procedure for changing the corporate name by reducing the time required for publication of notice from six to three weeks ('06 ch.89).

Owing to the San Francisco disaster, California was confronted with the problem of providing for the replacing of destroyed charters and corporate records. The former may be refiled in the form of a certified copy of the original papers filed with the state officers ('06 ch.61). Any corporation, by its board of directors, or any stock or bond holder may petition the Superior Court where the principal office of the company is located to restore destroyed records. Provision is made for a hearing, upon notice to all interested parties, and for the disposition of stock, bonds and papers whose ownership can not be determined ('06 ch.63).

Rights and liabilities of stockholders. Virginia has amended its law concerning notice of stockholders meetings so as to require written notice to each stockholder in addition to the notice by publication ('06 ch.17). This brings the state in line with the great majority of jurisdictions in this matter.

The most important change in stockholders liability was the adoption by Kansas of the constitutional amendment proposed by chapter 542 of the laws of 1905, reducing liability for debts to the amount unpaid on stock subscriptions in place of liability to a sum equal to the stock held. This leaves but two states, California and Minnesota, allowing recourse against holders of fully paid stock to others than laborers and employees.

Rhode Island now permits corporations to amend their charters so as to give the company a lien on its stock for assessments or other indebtedness of a stockholder to the corporation or to give the company a preference in the matter of purchasing its stock from a stockholder desiring to sell. If, however, these powers are added by amendment it is very properly provided that all the stockholders must assent ('06 ch.1326).

Dissolution and receivers. Virginia has adopted an act allowing corporations to dissolve without resort to judicial proceedings upon vote of two thirds in interest of the stock and filing the proper certificate with the State Corporation Commission. At any time within three years from the dissolution or within a like time from the expiration of a charter the corporation may be revived by a two thirds vote of the stock ('06 ch.327).

New York has adopted an important act aimed at abuses incident to receiverships both on the part of receivers and their attorneys. The compensation of both has been placed under the direct supervision of the court. The receiver's commissions, except in proceedings for voluntary dissolution, have been cut from 5% on the first $100,000 received and disbursed and 2½% thereafter to an amount not exceeding 2½% straight commissions on the amount handled, in the discretion of the judge appointing him. The maximum fee of $12,000 a year is retained, as is the provision permitting the court to grant, on the final accounting, an extra allowance of 2½% on the gross sum handled in cases where the services rendered warrant it. The compensation of attorneys of receivers must be fixed by contract approved by the Supreme Court ('06 ch.349).

New York has simplified voluntary dissolution by judicial proceedings by materially reducing the time required to complete the same ('06 ch.293). Anything which encourages those interested in an unsuccessful corporation to resort to regular proceedings for dissolution rather than mere abandonment of the enterprise is a step in the right direction.

Combinations and monopolies. Arkansas revised its antitrust act of 1899 to include combinations in restraint of trade formed outside the state. A provision was added whereby purchasers of commodities from offending corporations are not only not liable for the purchase price but may recover any money or value which they have paid therefor. A rather curious provision was inserted Tenure and term. During the period under review there were no measures of importance affecting the tenure and term of judges. In Ohio, slight changes were made in the terms of judges of the Supreme Court ('06 p.269) and of the judges of the Courts of Common Pleas ('06 p.119) in order to make them conform to the provisions of the amendment to the Constitution ('04 p.640) adopted in November 1905, which established biennial elections and required even-year terms for administrative and judicial officials.

Compensation. The existing movement for the increase of judicial salaries which has been in progress for nearly a decade (Review of Legislation 1903, g2-4; 1904, g1, g2; 1905, p.27-29) found expression in a number of enactments during 1906. In Louisiana, the salaries of justices of the Supreme Court were increased from $5000 to $6000 ('06 ch.74) and under an amendment to the Constitution ('06 ch.137) adopted in November 1906, providing for a reorganization of the Courts of Appeal (see below, "Intermediate Appellate Court") the salaries of the judges of the Court of Appeal for the parish of Orleans were increased from $4000 to $5000. Another amendment to the Constitution of Louisiana ('06 ch.216), adopted at the same time, provides a uniform salary of $3000 for all district judges, instead of $2000, $2500 and $3000, which had been provided as the salaries of the judges of the three classes, respectively, into which the judicial districts of the state had been divided by the Constitution of 1898. Virginia is another southern state in which an increase in judicial salaries was made ('06 ch.321), the judges of the Supreme Court of Appeals now receiving $4500 in place of the former salaries of $4000 for associate justices and $4200 for the president of the court. Governor Vardaman of Mississippi recommended an increase in the salaries of Chancery and Circuit Court judges, but no action of this nature was taken by the Legislature. In Florida, the people were not willing to follow the Governor and Legislature, rejecting, in November 1906, the two constitutional amendments, proposed in the preceding year ('05 p.432), which provided for increases in the salaries of justices of the Supreme Court and circuit judges (Review of Legislation 1905, p.28) and for grading the salaries of judges of criminal courts according to the population of the counties.

In New Jersey ('06 ch.318) a change was made in the classification of judges of the Court of Common Pleas so as to increase the salaries of such judges, in counties containing between 35,000 and 45,000 inhabitants, from $2000 to $3000, while in Massachusetts the privilege of retiring on half pay, when 70 years of age, after 10 years' consecutive service, was extended to judges of probate and insolvency ('06 ch.474). In California, a decision of the Court of Appeal (Johnson v. Gunn 84 P. 370) will probably overturn much of the legislation regulating the compensation of justices of the peace. It was held that the constitutional prohibition upon special legislation prevented the Legislature from fixing ('01 ch.234) the compensation of justices of the peace, in townships of a certain population, in counties of a certain class, at a different amount than that which was established in townships of the same population in counties of different classes. In Missouri, it was held (State v. Messerly 95 S. W. 913) that a similar constitutional provision rendered invalid an act ('99 p.215) which changed the compensation of justices of the peace from fees to salary in cities of a certain population, "lying wholly within one township, except cities operating under special charter."

The increase of judicial salaries has been partly due to a general movement for raising the compensation of officials which has extended to the clerical and administrative officers of courts. During 1906 acts were passed increasing the compensation, in certain cases, of court stenographers in Ohio ('06 ch.6), New York ('06 ch.522) and Virginia ('06 ch.321); of prosecuting attorneys in New Jersey ('06 ch.73), Ohio ('06 p.160) and South Carolina ('06 ch.79) and official interpreter in New Jersey ('06 ch.143).

Supreme Court. During the period under review no legislation was enacted increasing the number of judges of the Supreme Court in any state. On the contrary, the New York Legislature failed to repass the proposed constitutional amendment ('04 p.1936) authorizing the Legislature to increase the number of judges of the Court of Appeals (Review of Legislation 1904, 83).

Supreme Court commission. Kentucky adopted ('06 ch.6) the plan of a temporary Supreme Court commission to relieve the crowded docket of the Court of Appeals, authorizing a majority of such court to appoint a Commissioner of Appeals to hold during the pleasure of the court which is required to terminate the appointment when the business of the court does not require such commissioner.

Intermediate Appellate Court. Governor Terrell of Georgia called attention to the crowded docket of the Supreme Court, but recommended the establishment of a permanent court of appeals to relieve the situation. The Legislature incorporated this plan in an amendment to the Constitution ('06 p.24), which was adopted by the voters in October 1906. The new court consists of three judges elected for terms of six years with the same compensation as judges of the Supreme Court. In defining the jurisdiction of this court Georgia did not follow the usual practice of considering the pecuniary value of the cases but left to the Supreme Court appellate jurisdiction in all civil cases from the Superior Courts and in all cases of capital felony, and gave to the Court of Appeals appellate jurisdiction in all other cases coming from the Superior Courts and from the city courts of Atlanta, Savannah etc. This division of jurisdiction between the new court and the Supreme Court makes possible the conflict of decisions which has arisen in a number of states which have adopted this plan. While the Court of Appeals must certify to the Supreme Court all questions involving the state Constitution or the Constitution of the United States and may certify any other question of law and is bound by the instruction given by the Supreme Court in such cases, there is no provision for the Supreme Court to order the Court of Appeals to certify any question. In some states a single judge of the Intermediate Appellate Court can secure a transfer of a case to the Supreme Court if he considers that there is a conflict of decisions, but the Georgia act does not contain such a provision. It may be safely predicted that there will be decisions of the Court of Appeals which are not in harmony with previous rulings of the Supreme Court.

In Louisiana, where there have been five Circuit Courts of Appeal in addition to the Court of Appeal for the parish of Orleans, this conflict of decisions has been prevented by the power of the Supreme Court (Const. art. 101) to require cases to be certified to it from the Courts of Appeal, but considerable embarrassment was created by the Constitution of 1898 (art. 99), which required that, after July 1, 1904, each of the five Circuit Courts of Appeal should be composed of two of the District Court judges, to be designated by the Supreme Court, instead of judges specially elected for this purpose. As early as 1902 an attempt was made ('02 ch.126) to amend the Constitution so as to provide two Circuit Courts of Appeal, each consisting of three specially elected judges, to take the place of these five courts, but the amendment was rejected by an overwhelming majority of the voters. The effort was renewed at the next session of the Legislature ('04 ch.132) but the proposed amendment was again defeated, though by a much smaller majority. Encouraged by the growth of sentiment in its favor the supporters of the movement secured the submission ('06 ch.137) of practically the same amendment and this time it received popular ratification. The only important difference between the amendment proposed in 1904 (Review of Legislation 1904, 64) and the one which was recently adopted is that the former provided that the judges, including the judges of the Court of Appeal for the parish of Orleans, should receive a salary of not less than $4000 while the amendment of 1906 fixes the salary at $4000, except in the case of the latter judges, who are to receive $5000.

Other intermediate courts. During the period under review there has been evidence that the natural growth of judicial business has continued to necessitate some relief for courts exercising original jurisdiction. While the voters in Florida rejected the proposed constitutional amendment ('05 p.433) providing for a Court of Record in Escambia county, in Louisiana they adopted an amendment ('06 ch.12) which they had rejected two years previously ('04 ch.29) providing for two district judges in place of one in the First Judicial District. Georgia adopted the amendment ('05 p.66) proposed in 1905, which authorizes the Legislature to increase or diminish the number of judges of the Superior Court for any circuit, while in Virginia where the Constitution of 1902 had established 24 circuits but had authorized the Legislature to increase or diminish the number after January 1, 1906 (§ 94. 95), the total was increased to 29 ('06 ch.117). In Kentucky and Mississippi, where the Governors recommended an increase in the number of judicial districts, the Legislature failed to enact the necessary legislation. In the former state, however, the Legislature adopted another means, recommended by the Governor to improve the condition, by providing ('06 ch.23) for a special judge, to be appointed by the Governor, whenever the regular judge can not attend at a special term because the court is in session in some other county of the district.

The provision for a special judge in a district is similar to that for a Supreme Court commission in that it is generally regarded as a temporary expedient. This was the view of Governor Heyward of South Carolina, who recommended in view of the increase in the number of circuits in the preceding year (Review of Legislation 1905, p.31) that the law, adopted in 1900 (ch.186), providing for special courts be repealed. In New Jersey, on the other hand, a law, adopted in the same year ('00 ch.149), which provided for the appointment by the Governor of three special circuit judges to hold the Circuit Court in the respective counties, in the absence of a justice of the Supreme Court, and which was amended in 1904 (ch.29) and 1905 (ch.268) so as to increase the number of judges to be appointed to four and five respectively, was again amended ('06 ch.285) by adding two additional judges for terms of seven years, making seven special judges whose offices are apparently intended to be permanent. Another New Jersey law ('06 ch.119) provides that in any county two or more Circuit Court judges may sit separately at the same time for determining matters, and in Kentucky a law ('06 ch.13) was adopted which provides in great detail for the division of cases in Circuit Courts having continuous sessions and two judges. All criminal cases go to one judge, while civil cases are to be divided equally between the two judges by a secret lot, which is so arranged as to prevent collusion in assigning particular cases to one of the judges. If one judge is overburdened, the civil cases are to be divided between the two judges in the ratio of one to two.

Police courts and justices of the peace. During the past year there were no important changes in the law affecting police courts or justices of the peace. New Jersey ('06 ch.286) provided for the appointment, by the Governor, of a commission of three persons to prepare and submit to the next regular session of the Legislature a revision and codification of the laws relating to police courts. In Massachusetts ('06 p.843) there was referred to the next Legislature a proposed constitutional amendment authorizing the Governor, with the consent of the Council, to remove justices of the peace and notaries public.

Public prosecutor. Slight evidence of a tendency to introduce a degree of central control over local public prosecutors appears in an act of Louisiana ('06 ch.123) requiring the Attorney General, in certain cases, to designate a district attorney to prosecute proceedings for the state in another district than that for which he was elected. Of a similar nature is the renewed recommendation of Governor Montague of Virginia that the commonwealth's attorneys be required to report at least quarterly to the Attorney General the style and disposition made of every cause to which the commonwealth is a party.

Practice of law

During the period under review there was no legislation of importance regarding the practice of law. The voters of Indiana refused to adopt the proposed amendment to the Constitution ('05 ch.171) giving to the Legislature the power to prescribe qualifications for admission to bar, hence the existing provision, under which every voter of good moral character may practice law in all courts, will be retained. A New York law ('06 ch.154) dispenses with the former requirement for an annual publication of all additions to the official register of attorneys.

CORPORATIONS¹

only under special act of Legislature (Enterprise Brewing Co. v. Grime, 173 Mass. 252, 256; see also Op. Atty. Gen. June 16, 1899).

Mississippi provided for the domestication of foreign corporations by reincorporation ('06 ch.114). This act does not obligate foreign corporations to become domestic as a condition of doing business in the state since they may still take advantage of chapter 45 of the laws of 1900.

Several minor laws affecting the management of corporations are worthy of notice.

Ohio joined the respectable minority of states which allow the sale of the entire corporate assets and franchise ('06 p.229). A proviso is made that the sale shall not be for the formation of any trust or combination in restraint of trade or competition and the usual provision is made for the appraisal and purchase of the shares of dissenting stockholders.

The same state has increased the maximum number of directors of business corporations from 15 to 30 ('06 p.294). This is the highest number allowed by any state having a fixed maximum and appears of doubtful expediency in view of the unwieldiness of large directing boards.

New York has somewhat simplified its cumbersome procedure for changing the corporate name by reducing the time required for publication of notice from six to three weeks ('06 ch.89).

Owing to the San Francisco disaster, California was confronted with the problem of providing for the replacing of destroyed charters and corporate records. The former may be refiled in the form of a certified copy of the original papers filed with the state officers ('06 ch.61). Any corporation, by its board of directors, or any stock or bond holder may petition the Superior Court where the principal office of the company is located to restore destroyed records. Provision is made for a hearing, upon notice to all interested parties, and for the disposition of stock, bonds and papers whose ownership can not be determined ('06 ch.63).

Rights and liabilities of stockholders. Virginia has amended its law concerning notice of stockholders meetings so as to require written notice to each stockholder in addition to the notice by publication ('06 ch.17). This brings the state in line with the great majority of jurisdictions in this matter.

The most important change in stockholders liability was the adoption by Kansas of the constitutional amendment proposed by chapter 542 of the laws of 1905, reducing liability for debts to the amount unpaid on stock subscriptions in place of liability to a sum equal to the stock held. This leaves but two states, California and Minnesota, allowing recourse against holders of fully paid stock to others than laborers and employees.

Rhode Island now permits corporations to amend their charters so as to give the company a lien on its stock for assessments or other indebtedness of a stockholder to the corporation or to give the company a preference in the matter of purchasing its stock from a stockholder desiring to sell. If, however, these powers are added by amendment it is very properly provided that all the stockholders must assent ('06 ch.1326).

Dissolution and receivers. Virginia has adopted an act allowing corporations to dissolve without resort to judicial proceedings upon vote of two thirds in interest of the stock and filing the proper certificate with the State Corporation Commission. At any time within three years from the dissolution or within a like time from the expiration of a charter the corporation may be revived by a two thirds vote of the stock ('06 ch.327).

New York has adopted an important act aimed at abuses incident to receiverships both on the part of receivers and their attorneys. The compensation of both has been placed under the direct supervision of the court. The receiver's commissions, except in proceedings for voluntary dissolution, have been cut from 5% on the first $100,000 received and disbursed and 2½% thereafter to an amount not exceeding 2½% straight commissions on the amount handled, in the discretion of the judge appointing him. The maximum fee of $12,000 a year is retained, as is the provision permitting the court to grant, on the final accounting, an extra allowance of 2½% on the gross sum handled in cases where the services rendered warrant it. The compensation of attorneys of receivers must be fixed by contract approved by the Supreme Court ('06 ch.349).

New York has simplified voluntary dissolution by judicial proceedings by materially reducing the time required to complete the same ('06 ch.293). Anything which encourages those interested in an unsuccessful corporation to resort to regular proceedings for dissolution rather than mere abandonment of the enterprise is a step in the right direction.

Combinations and monopolies. Arkansas revised its antitrust act of 1899 to include combinations in restraint of trade formed outside the state. A provision was added whereby purchasers of commodities from offending corporations are not only not liable for the purchase price but may recover any money or value which they have paid therefor. A rather curious provision was inserted to aid the prosecution of offenders. The Attorney General or prosecuting attorney may obtain from the court an order for the examination in Arkansas of any nonresident officer, director, employee or agent together with the books and records in his custody before a commissioner. The latter may serve notice upon the attorney of record for the defendant or upon any officer, agent or employee requiring the production of the witness and record within six days plus the necessary time required for travel. Upon failure to produce the witness at the time and place fixed in this notice, judgment shall be rendered against the corporation by default ('05 ch.1). $5000 was appropriated to employ counsel to assist the Attorney General to enforce the act ('05 ch.88).

In Iowa, Governor Cummins's recommendation relative to the prohibition against lowering the price of oil in any locality sufficiently to destroy competition bore fruit in chapter 169 of the laws of 1906, prohibiting such unfair competition under penalty of a fine of not less than $500 nor more than $5000 or imprisonment for not less than one year or both.

Ohio has granted immunity from prosecution to witnesses in prosecutions for violations of the law against conspiracy and combinations in restraint of trade ('06 p.313).

Congress has confined the immunity clause in the prosecution of monopolies to natural persons, thus remedying a flagrant abuse of a very necessary privilege (U. S. '05-'06 ch.389).

During 1906 one antitrust statute was declared unconstitutional. The Supreme Court of Montana held that Penal Code § 321, prohibiting combinations to fix prices, violated that provision of the federal Constitution guaranteeing to all persons the equal protection of the law, since it excepted from its provisions persons engaged in horticulture or agriculture (State v. Cudahy Packing Co. et al., 82 P. 833).

ROADS¹

M. O. ELDRIDGE, CHIEF OF RECORDS, OFFICE OF PUBLIC ROADS, UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

The Legislatures of only about one fourth of the states were in session during 1906, but notwithstanding this fact some very important road laws were enacted.

Arrangements were completed for the issue of $50,000,000 in bonds in New York and an appropriation of $5,000,000 was made from the proceeds to build state aid roads. Rhode Island followed the example of New York by providing for the issue of $600,000 in bonds, the proceeds of which are also to be applied to the permanent improvement of state roads.

A state highway commission was created in Virginia and a new form of state aid adopted whereby the state is to furnish convict labor free to any county which will agree to supply necessary materials and teams and have the roads built under the direction of the State Highway Commission. In view of the facts that this form of aid involves but little outlay on the part of the state and that it is of substantial assistance to the counties it may be adopted in many other states where the revenues are small and where the convict labor and road problems are alike perplexing.

It is gratifying to note that while the legislators throughout the country are making extensive preparations for the permanent improvement of the public roads, some of them have not forgotten the earth road. In Iowa and Virginia, the value of the split log drag has been emphasized by the passage of appropriate laws authorizing its use in the maintenance of earth roads.

The regulation of motor vehicles on country roads and city streets continues to claim a considerable share of the attention of the law-makers. The Legislature of New Jersey was the first to recognize the fact that automobile tires, bound with chains to prevent slipping, are injurious to macadam and gravel roads. Suitable legislation to prevent the use of such tires was enacted.

During 1906 the Legislatures of 12 states adopted 81 bills relating to road improvement and automobile regulations. A brief synopsis of 39 of the most important of these measures is presented herewith.

Georgia. The speed of automobiles is limited to 10 miles an hour in Catoosa ('06 p. 395), Gwinnett ('06 p. 426) and Walker ('06 p. 460) counties. These acts also require that automobiles be registered in these counties and that their numbers be properly displayed. Fines and penalties are attached for violations.

Iowa. An act ('06 ch. 62) authorizes the use of the split log drag in maintaining earth roads. Dragging must be done under the direction of the road superintendents, who may allow not to exceed 50 cents a mile for each dragging or $5 a mile for dragging the road for one year.

Another act ('06 ch. 63) provides that all persons who use wagons on public roads with tires not less than 3 inches in width for hauling loads exceeding 800 pounds in weight shall receive a rebate of one fourth of their highway tax, provided such rebate shall not exceed $5 a year.

Kentucky. Any county in this state owning turnpike roads is authorized ('06 ch. 106) to collect tolls on such roads, provided the same is agreed to by a majority of the legal voters of the county. The fiscal courts are required to appropriate to each road on which tolls are collected all the money so collected for the purpose of keeping the road in repair.

Where the capital stock of turnpike roads is owned by the commonwealth of Kentucky and any county or counties, the share owned by the state may be transferred ('06 ch. 45) to the county, provided the county agrees to maintain the road and to collect no tolls thereon.

If agreed to by a two thirds vote of the people, a special tax of not to exceed 25 cents on each $100 worth of assessed property may be levied for the construction and repair of roads ('06 ch. 74). In working out the tax the road overseer may allow $1 for each day's work and $2.50 a day for each two horse team and wagon.

Maryland. The law regulating the use of automobiles was re-enacted ('06 ch. 449) with certain changes and amendments, the most important of which are as follows: The registration fee is increased from $1 to $3, one third of which is retained by the Secretary of State as his fee and the balance turned over to the state road fund. When automobiles are sold or rented they may be operated for five days under the old number, after which time they must be reregistered. All chauffeurs operating automobiles on the roads or streets are required to register with the Secretary of State. Persons so registering are required to pay $2, one half of which is retained by the secretary for his fee and the other half turned over to the state road fund. Every person so registering is supplied with a chauffeur's badge, which is nontransferable. Fines and penalties are attached for violations.

Massachusetts. The Massachusetts State Automobile Association was authorized ('06 ch. 234) under the direction of the Massachusetts Highway Commission to erect signboards on the public highways for the safety and convenience of those using the same.

The act regulating the use of automobiles is amended ('06 ch. 412) limiting the speed of motor vehicles to 20 miles an hour outside the limits of cities and towns; to 12 miles an hour inside the thickly settled or business parts of cities and towns; and to 8 miles an hour around curves on highways or at street crossings. Other minor changes were also made in the original act, such as fixing a penalty for those who refuse to give their names to police officials and the revoking of licenses to those who have repeatedly violated the speed regulations.

Another law ('06 ch. 353) authorizes the Massachusetts Highway Commission to prepare rules and regulations governing the use of automobiles and fixes fines and penalties for violation of the same.

Mississippi. Boards of county supervisors in counties having a population of 30,000 are authorized ('06 ch. 109) to issue bonds for the purpose of permanently improving roads from cities of at least 14,000 population to public parks. Such bonds may extend over a period of not to exceed 25 years, and bear interest at the rate of not to exceed 6%. The interest and so much of the principal as may become due each year is paid out of a special tax levied for the purpose.

New Jersey. The salary of the State Commissioner of Public Roads is increased ('06 ch. 70) from $1500 to $5000 a year; the allowance for his expenses is also increased from $1500 to $4000 a year, and the salary of the State Supervisor, who shall be a competent civil engineer, is fixed at $2500 a year.

Roads constructed by the boards of chosen freeholders of the counties with or without state aid may be maintained ('06 ch. 322) by the township, town or borough in which they are located under the direction of the State Commissioner of Public Roads.

The purchase or condemnation of toll roads which have been permanently improved with stone or gravel may be paid for, one third by the state and two thirds by the county. Ten per cent of the two thirds may be paid by the township or municipality in which the road is located. The county may borrow money temporarily to pay its share for such roads.

Roads partially in one county and partially in another may be improved ('06 ch. 38) jointly, each county paying its proportionate share of the cost. Lands for widening may be secured by gift, condemnation or purchase, and bonds may be issued for a period of 50 years, bearing interest at 4% to pay for improvements. The levy of a tax to pay interest and principal is provided for.

A general law regulating the use of automobiles (ch. 113) was approved April 12, 1906. It provides that automobiles shall be supplied with brakes and suitable signals; and that motor vehicle tires shall not be fitted with chains when used upon gravel, macadam or other improved roads or pavements, except when the same are covered with snow or ice. Drivers of motor vehicles must be licensed and vehicles registered annually, the fee being $1 for license and $3 for registration. The speed of automobiles is limited to 1 mile in 7 minutes on sharp curves on streets and highways; 1 mile in 4 minutes at the junction of prominent crossroads in the open country; 1 mile in 5 minutes in built up parts of cities or villages; and on country roads, 1 mile in 3 minutes. Penalties and fines are provided for violations of the various provisions.

New York. The issue of the $50,000,000 in bonds, provided for in section 12, article 7 of the Constitution, was legalized May 16, 1906 (ch. 469). Funds realized from the sale of these bonds are to be expended under the Higbie-Armstrong state aid law in the permanent improvement of public highways, the state paying one half of the cost, the counties 35% and the townships 15%. The bonds are to be issued in two classes, A and B. Class A bonds are to run for a period of 50 years and bear interest at 3½% and are redeemable from a fund maintained by the state. An annual tax of .0055 of a mill upon each $1 of property for every million dollars worth of bonds outstanding is provided to pay interest and to create a sinking fund with which to redeem class A bonds.

Class B bonds also bear interest at the rate of 3½% and are to be paid for in 50 equal annual instalments by the counties and townships wherein the proceeds have been applied to the improvement of highways. Such counties and towns as do not desire to avail themselves of funds derived from the sale of these bonds may pay their share of the cost of state aid roads in cash. Interest and principal on class B bonds are paid by a tax which is levied on a basis of 70% upon the county and 30% upon the town. $5,000,000 was appropriated out of moneys realized from the sale of these bonds for the purpose of improving the highways according to the state aid laws.

An act to authorize towns to raise money for highway purposes and to prevent snow blockades on highways by the substitution of wire for other fences was reenacted with amendments ('06 ch. 311). Not to exceed $100 a year may be levied and expended by the commissioners of highways for the purpose of purchasing fence wire. This wire may be donated to property owners who will agree to use it on the highways in replacing fences which now cause snowdrifts.

Section 37 of chapter 568 of the laws of 1890 is amended ('06 ch. 149) so as to provide that persons who live on and improve private roads shall be given credit for such work, or that such roads may be annexed to the highway district, and if in a money system town, the person so working a private road may be paid for work performed thereon.

The town law relating to highway commissioners is amended ('06 ch. 384) so as to provide that towns which have adopted the money system and have more than one highway commissioner may reduce the number of commissioners to one, if agreed to by a majority of the voters at a special meeting.

The highway law is amended ('06 ch. 363) providing that supervisors and the highway commissioner or commissioners of towns receiving state aid shall annually report to the State Engineer on forms provided for the purpose, all expenditures for road and bridge purposes, sources of revenue, machinery and tools on hand. The highway commissioners and supervisors are required to use such forms for keeping accounts of moneys collected and expended as may be prescribed by the State Engineer.

The highway law is amended ('06 ch. 423) to provide that if $1000 is not sufficient to pay necessary road expenses and for purchase of tools etc., such additional taxes as are necessary may be authorized by ballot at any town meeting. If the amount is over $500 and less than $1000 and is approved by the town board, the board of supervisors shall cause the amount to be levied and collected as other town taxes.

Ohio. The county commissioners are authorized ('06 p. 32) to issue bonds for the purpose of reimbursing boards of road commissioners appointed by the county commissioners for indebtedness in connection with road improvements carried on by virtue of any legislative act. Such bonds may be issued for such amounts and such length of time and for such rate of interest as the county commissioners may determine. The commissioners are authorized to levy an annual tax on all property within the precinct or road district out of which to pay interest and principal.

The Revised Statutes of Ohio in relation to the National road are amended ('06 p. 156) so as to provide that the county commissioners in any county through which the National road (Old Cumberland road) passes, are authorized to require township trustees to maintain such portions of the road as pass through their township.

The act authorizing township trustees or county commissioners to organize special road districts is amended ('06 p. 292) so as to authorize road commissioners to purchase road rollers and such other road machinery and appliances as may be necessary.

An act passed April 2, 1906 (p. 320) provides that automobiles shall be registered and fitted with brakes, signals etc. The speed of automobiles is limited to 1 mile in 3 minutes on country roads; 1 mile in 4 minutes in cities and villages, except in the closely built sections where the speed shall not be greater than 1 mile in 6 minutes and at curves, corners, and on steep grades on highways and streets, the speed shall not be greater than 1 mile in 15 minutes. Chauffeurs are also required to register and display a chauffeur's badge, which is nontransferable. Fines and penalties for violations are provided for.

Rhode Island. An act passed February 20, 1906 (ch. 1312) provides for the issue of scrip or certificates of indebtedness in the name of the state to the amount of $600,000. They are to mature in at least 30 years and bear interest at the rate of not to exceed 3%. $200,000 worth of these bonds are to be issued and sold before January 1, 1907, and the balance on or before January 1, 1908, in such instalments as the State Treasurer may determine. The amount necessary to pay the annual interest and provide for a sinking fund to pay off the bonds is to be included in the annual appropriation bill for state expenses. The funds derived from the sale of these bonds are to be expended under the direction of the State Board of Public Roads in the construction of a system of state roads, the state paying the whole cost, as provided by law.

Virginia. Provision is made ('06 ch. 73) for the establishment of a state highway commission, consisting of a state highway commissioner appointed by the Governor, who shall be a civil engineer and a citizen of the state, and the professors of civil engineering of the University of Virginia, the Virginia Military Institute and the Virginia Agricultural Mechanical College. The highway commissioner is to receive a salary of $3000 a year and traveling expenses, and an assistant to the commissioner is to receive $1800 and traveling expenses. Clerks and other assistants are also provided for. $16,000 is appropriated for the use of the commission from July 1, 1906 to February 28, 1908. The commission is to collect and disseminate useful information on road building, to prepare plans and specifications for the improvement of roads throughout the state, when requested by local authorities to do so, and to direct the construction of such roads.

The commission is further authorized to furnish as many convicts from the State Prison as may be necessary to build the roads according to the specifications of the commissioner and under the direction of an engineer appointed by him, provided the local authorities agree to furnish all necessary material, tools and teams. The State Highway Commissioner is authorized to have general supervision of the construction and repair of the main traveled roads throughout the state and to recommend to local authorities and to the Governor needed improvements in the public roads. The professors of civil engineering at the universities and colleges here mentioned are required to aid the commissioner when not actually engaged in their academic work by inspecting road work and giving such information as may be desired.

An act approved March 6, 1906 (ch. 74) provides for the use of state convicts in the improvement of public roads and in the preparation of road-building material throughout the state. Such convicts when engaged in road work in any county are placed under the direction of a civil engineer and road builder appointed for the purpose by the State Highway Commissioner. $25,000 is appropriated annually out of which is to be paid the transportation of the convicts to and from the penitentiary and for guarding, clothing and feeding them when engaged in road work.

The law relating to the establishment, construction and permanent improvement of public roads is amended ('06 ch. 318) providing among other things that the county superintendents of roads, road district boards, and road subdistrict supervisors and the State Engineer shall have control, supervision and management of the public roads. The bill also provides that the regular county levy and district levy may be used in defraying the county's and district's proportion of the expense of constructing roads for which state aid has been obtained. Rules and plans for making roads in the counties are subject to the approval of the State Highway Commissioner.

The boards of supervisors of the various counties are authorized ('06 ch. 212) to enact such local legislation as may be necessary for the protection of roads and bridges providing the same is not in conflict with the Constitution or the general laws of the state.

Bonds may be issued ('06 ch. 107) by any county for the purpose of permanently improving roads and bridges in any county provided the same is agreed to by the qualified voters of the county. The maximum amount of such bond issue shall not exceed 10% of the total taxable values and the bonds shall be payable in not to exceed 34 years. A tax of not to exceed 90 cents on each $100 worth of property must be levied to create a sinking fund and to pay the interest thereon. All roads built from such bond issues must be constructed according to the directions of the State Highway Commissioner.

Counties in which no special road law is in force may be divided by the board of supervisors into road subdistricts. The qualified voters of such subdistricts are authorized to meet and elect a chairman, secretary, treasurer and one or more road surveyors and to assess a subdistrict road tax of not to exceed 50 cents on each $100 of taxable valuation. These funds are to be expended under the direction of the road surveyor of the subdistrict and according to such instructions as he may receive from the State Highway Commissioners, the county supervisors or the subdistrict meetings. The surveyor is also required to furnish such information to these authorities as may be requested from time to time. The State Highway Commissioner is required to furnish plans of split log and other drags to supervisors of subdistricts and to instruct them in their proper use.

An act relating to turnpike companies is so amended ('06 ch. 297) as to provide that when the collection of tolls on turnpikes has been suspended for a period of four months on account of the bad condition of the same, as authorized by law, three disinterested supervisors shall be appointed by the Circuit Court to make an examination of the road, and if the road is still reported to be in bad condition the Circuit Court is authorized to require the turnpike company to forfeit its franchise and charter.

Only one tollgate may be erected on any one stretch of toll road in which the state of Virginia has an interest ('06 ch. 322), and such tollgates shall be at least $\frac{1}{2}$ mile from any city.

Chapter 43 of the Code of Virginia is so amended ('06 ch. 326) as to provide that taxes levied for road purposes by the boards of county supervisors shall not be levied on property located in incorporated cities and towns which maintain their own streets.

Automobiles must be registered ('06 ch. 299) with the Secretary of State and provided with suitable lights, brakes and signals. The speed of automobiles is limited to 15 miles an hour on country roads and 8 miles an hour in cities and towns and on sharp curves on country roads. Fines and penalties for violating the various provisions of the act are provided for.

ASA WYNKOOP, NEW YORK STATE LIBRARY

The legislation of 1906 relating to libraries is small in amount but is not lacking in significant items. Its most general characteristic perhaps is the tendency shown in different states to accept principles which have been tried and proved advantageous in other states, a direct effect of the study of comparative legislation which has of late been especially emphasized. Of distinct innovations there are none, unless the provisions in the Ohio law for the establishment of county library systems be claimed as such. As in other years, the matter receiving the most general attention is the state library. While most of the items relating to it are of a routine character, there is evidence even in these that it is receiving each year a better recognition as a part of the state's economy, and in two cases its powers, resources and efficiency are distinctly enlarged. The principle of contract, enabling communities to hire for a specific consideration library privileges from a library not owned by the community, a principle introduced into the laws of New York and Wisconsin in 1897 and which has since been widely adopted, receives further recognition this year in the laws of Ohio and Iowa. The subject of taxation for public libraries receives attention in two states, in one of which the legal rate of such taxation is advanced, and in the other, provision is made for issuing bonds for the erection of library buildings. In one state exemption from the operation of the collateral inheritance tax is granted. The state making the most decided advance during the year is Virginia, which doubles the annual appropriation for State Library purposes, confers many of the powers of a library commission on the State Library board and appropriates $7500 for the establishment of a system of traveling libraries.

The following is a summary by topics of the more important acts of the year:

Library commissions. No new commissions are created, but provision is made for enlarged work in Massachusetts and Ohio. In Massachusetts the principle so long maintained, that state aid should be confined chiefly to moral stimulus and guidance, seems to have been greatly modified if not abandoned, and the commission is granted $2000 annually for the material aid of public libraries. Such aid is to be given chiefly to libraries in towns not exceeding $600,000 in valuation, and is to include gifts of books, personal visits, instruction in library matters and such other help as the commission may deem advisable. Ohio authorizes the commission to appoint a library organizer, whose duty shall be to furnish advice and information to persons interested in library work, to visit the public libraries of the state, to assist in promoting and organizing new libraries and to make an annual report to the commission of the library conditions of the state.

Founding and support. In Ohio, library boards are authorized to issue and sell bonds to provide for and furnish library buildings, subject to vote of the community. The total issue of such bonds must not exceed $3\frac{1}{2}$ mills on the dollar of assessed valuation of the district. A tax not to exceed .25 mill may be levied to provide a sinking fund for these bonds. Where a library owned by a private association offers its privileges free to the public, the township authorities are authorized to levy a tax of $\frac{1}{2}$ mill to compensate the association for this privilege. In case such library shall at any time cease to operate, all books and other property bought with the proceeds of this tax shall revert to the public. The law of 1902 is also amended enabling boards of education to provide free libraries for townships, as well as for cities, villages and school districts; extending the provisions of that act to libraries jointly owned by two or more districts; and providing that a tax of 1 mill may be levied on each district for such libraries. In Iowa, cities or towns of 6000 population or less are authorized to levy a library tax of 3 mills on the dollar, instead of 2 mills as formerly. An additional tax of 3 mills may also be levied in such communities to provide a library site and building. Libraries which are open to the free use of the public not less than three days a week are exempted from the collateral inheritance tax.

Traveling libraries. New Jersey provides for traveling libraries to be used exclusively in the penal and correctional institutions of the state and appropriates $1000 for the carrying of the act into effect. Ohio, which holds first place in the number of centers reached by traveling libraries, increases the annual appropriation for this work from $8000 to $9200. Virginia, in response to a strong recommendation in the Governor's message, makes provision for a comprehensive system of traveling libraries under the direction of the State Library Board. These libraries are to be loaned to any public school in the state under such rules as may be prescribed by the State Library Board. Books to be used for school libraries must be approved jointly by the State Board of Education and the State Library Board. $7500 is appropriated for inaugurating the system, of which not more than $5000 may be used the first year.

Library instruction. Three states make better provision for library instruction. New York makes its first direct appropriation to the State Library School, amounting to $7900 plus any part of $3000 received from its tuition fees. Ohio appoints a special state officer to be known as Library Organizer, whose duty it is to visit the libraries of the state and to give advice and instruction to any persons interested in library matters. Massachusetts makes an appropriation for the purpose of enabling the commission, among other things, to provide for "visits to libraries" and "the instruction of librarians."

State library. New York passes an act providing for the acquisition of a site and for the erection of a State Education Building to house the Education Department including the State Library and the State Museum. An initial appropriation is made of $400,000 for procuring a site and architectural plans. For the combined expenses of the State Library, Library School and Educational Extension Division an increase is made in the appropriation from $132,720 to $150,200. Ohio increases the annual appropriation to the State Library from $23,060 to $24,140. Maryland provides for the appointment by the Governor and Senate of a custodian of works of reference at a salary of $720 a year. The Governor in his message urged the importance of establishing a Department of Legislative Reference but no action was taken beyond that just noted. Mississippi creates the office of Assistant State Librarian with a salary of $600 a year. Virginia, in response to a recommendation in the Governor's message that larger compensation be given to the librarian and his chief assistant and that legislative sanction be given to the plans of the librarian for rehabilitating the history of the state, increases the annual appropriation for State Library purposes from $7010 to $14,690.

School libraries. The only general act on this subject is that of Louisiana, which provides that when $10 shall be raised by patrons and friends for establishing a library in any public school or grade, an equal sum shall be appropriated for the same purpose by the parish school board; or when $5 shall similarly be raised for the enlargement of any such library, the school board shall appropriate not less than $5 nor more than $15 for the same purpose. No more than one appropriation a year is to be made to any school or grade library. Books are to be selected from lists approved by the State Superintendent of Education. The felonious destruction or removal of such books is defined as larceny. As noted under another heading, Virginia provides for the supplying of books to any public school in the state through the system of traveling libraries.

Law libraries. Ohio provides that county commissioners shall provide rooms and bookcases, together with light and heat, for the libraries of county law library associations, at the expense of the county. Iowa increases the annual appropriation to the law department of the State Library from $2500 to $4000. Numerous local acts are passed in New York, relating chiefly to appropriations to judicial district or Supreme Court libraries. No clear tendency is shown in these acts, as they reflect local need or influence rather than any general principle.

Public documents. Massachusetts appoints a committee consisting of the Secretary of State, Commissioner of Public Records and the State Librarian to investigate the distribution and use of state documents and to report to the next Legislature. Ohio provides that public documents 10 years after date of current use shall be put into the care of the State Library and the State Historical Department; they are to be classified, labeled and calendared; rooms in the new Historical, Memorial and Art building are to be set apart and equipped as a Hall of Public Archives. An appropriation of $2000 a year for three years is made for carrying the act into effect.

Miscellaneous. A special act in South Carolina is of general interest as indicating a possible solution of the race problem in library legislation in the South. This act provides that in the town of Union, where a Carnegie library has been established for the white race, a library may also be established and maintained for the colored people, in case the latter will furnish the means for the building and its equipment. When so built and equipped, "a just and suitable amount" shall be appropriated by the aldermen of Union for its support. Ohio authorizes county commissioners to receive gifts and bequests for the maintenance of county public libraries; to contract with any library organization for the free use of their library to the people of the county; and to levy a tax not exceeding $\frac{1}{2}$ mill for the maintenance of county libraries or to meet terms of the contract. Iowa enacts that county supervisors, township trustees and city or town councils may contract with the trustees of a library situated outside their civic divisions for the free use of such library by the district they represent; a tax of 1 mill may be levied for meeting the conditions of such contract. This state also provides that public library trustees shall have entire control of all moneys available by gift or otherwise for the erection of library buildings. New Jersey authorizes free public libraries to accept gifts and bequests of art objects and to meet such conditions regarding the care of such objects as may be stipulated in the gift or bequest.

PUBLIC PRINTING AND RECORDS¹

ADELAIDE R. HASSE, NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

Public documents. Printing. The following states held sessions in 1906: Georgia, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina and Virginia. Of these Iowa, Kentucky, New York, Ohio, Virginia, Kansas and Massachusetts passed laws affecting the printing and distribution of public documents. In the following review the acts of Arkansas of 1905 are included as well as a constitutional amendment made by the state of Oregon.

Arkansas passed one law in 1905 which concerned public printing ('05 ch.270). By this she amended section 6421 of Kirby's Digest and provided that all printing let under this section be done in the state of Arkansas. It is further provided that, should there be cause for belief that an agreement or combination exists among the bidders or printers of the state on any contract all bids may then be thrown out. The competition thereupon becomes free and open without regard to location. Iowa makes six amendments to the code ('06 ch.3). Section 1 of the act converts the official register from an annual to a biennial publication, to be issued in an edition of 40,000 copies in the odd numbered years. Section 2 is immaterial. Section 3 provides a new scale for the number of copies of each kind of document to be printed. This is most clearly stated in tabular form, and is as follows:

The executive council is given power to reduce the number of copies printed of any one document, whenever the books of the document accountant in the office of the Secretary of State show that a less number will supply all necessary needs for such publication. Section 4 of the act provides for an edition of 1000 copies of the collected documents bound in half sheep. In assigning the distribution of this edition the Secretary of State is made custodian of remaining copies of which he may dispose at his discretion. The state assumes the transportation charges on all matter distributed under this section. This retrenchment in state printing carries out Governor Cummins's recommendation in his message of January 8, 1906, for a statutory amendment reducing the number of copies of documents printed.

By virtue of act of March 16, 1906 (ch.42) and resolution of March 22, 1906 (p.545), Kentucky makes two important provisions relative to public printing. Under the act of March 16, the office of Superintendent of Public Printing is created. This officer is to be appointed by the Board of Printing Commissioners for a term of four years, at a salary of $1500 a year. The duties of the office are the superintendence of all printing done by the public printing contractor of the state under specifications furnished by the Board of Printing Commissioners. Under the resolution it is provided that a joint commission be appointed by the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate to revise the laws governing the public printing contract. The commission is directed to report to the Governor in time to enable him to transmit the report to the next session of the General Assembly. In his message of January 2, 1906, Governor Beckham comments on the saving to the state by reason of the change from the old system of electing the public printer to the present system of letting contracts to the lowest bidders. He refers in addition to defects still existing in the printing law and to the expediency of remedial legislation.

The bulk of New York's legislation of 1906 relative to public printing is all amendatory of the state printing law of 1901. Three amendatory acts and one act providing additional clauses to the act of 1901 were passed. The first act, of April 27, 1906 (ch.330) amends section 2 of the law of 1901 and provides that separate contracts, involving an expense of more than $500, may be made at any time for printing of any description not specifically mentioned in contract made under the amended act. The second act, of May 9, 1906 (ch.359) amends section 10 of the printing law of 1901 relating to bids for department printing, the amendment requiring a certified check of $10,000 to be presented with each bid. Forms for bids accompany the act. The third New York printing act of 1906, passed May 11 ('06 ch.417) adds sections 16 and 17 to the printing law of 1901. These new sections further define the powers and duties of the State Printing Board and limit the office expenses of the board to $10,000 a year. The act of May 16, 1906 (ch.476) amends sections 6, 7 and 8 of the printing law of 1901. This act affects the printing and delivery of the stitched but unbound copies of the legislative journals, bills, messages and reports. The journals are required to be printed in an edition of 759 copies within 48 hours after receipt of copy. They are to be delivered as follows:

STYLE	TO WHOM	NO. COPIES
Stitched.....	Superintendent of Documents of Senate.....	180
"	" " " Assembly.....	290
"	State officers	40
"	State Library	2
Bound	Clerks of Senate and Assembly.....	remainder

The bills are to be printed in an edition of 1000 copies of each bill within 24 hours after receipt of copy. They are to be delivered as follows:

STYLE	TO WHOM	NO. COPIES
Unbound.....	Superintendent of Documents of Senate.....	270
"	" " " Assembly.....	670
"	State Library	2
"	State officers	40

Of these bills the contractor is also required to print an additional 300 copies of any or all general Senate and Assembly bills respectively, and 500 copies of substitutes for engrossed bills as may be ordered by the clerks of the Senate and Assembly.

Of the Governor's message, reports of standing or select committees and other communications which may be ordered by either house, the contractor is required to print 759 copies of each. These are to be delivered as follows:

STYLE	TO WHOM	NO. COPIES
Stitched.....	Superintendent of Documents of Senate.....	180

Ohio, by act of April 2 ('06 p.108) amends section 321 and section 323 of her Revised Statutes. Section 321, while providing that the printing contracts be awarded to the lowest bidder, allows the Commissioners of Printing discretion in awarding the contract by providing that it shall go to that lowest bidder having proper facilities to insure prompt execution of the contract. It also provides that all printing done under the section be done within the state, and that certain printing must be done in Columbus or within 50 miles thereof.

By constitutional amendment of section 1, article 12, Constitution of 1857, adopted on initiative petition June 4, 1906, Oregon provides for legislative regulation of her public printing and binding.

On March 14, 1906, Virginia passed an act (ch.216) amending and consolidating chapter 19 of the Revised Code and subsequent acts relating to public printing. The actual changes in provisions effected seem not to be emphatically vital. While the number of copies to be printed and the distribution of the journals does not seem to have been altered, it may be of use to persons interested in public printing to know that the distribution of the majority of the reports is provided for in this act.

The Senate concurrent resolution 20 passed by the Kansas Legislature in 1903, but which failed to be published in the statute book of that year, is now printed as chapter 545 of the 1905 laws. It is a proposition to amend the Constitution of 1859 altering the mode of selecting the public printer from the former one of legislative appointment to the present one of popular election. The first election under this provision took place in November 1906.

Distribution. By virtue of chapter 80 of the laws of 1905 the Secretary of State of Arkansas is directed to send to the University of Arkansas a copy of all printed state documents providing the State Library is first supplied, and to send to the university copies of all state documents to issue from the press in the future. Section 3 of this act further directs the Secretary of State to send to the same university all surplus federal documents from the State Library. This provision is in direct conflict with the recent ruling of the Superintendent of Documents which denies to depository libraries the right of removal of federal documents.

Massachusetts follows up her statutory provisions for the distribution of her state documents by authorizing an investigation "of the distribution, use and preservation of state publications" ('06 r.57). The Secretary of the Commonwealth, the Commissioner of Public Records and the State Librarian are the persons authorized to make this inquiry, the result of which, with suggestions for such legislation as to them may seem expedient, they are to report to the next General Court.

Provision for the distribution of bound volumes of journals, bills and documents is made by New York ('06 ch.475), amending sections 12, 14 and 47 of the legislative law of 1892. Sections 12 and 14 are not germane to the subject of this article. Section 47 provides for distribution as stated, the result being as follows:

History. Records. Memorials. Chapter 215, acts of Arkansas, 1905, “Act to authorize the appointment of a history commission . . .” was vetoed by the Governor, was passed over his veto by the constitutional majority of both houses and was filed in the office of the Secretary of State on April 27, 1905. The provisions of the act empower the president of the Arkansas Historical Association, headquarters at Fayetteville, to appoint five persons from the active membership of the association, who are to constitute the Arkansas Historical Commission. It is made the duty of the commission to print a report, the nature of which is defined in the act, and the first number of which is to be submitted to the Governor in season for transmittal to the next session of the Legislature. Not less than 500 nor more than 1000 copies of this report are to be printed, the management of the sale and distribution of which are left to the commission. The commission is further directed to investigate the “present state of preservation of all extant sources of information concerning the history of Arkansas.” An appropriation of $1000 is made to aid in printing the above mentioned report and of $250 for expenses incurred in the aforesaid investigation. The commissioners serve without compensation.

Anniversary celebrations. Chapter 325 of the laws of New York, 1906, creates the corporation of the “Hudson-Fulton Celebration Commission,” names the members and trustees of the same and appropriates $25,000 for the purposes of the act.

Ohio authorizes ('06 p.163) county commissioners to appropriate money for county centennial celebrations after submission of the question to popular vote. This act became a law on April 14, 1906, without the Governor’s approval.

Archives. Records. Colonial laws. The only state passing an act on this subject during the past year was Iowa. This act ('06 ch.142) entitled "Preservation of Public Archives," was approved April 10, 1906. It provides that, subject to the judgment of the executive council, the State Library and the Historical Department of Iowa shall receive for custody all original public documents and other official papers 10 years after current use of such documents, etc. The executive council is authorized to equip apartments for this material in the Historical Memorial and Art building now in process of erection. Here the papers are to be arranged, filed and calendared, the rooms thenceforth being known as the Hall of Public Archives. The sum of $2000 a year for three years is appropriated for carrying out the purposes of the act under the direction of the trustees of the State Library and the Historical Department.

Historical societies. Kentucky passed an act on March 16, 1906 (ch.28) appropriating $5000 for the publication of The Register, a magazine of the society, for the purchase of objects of historical interest and for the salary of a secretary-treasurer.

Scenic and historic places. Only four acts were passed relating to this subject, one by New Jersey, two by New York and one by Rhode Island. New Jersey ('06 ch.100) appropriates $12,000 for the purchase of Old Tavern House, Haddonfield, thereby supplementing chapter 128 of the laws of 1902. New York appropriates $50,000 for the acquisition of the well known Watkins Glen property by act approved May 31, 1906 (ch.676) and $25,000 by act of same date (ch.686) providing for the preservation of the mansion and blockhouse formerly owned by Sir William Johnson. Rhode Island appropriates $1500 ('06 r.40) to be expended by the Secretary of State acting with the Rhode Island Historical Society for the purpose of suitably marking sites of historical interest in the state.

Memorial. Monuments. The liberal appropriation of $5000 is made by New Jersey to commemorate the ill advised policy of George 3 towards the American colonies. This grant is made as an acknowledgment of the efforts of the New Jersey chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution to secure the erection of a monument at Greenwich, Cumberland co., the object being to memorialize the burning of a cargo of tea on board the British brig Greyhound in 1774. When the $5000 shall have been expended for this purpose, the care and supervision of the monument devolve upon the freeholders of Cumberland county.

Remaining legislation on the subject of this article will be seen by reference to the Index of Legislation to relate to battle flags, grave markers, medals, memorial buildings, memorials on battlefields and memorials to individuals. By far the largest sums appropriated for memorials on battlefields were those made by the Southern States. Mississippi heads the list with an appropriation of $50,000, followed by Maryland with one of $25,000. These sums are for general monuments in memory of Confederate dead. Next in amount of appropriation is New Jersey, with $6000 for a regimental memorial. Again for memorials to individuals the Southern States lead in the generosity of the appropriations. Georgia makes two grants of $15,000 each for statues to Generals Gordon and Oglethorpe respectively. True Massachusetts does provide for a portrait of Lincoln but makes no specific appropriation, stipulating merely that the expenditure should be within $21,000.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY

Most of the tax measures in 1906 of general significance may be grouped as last year, under two main headings: (I) those relating to the general property tax, and (II) those relating to special forms of taxation. Under the general property tax come (1) study and reform of taxation; (2) objects selected for taxation; (3) the situs of personal property for taxation; and (4) modes of assessment and collection. Under special forms of taxation come (1) general business taxes and (2) various special taxes on corporations.

General property tax

Study and reform of taxation. The Governor of New Jersey suggested trying to reach the half billion dollars' worth of tangible personal property which now escapes the assessor; and he also recommended a commission to study the subject of taxation of various kinds of transportation corporations. The Governor of New York recommended that a commission be provided to inquire into the subject of taxation for state and local purposes, and accordingly a commission of 15 was authorized and appointed ('06 ch.346). The results of its study were transmitted to the Legislature January 15, 1907. The pamphlet of 189 pages contains four parts: (1) a main report signed by all the members, (2) three supplemental reports embodying differing views on the personal property tax and on possible substitutes for it in the form of a graduated habitation tax on an income tax, (3) some valuable appendixes, (4) drafts of proposed legislation. The main report, on the essentials of which all the members were agreed, is drawn in a conservative and practical spirit and it favors a graduated inheritance tax on the Wisconsin model instead of the present one, it somewhat simplifies the corporation taxes, and it changes somewhat the mode of applying the stock transfer tax. It favors also the extension of the plan of assigning to the localities a definite share of certain kinds of taxes, and suggests the apportionment each year to the local divisions of the variable surplus in the state treasury in excess of $10,000,000. The Tax Commission of California, appointed a year ago, made a very complete report, especially advocating the separation of state and local sources of taxation. This plan was also held up as an ideal by the Governor of Louisiana, who said that "the object aimed at would be the eventual separation of state and parish taxation, giving to each of these political divisions its own subjects of taxation, and its own assessment-machinery." The wisdom of the latter part of the suggestion is somewhat doubtful. The Governor of Ohio urged a further step in the reduction of the levy for state purposes in order to attain more fully the object of separation.

Taxable objects. Exemptions. The exemptions of the year may be classed under the five headings used in previous years: (1) Exemption of public property is not touched upon. (2) Exemption of special persons or businesses: Massachusetts ('06 ch.315) exempted to the amount of $1000 veterans of the Civil War and their widows, provided that the whole estate of the person does not exceed $5000. On the contrary, the law of South Carolina ('04 ch.252) exempting Confederate veterans from the business tax, was declared unconstitutional as denying the equal protection of the laws. (3) Exemption of fraternal, educational and religious institutions: Mississippi ('06 ch.119) exempted property operated for a Confederate soldiers home; Iowa ('06 ch.48) the funds of fraternal beneficiary associations; Texas ('05 p.410) the endowment funds of educational and religious institutions invested in bonds or mortgages or in land or other property for a period of two years, when this property was taken to protect loans; California ('05 p.1072) readopted the resolution of last year exempting a particular polytechnic college. (4) Exemption of tangible personal property to a limited amount: no measure of this sort was passed, but the law of Oregon ('03 ex. sess. p.28) relieving householders from taxation to a certain amount, was declared unconstitutional as opposed to uniform and equal taxation. (5) Exemption of credits and loans: Massachusetts ('06 ch.493) exempted from all taxation, within the state, bonds or certificates of indebtedness issued by the commonwealth; New York ('06 ch.90) exempted bonds of the city of Buffalo from city taxation only.

Taxation of intangible personalty. The Governor of Mississippi made the only recommendation that the holders of solvent credits be forced to list them for taxation. Maryland ('06 ch.794) passed an amendment of only local significance, imposing an income tax of 8% upon the gross amount of interest received from mortgages in one county (the same law already applied to nine other counties). In Louisiana ('06 ch.215) a constitutional amendment was submitted to the people providing for the exemption of mortgages, but it was rejected in November. In Tennessee, the Supreme Court declared unconstitutional a provision exempting state bonds from assessment in assessing the shares of stock in corporations, declaring this to be a nonuniform and unequal tax. The Governor of California recommended a constitutional amendment repealing the present prohibition of contracts for the payment of the tax on mortgages by the borrower; the Legislature adopted the constitutional amendment to be voted upon by the people. New York made the most important change of the year in mortgage taxation, amending the law of 1905 imposing an annual tax of ½% by substituting a recording tax of the same amount payable only once.

Situs of personal property. New York sought to reach more of the personal property of wealthy men nominally residing outside of the state by taxing ('06 ch.248) the personal property of nonresidents in some cases when its actual situs is in the state. Arkansas ('05 ch.146) made timber sold separately from the land personal property to be assessed where the timber is located, and ('05 ch.303) made timber rights separately assessable (apparently to be treated as real estate, though no formal declaration to that effect was made). Oregon's laws of 1905 (ch.156, 162) which sought to tax in several counties foreign sheep coming into the state for pasturage, and live stock pastured in more than one county, were declared unconstitutional as imposing unequal and nonuniform taxation.

Modes of assessment and collection. The Governor of Virginia advised the abolition of the office in each judicial district of Examiner of Record, the purpose of which is to reach intangible personal property; but no action was taken. The Governor of Louisiana recommended the election of assessors instead of their appointment by the Governor, and the establishment of a State Board of Equalization; and the Legislature acted on both suggestions ('06 ch.8, 63, 78, 182). Louisiana, in thus adopting the very unsatisfactory method employed in most other states, took a step in what is probably the wrong direction. New Jersey, moving the other way, provided ('06 ch.120) for a county board of taxation in each county, composed of three members, to be appointed by the Governor with the consent of the Senate. The only measure of the year looking toward central assessment was that of Arkansas ('05 ch.168) making it the duty of the Board of Railroad Commissioners to assess all private cars used in the state.

Special forms of taxation

The distinction between special forms of taxes on individuals and those on corporations is difficult to maintain this year, as the only taxes of that kind in 1906 applying to individuals are business taxes which are applicable also to corporations.

Business taxes. Georgia amended the general tax law ('06 p.21) providing a tax on the business of trading stamps, and made a special law applying to insurance business only. The Governor of Kentucky recommended a tax on the business of rectifying spirits, and the Legislature ('06 p.549) imposed a license tax of $1\frac{1}{4}$ cents a gallon. Louisiana ('06 ch.62) lowered generally the license taxes on business and professions.

Incorporation taxes. Arkansas ('05 ch.261) imposed a minimum fee of $30 for issuing a charter of $25,000 or less, and an additional $5 for each additional $25,000 of capital stock. This fee is in addition to that now required to be paid to the county of incorporation. Kentucky ('06 ch.2) imposed an incorporation fee of 25 cents a hundred words.

License taxes on corporations. California ('06 ch.19) raised the annual license tax on corporations from $10 to $20. New Jersey ('06 ch.19) imposed as a franchise tax, on certain public utility corporations not now subject to a tax on gross receipts, an annual fee of $1/10\%$ on stock up to $3,000,000 and of about $1/20\%$ on larger amounts. The Governor of New York called attention to an abuse in the corporation law, in that a foreign corporation with, for example, $3,000,000 of authorized stock, but actually employing only $200,000, all in New York, would have its license fee computed on the basis of $200,000, while a like domestic corporation would have to pay on its entire authorized capital. The law passed ('06 ch.474) attempts to correct this and various other minor difficulties in the corporation taxation.

Insurance. The Governor of Ohio questioned the wisdom of making insurance business a source of revenue beyond the expenses of the department of supervision. Louisiana ('06 ch.214) lowered the rate of taxation of premiums on life insurance companies and limited it to risks located in the state; and ('06 ch.66) defined more accurately the method of computing and assessing the insurance companies.

Banks. The Governor of New York again recommended the repeal of the tax on the surplus of savings banks. Decisions in two states overthrew former laws taxing banks: the Maryland law ('04 ch.212) relative to franchise tax on savings banks, being pronounced invalid because of defective title, and the law of Montana exempting personal property of trust deposit and security companies being pronounced unconstitutional as imposing an unequal tax.

Transportation and transmission companies. The Governor of Mississippi urged that railroads and other corporations should be taxed on their real value as nearly as is the farmer's wealth. The Governor of New Jersey recommended the taxation of the main stem of railroads at the average rate by the state, and a law ('06 ch.82) to this effect was passed. New Jersey likewise ('06 ch.290) imposed heavier franchise taxes on street railways, the annual franchise tax upon gross receipts, now 2%, to be annually increased $\frac{1}{2}\%$ until it attains in the year 1911 a rate of 5%. Maryland likewise ('06 ch.712) increased its tax on gross receipts of certain corporations, particularly transportation, safe deposit and fertilizer companies. The franchise tax on gross receipts of railroad companies is made a minimum of $1\frac{1}{4}\%$ and a maximum of $2\frac{1}{2}\%$ (formerly 8-10% and 2%). The tax on telegraph, express car, safe deposit and trust companies was made $2\frac{1}{2}\%$ (formerly 2%); on telephone, oil, pipe line, fidelity and some other companies, 2% (formerly 1%); and on electric light companies, 1% (formerly $\frac{3}{4}\%$); on electric construction and gas companies, and on fertilizer companies, $1\frac{1}{2}\%$. Oregon, by two laws, adopted on initiative petition June 4, 1906, imposed an annual license of 3% on gross earnings of express, telegraph, telephone, sleeping car, refrigerator car and oil companies.

Resume

The year shows some serious and valuable study of taxation, especially in the states of New York and California. The trend of sentiment is strongly toward separation of state and local sources of taxation. The exemptions of the year are exceptionally few and unimportant. Changes in the taxation of intangible personalty are also very slight, and, what is unusual in recent experience, the indications are perhaps as much in the direction of enforcing it as of abandoning it. The most important measure of this nature is the recording tax on mortgages in New York.¹ Continued effort to fix the situs of property where physical wealth lies is noticeable. One state (Louisiana) changes from the appointment of assessors by the governor to popular election by localities (a decentralizing move), while another state (New Jersey) extends the appointing principle, and one state (Arkansas) makes an important move toward central assessment.

The special taxation of corporations is the most noticeable tendency of the year. Incorporation or license fees are raised in at least five states (Arkansas, Kentucky, California, New Jersey, New York). In insurance taxation there are two indications (Ohio, Louisiana) of a tendency toward moderation. But in the taxation of transportation companies, three states (New Jersey, Maryland, Oregon) make pretty marked advances, those of New Jersey perhaps being the most important changes of the year, in the matter of corporation taxation.

INHERITANCE TAX¹

MAX WEST PH.D., SPECIAL EXAMINER, BUREAU OF CORPORATIONS, WASHINGTON, D. C.

There was but little inheritance tax legislation during 1906. The most important law was one repealing the Ohio direct inheritance tax of 1904. Governor Pattison, in his message of January 1906, expressed the belief that it was the wish of the great majority of the people of the state that the law should be repealed, and the Legislature adopted his suggestion by repealing it "except as to estates in which the inventory has already been filed at the date of the passage of this act" ('06 p.229). This curious exception would seem to impose a penalty for the prompt filing of inventories.

The Kentucky Legislature imposed a 5% collateral inheritance tax with an exemption of $500 and a discount of 5% if the tax is paid within nine months ('06 ch.22, art.19).

Governor Blanchard of Louisiana suggested that the tax on direct inheritances might well be reduced to 2½% and that on collateral inheritances to 5%, and recommended that the inheritance tax be made progressive. The Legislature adopted only the first part of his recommendation, reducing the direct inheritance tax to 2% and the collateral to 5% ('06 ch. 109). As before, the tax does not apply when the property inherited has borne its just proportion of taxes prior to the time of inheritance.

Iowa adds stepchildren and their descendants to the list of exempted relatives ('06 ch.54), and defines the exempted institutions so as to include hospitals, public libraries and public art galleries kept open to the free use of the public not less than three days of each week ('06 ch.55).

The New Jersey Legislature authorizes a discount of 5% on taxes paid within one year ('06 ch.228), and also provides that when no letters testamentary or of administration are taken out within one year from death it shall be lawful for the Comptroller of the Treasury to enter into an agreement in writing with any person or persons giving him information of the property liable to taxation, to pay to such person or persons out of the tax collected from such property such proportion thereof as shall be fixed by said comptroller ('06 ch.227).

The Governor of Georgia repeated the recommendation of an inheritance tax contained in his message of 1905, but no action seems to have been taken upon these recommendations.

STATE FINANCE¹

Public lands, parks and buildings. The most important suggestion regarding public lands made in governors messages of the year was that of the Governor of Virginia, who advocated a policy of state ownership of the riparian lands which, constituting a natural monopoly and likely to increase in value, he said, should not be disposed of in fee simple, but rented or leased for long terms. This recommendation in the direction of the single tax on land values was not acted upon by the Legislature.

The only important extension of the state park system authorized was in New York which extended Palisades park to include the mountain lands lying along the west bank of the Hudson in Rockland county ('06 ch.691).

California soon after the earthquake appointed a commission to purchase sites and to erect state buildings in San Francisco, and appropriated a half million dollars for the purpose (Cal. '06 ch.16). No state undertook a new capitol building, but three states (Kentucky, New Jersey and Wisconsin) provided for the completion, improvement or enlargement of the present capitol buildings. The Governor of Ohio recommended that an appropriation of $100,000 for a governor's residence be made, but neither this state nor any other took action on this subject. The only legislation on insurance of state buildings was in Kentucky ('06 ch.148-49) which withdrew the authority by which the public buildings of the state had been insured.

Public officials and accountability. Two indications are given of the tendency of salaries upward: Iowa ('06 ch.4) increased the salary of the clerk of the State Land Office to $1500 (formerly $1200); Maryland ('06 ch.551) increased by about 20% the salaries of most of the guards and attendants at the state's buildings in Annapolis. Louisiana ('06 ch.128) defined and made punishable as misdemeanors the use by officers of their positions for their own private interests, forbidding them to profit directly or indirectly from any contract in which they might have part. The Legislature of Virginia appointed the regular annual auditing committee required by the Constitution, whose duty is to examine the accounts of the state financial officers. The Governor of Virginia recommended the creation of the office of special accountant.

The Governor of Ohio recommended that it be made mandatory upon all those in charge of state institutions to purchase of the lowest bidder only after competitive bids had been called for.

Six of the states passed some legislation relating to the use of banks as state depositories (Cal. '05 p.1062; Ky. '06 ch.5; La. '06 ch.128; Md. '06 ch.453; Pa. '06 ch.11; Va. '06 ch.145). The purpose of these acts was almost exclusively to prescribe the method of selecting such depositories and to impose conditions making for greater security. Three governors touched upon this subject in their messages. The Governor of Mississippi advises the establishment of state depositories, but no action was taken in that state. Ohio and Pennsylvania advised the securing of $2\frac{1}{2}\%$ interest in place of 2% now paid by the banks acting as depositories, but in neither case was such action taken.

Debts. Virginia was the only state taking vigorous steps toward the payment of its debt. The sum of $74,000 annually was added to the present income of the sinking fund, and a formal declaration was made of the intention of the state to redeem all its obligations and to pay its outstanding indebtedness rapidly.

Tax rate. Idaho again passed a resolution to amend the Constitution ('05 p.441), as referred to in the review of last year, to repeal the sliding rate and to permit the rate to remain undiminished as the assessed valuation of property increased. This was adopted in November.

Altogether, this year was even less eventful in the matter of financial policy for the states than was last year. Not a single measure of large importance is noticeable, and the only measures of more than commonplace character are those mentioned in the foregoing brief summary.

STATE GOVERNMENT, LAWMAKING AND ELECTIONS¹

CHARLES EDWARD MERRIAM PH.D., ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR OF POLITICAL SCIENCE, UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

State government

Constitutions. No entirely new constitution was adopted in 1906, although numerous amendments were made. In Michigan the proposition to hold a constitutional convention was adopted at the 1906 election, and the question of calling a constitutional convention was referred by the Legislature of Maryland to a popular vote to be taken in November 1907. Governor Utter of Rhode Island recommended that a convention be assembled in that state, but no action was taken by the Legislature.

Oregon (initiative petition) provided that the question of calling a convention might at any time be referred to the people by the Legislature, and upon initiative petition must be so referred.

Amendments. An unusually large number of constitutional amendments, 70 all told, were submitted to the people in 1906. No less than 20 states voted upon amendments. California passed upon 14, Louisiana 12, Idaho 7, Florida, Oregon and New York 5 each. Of these amendments 46 were adopted by the voters, and 24 were rejected; in addition to which 6 amendments failed to pass the Legislature a second time in states where this is a necessary step. The bulk of these amendments was proposed in the Southern and Western States; only 9 were voted upon in the central and northeastern groups.

An interesting feature of the 1906 amendments was the application of the Oregon plan of proposing constitutional amendments by means of the initiative petition. Five such amendments were submitted to the voters of that state, and 4 were adopted by the people. The amendments favorably acted upon covered the local referendum, home rule charters, the submission of the question of calling constitutional conventions upon initiative petition, and state printing and binding, while a woman's suffrage amendment was defeated. It is not easy to exaggerate the importance of this Oregon departure, which opens up a new and interesting field of constitutional experiment.

In general, the amendments adopted covered such questions as taxation and finance, as, for example, the authorization of a bond issue or tax; or affected the salaries and number of judges and the jurisdiction of the courts. Among the amendments rejected, it is not easy to discover any general tendency or direction. In fact, with few exceptions the amendments considered do not touch upon any very fundamental principles in state government, but are strongly suggestive of unrest and dissatisfaction with existing governmental machinery.

Governor. No notable changes were made in the office of governor, except that his power of appointment was increased by the creation of new state offices to be filled by him. Governor Blanchard of Louisiana protested, however, against this general tendency and declared that popular election is the proper method of choice in such cases. In that state the Supreme Court judges, the Registrar of the Land Office, and the Commissioner of Agriculture and Immigration have recently been removed from the list of gubernatorial appointees and placed under the system of popular choice.

The salary of the governor was advanced from $8000 to $10,000 in Ohio ('06 p.365); but, on the other hand, the California constitutional amendment increasing the salary of the governor from $6000 to $10,000 was rejected by the voters ('05 p.1073).

Civil service. Civil service laws were recommended by the Governors of Ohio, Pennsylvania and Virginia, but only in Pennsylvania did legislation follow. There the reform movement produced a law ('06 ch.18) applicable to cities of the first class. This, however, includes Philadelphia only. The act provides for a commission consisting of three members, to be appointed by the mayor and to hold office for a term of five years. Appointments to the classified service are to be made from a certified list containing the four applicants averaging highest. Removals or reductions may be made, providing the employee is given a written statement of the reasons for such action, and is allowed to make a written answer. Both statements are then entered upon the public records of the commission. The exemption features of the law are interesting in that the commission may except any office from the classified service, provided a public hearing is given and any taxpayer who desires to be heard is given an opportunity. Exemptions may also be made "where peculiar and exceptional qualifications of a scientific, professional or educational character are required, and upon satisfactory evidence that, for specified reasons, competition in such special cases is impracticable, and that the position can best be filled by the selection of some designated person of high and recognized attainment in such qualities."

Massachusetts ('06 ch.210) provided that police officers under civil service should not be removed, reduced, suspended or transferred, except for just cause and for reasons specifically given in writing. Another act of the same state ('06 ch.306) provides that any appointing officer in a city under civil service shall, on application of the civil service commissioners, file with the auditor a list of city employees, stating the character of the service rendered, the title of the office, the regular salary or wages paid, and all other payments of any kind made to such appointees. A pension system for Union veterans of the Civil War is provided by a New Jersey law ('06 ch.252). Any such veteran who has served continuously for 40 years in state, county, city or township office may be retired by the authority having power to appoint his successor. In this case the pension to be paid is one half of the compensation received at the time of retirement.

New offices and boards. Inasmuch as 1906 was an off year in state legislation, the number of new offices and boards is a comparatively small one. Only some 20 were organized, while few were abolished. Agriculture, commerce, charities and corrections and public health are most largely represented, while industrial, educational and quasi scientific interests follow closely.

Boards of forestry were provided for in Maryland ('06 ch.294) and Rhode Island ('06 ch.1322), and a state board of agriculture, forestry and immigration in Kentucky ('06 ch.90)¹, while in Iowa the secretary of the State Horticultural Society was made State Forestry Commissioner ('06 ch.52). In Mississippi ('06 ch.102-3) the Department of Agriculture and Commerce was organized, to be under the charge of the Commissioner of Agriculture, Statistics and Immigration, elected by the people for a term of four years.

Of a commercial or financial character were the Rhode Island State Board of Accountancy ('06 ch.1370), the Virginia Bureau of Insurance ('06 ch.112), the Louisiana State Board of Equalization ('06 ch.182) and the Board of Liquidation of State Debt ('06 ch.20).

For the protection of the public health were the Massachusetts State Commission for the Blind ('06 ch.385), the New Jersey

Board of Undertakers and Embalmers ('06 ch.219), and for charitable purposes the Kentucky State Board of Control for Charitable Institutions ('06 ch.18)¹, the New York State Board of Managers of Reformatories ('06 ch.684), and the South Carolina State Board of Pardons ('06 ch.13).

Of an educational nature were the Kentucky Normal Executive Council, a board made up of state officers ('06 ch.102), and the Louisiana State Board of Examiners of Teachers, similarly composed of state officers ('06 ch.55).

In Mississippi the Legislature authorized the creation of the State Geological, Economic and Topographical Survey,² with power to appoint a State Geologist ('06 ch.III), and in Massachusetts a State Commission on Industrial Education was provided ('06 ch.505).

Of a miscellaneous character were the Maryland Board of Shell Fish Commissioners ('06 ch.711), the South Carolina State Board of Fisheries ('06 ch.60), the Kentucky State Racing Commission ('06 ch.137) and the New Jersey Chief Inspector of Power Vessels ('06 ch.91).

Temporary boards. Thirty-four temporary boards were authorized. Of these about half were intended to act in regard to some public memorial; others to represent the state at expositions; and others to choose a site for or supervise the construction of some public work of the state. The Legislature, furthermore, authorized the organization of 35 temporary boards or commissions, to make special inquiries or investigations. Eight of these were designed to draft or codify laws, while two, in Iowa and Wisconsin, were to investigate the subject of insurance; two others, in Louisiana and New York, to inquire into the subject of taxation; and three, New Jersey, New York and Ohio, the matter of water supply. Other subjects covered were boys' training, consumptives, spinal meningitis, fish, scallops and lobsters, cold storage poultry, armories, the block signal system, gas fixtures, memorials, riparian rights, and the University of Wisconsin

State institutions. A number of state institutions were authorized by the various Legislatures. Of these nine were concerned with charities and corrections, including institutes for tubercular patients in Iowa and Maryland and reform schools in Arkansas and Southern Carolina, and five with education, including the normal schools in Kentucky, a state school of agriculture in New York, and one such school for each congressional district in the state of Georgia.

Abolition of offices. A few offices were abolished by legislative action. The New York Board of Examiners of Barbers was abandoned ('06 ch.256), after an experience of four years.¹ The office of State Assayer and Chemist was abolished by Virginia ('06 ch.27), after an existence of 33 years. The River Improvement Commission of New York ('06 ch.418) and the Ohio Canal Commission ('06 p.304) were abolished, and their powers transferred to other departments of the state government.

Centralization. Centralizing tendencies in 1906 were not conspicuously evident. In Ohio the State Inspector of Oils replaced the inspectors of districts 1 and 2 ('06 p.359). In New York the characteristic method of control over state institutions was further exemplified in the creation of the State Board of Reformatories, to manage the Elmira and Napanoch reformatory institutions ('06 ch.684). This system involves a special board for each special class of institutions, so that New York now has a commissioner of lunacy, with control over institutions for the insane; a state board of charities, with control over charitable institutions; a prison commission, with control over state penal institutions; and lastly a state board of reformatories.

Kentucky ('06 ch.18) provides for a state board of control of charitable institutions, consisting of three members appointed by the Governor for a term of four years, at a salary of $2500 each. The Boards of the State Hospitals for the Insane and the Institute for the Feeble-Minded are abolished, and their powers and duties transferred to the newly created board.

Conclusion. The general tendency in 1906 follows that of previous years covered by this review, with few pronounced or conspicuous features evident. A smaller number of boards and officers than usual was created, and from this small number it is impossible to deduce any clear-cut conclusions.²

Salaries. The salary of members of the Legislature was increased in Ohio from $600 to $1000 a year, with a deduction of $10 a day for absence from sessions ('06 p.287). Virginia increased the salary of members from $240 to $540, and for an extra session from $120 to $250 ('06 ch.235). The California amendment fixing the salary of the legislators at $1000 a session in place of $8 a day ('05 p.1075) was rejected, and the proposed amendment in Texas ('05 p.412), substituting $1000 a session in place of $5 a day, was not ratified by the people at the election.

United States senators. Ohio was added to the number of states on record as having petitioned Congress to call a constitutional convention for the purpose of proposing an amendment requiring the election of United States senators by direct vote ('06 p.406). This list now includes 24 states.¹ An interstate convention was held at Des Moines, Iowa, in December on the invitation of the Iowa Legislature ('05 p.212). Twelve states participated in this conference, and a committee was appointed to urge the passage of resolutions calling for a constitutional convention.

Bills. California provided that bills should not be introduced after 40 days from the opening of the session, instead of 50 as previously required ('05 p.1075), except on consent of three fourths (formerly two thirds) of the members. Mississippi required that laws granting a donation or gratuity to any person or object should be passed only by two thirds vote of the members-elect of each house ('06 ch.238). Virginia legislated against erasing, altering, secreting or destroying pending bills or resolutions ('06 ch.160). An Ohio law made it a misdemeanor to refuse to appear before the Assembly or any committee, and answer any pertinent question, or produce any pertinent books, papers or documents ('06 p.99).

Lobbying. An anti-lobbying act was passed by New York state ('06 ch.321). This law requires registration of legislative agents employed to promote or oppose legislation, on a docket kept by the Secretary of State, with a statement as to the person by whom and the purpose for which employed; and requires the filing of a statement within two months after the close of the session as to the expense incurred in the employment of such agent. The employment of persons whose compensation is contingent upon the passage or defeat of any legislative measure is forbidden. This act follows the general outline of the most advanced laws upon this subject already upon the statute books of Wisconsin (1898), Maryland (1900) and Massachusetts (1902). The evils of lobbying were denounced by Governors Warfield of Maryland and Herrick of Ohio, but no action was taken in these states.

Special legislation. Kansas adopted a constitutional amendment providing that the courts shall determine whether or not a given law is repugnant to the constitutional provision against special legislation ('05 ch.543). The evils of special legislation were pointed out by Governors Stokes of New Jersey and Higgins of New York. Governor Stokes called attention to the fact that of the 7000 laws on the statute books of that state, about 1700, or 25%, relate to municipal government, and that about 70% of the remainder were acts for specific purposes under "the guise of general legislation." Governor Higgins objected to "bills granting corporate charters where the objects of the corporation could be obtained under general laws; bills legalizing bond issues, changing names of corporations, private claim and escheat bills, private bills legalizing acts of notaries public and other officers, and bills private or local in their purpose, but general in form." He also suggested that the expense of passing private bills should be borne by the parties in interest and not by the state.

Direct legislation. 1906 was a year of progress toward direct legislation. Three states, Delaware, Montana and Oregon, adopted a system of initiative and referendum in a sweeping form. Delaware voted that the Legislature should provide a system of advisory initiative and advisory referendum, this vote itself having no binding force ('05 ch.53). Montana adopted a constitutional amendment providing for a complete scheme of initiative and referendum ('05 ch.61). The initiative on state affairs may be had on petition of 8% of the voters four months before the election, provided that in each of two fifths of the whole number of counties 8% of the county vote is secured on the petition. The referendum must be granted on petition of 5%, if within six months after adjournment of Legislature, provided two-fifths of the counties furnish 5% each; or a referendum may be required by the Legislature itself without petition. Laws relating to appropriations, constitutional amendments, and local or special laws are excepted from the initiative, and to this class of exceptions are added, in the case of the referendum, laws necessary to the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety. It is also provided that the veto of the Governor shall not extend to measures referred to the people by the legislative or by initiative referendum petition. Any measure referred to the people shall still be in full force and effect, unless the petition for reference is signed by 15% of the voters, in which case the law shall be inoperative until passed upon at an election and the result determined.

The Oregon amendment, which was itself originated by initiative petition and not by the Legislature, extends the general referendum already existing to any items, section or part of any act of the Assembly, but provides that this shall not prevent the remainder of the act from becoming operative. Furthermore, the initiative and referendum are now extended to the legal voters of every municipality and district as to all local, special and municipal legislation, in these districts. These powers are to be exercised as provided by general law, except that cities and towns may provide for the manner of exercising the initiative and referendum locally, but even in this event not more than 10% of the voters may be required for a referendum, nor 15% for the initiative.

Thus far systems of state initiative and referendum have been adopted in South Dakota, 1898, Utah, 1900 (but ineffective by reason of failure of Legislature to provide a definite percentage), Oregon, 1902, Montana, 1906, Delaware (advisory), 1906; and Illinois has an advisory referendum law provided by the Legislature in 1901. The Legislatures of Massachusetts and Nevada have acted favorably upon constitutional amendments, authorizing the initiative and referendum, but the lack of approval by the next Legislature defeated the propositions. In Missouri a similar amendment was defeated at the election of 1905.

Elections. Political parties

Suffrage. New York provided that any woman owning assessed property may vote at an election to decide the question of the incorporation of a village. This law also disfranchises such men as had been dependent upon the property of their wives for the right to vote, in elections to decide the question of incorporation, or upon a proposition. On the other hand, Oregon rejected the proposed constitutional amendment authorizing woman's suffrage in that state.

Other minor changes were made in the suffrage laws. Louisiana ('06 ch.38) made desertion from national or state military service punishable by forfeiture of franchise, while Massachusetts ('06 ch.481) permitted veterans exempt from poll tax to register and vote without regard to this.

Corrupt practices. The wave of legislation in 1905 regarding corrupt practices continued into 1906. Of special importance are the measures passed by New York ('06 ch.502, 503) and Pennsylvania ('06 ch.17). The New York law was intended to strengthen the somewhat ineffective act of 1890. Both of these laws provide for statements by political committees as well as by candidates, and both provide that no expenses shall be incurred, except of the classes authorized in the act. The New York list, which is rather more liberal in this respect than that of Pennsylvania, includes rent of halls and compensation of speakers, music and fireworks, advertisement and incidental expenses of meetings, posters, lithographs, banners and literary material, payments to agents to supervise the preparation of campaign articles and advertisements and furnish information to newspapers; for advertising, pictures, reading material, etc.; for rent of offices and clubrooms, compensation of clerks and agents; for attorneys at law; for preparation of lists of voters; for necessary personal and traveling expenses of candidate and committeemen; for postage, express, telegraph and telephone; for preparing nominating petition; for workers and watchers at the polls, and food for the same; for transportation of sick and infirm to the polls. The Pennsylvania law includes fewer items, but requires a statement from candidates for nomination in the primary as well as from candidates for election. Both acts provide rather carefully for their enforcement. In New York, on application of the Attorney General, District Attorney, any candidate, or any five voters, the Supreme Court may compel a statement by order in proceedings for contempt. The New York law also forbids contributions from corporations, prohibits contributions by judicial candidates altogether, and solicitation of judicial candidates.

Minor acts were passed by a number of states. New Jersey enacted stringent provisions against bribery, including under this any undue influence on employee by employer ('06 ch.206). A long list of prohibited expenditures is also given. This includes payments for entertainment, for fitting up clubrooms for social or recreative purposes, or providing uniforms for any organized club, payment for insertion of articles in newspapers or magazines, unless labeled as paid advertisements ('06 ch.208). Georgia ('06 p.46) included contributions of money or other things of value for the purpose of buying a vote under bribery.

There are now 14 states and territories with corrupt practices acts on their statute books.¹ Of these, the laws of Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin are most complete in their provisions.

Corrupt practices acts were recommended by Governors Warfield of Maryland, Stokes of New Jersey, Higgins of New York, Pattison of Ohio, and Pennypacker of Pennsylvania, and, in the national field, by President Roosevelt in his message of December 5, 1905.

Ohio, Cummins of Iowa, Blanchard of Louisiana and Warfield of Maryland. Governor Cummins declared that although at first, "as between nominations by plurality and by conventions," he had been inclined to favor the latter, he had been convinced that "we must either accept the primary system, in so far as it is applied with direct nominations, as a whole or the convention system as a whole. With these alternatives before me, I have no hesitation in declaring that I am for the primary system of nomination by plurality, rather than of nomination by conventions."

Governor La Follette, on the other hand, advocated the adoption of a system of preferential voting. Under this system, "The ballot provides opportunity for the delegate to indicate his second choice. If no candidate has an absolute majority of first choice voters, then the ballots cast for the candidate receiving the least number of votes on the list are assorted with reference to second choice for the remaining candidates. If no one of them receives a majority of first and second choice ballots, a similar assortment of the ballots of the lowest remaining candidates is made on the basis of second choices and added to the votes of other candidates and so on until some candidate has a majority of first and second choices." A bill providing for this system was introduced in the Wisconsin Legislature, but failed to pass.

Ten states legislated regarding the subject of primary elections, and of these, three, Illinois, Louisiana and Pennsylvania, passed comprehensive and important acts.

The Illinois law ('06 p.436) was enacted at a special session, necessitated by the fact that the law of 1905 had been declared unconstitutional.¹ The grounds upon which the act was declared invalid were the special requirements for Cook county, which were considered as special legislation, the requirement of a fee from candidates, the delegation of legislative power to party committees in authorizing them to decide whether nominations should be made by plurality or majority vote. The main features of the 1905 law are embraced in the act of 1906. The law is state-wide in application, compulsory in character, and provides almost all of the guaranties of a regular election. Primaries of all parties are held at the same time and place. No provision is made for city elections, however. In order to obtain the constitutionally necessary uniformity, the county is abandoned as a primary unit, and the delegate district, composed of not more than seven election precincts or districts, is substituted.

In general, the law provides for the nomination of candidates by delegate conventions, in the ordinary way, but with some interesting variations. Candidates for practically all offices may have their names printed on the primary ballot, on filing a petition signed by 2% of the qualified primary voters of the district. At the same time an unofficial delegate ballot is voted containing lists of delegates to the several conventions. Delegates to state, congressional and senatorial conventions only are instructed to vote for the candidate in their delegate district receiving the largest number of votes, but in the case of other officers no such binding instructions are given. In no case is the direct vote for candidates other than advisory in character. A candidate for office may receive a plurality or majority of the popular vote, but this does not in any event entitle him to a nomination, against an opponent who has a larger number of delegates.

Pennsylvania ('06 ch.10) and Louisiana ('06 ch.49) enacted thorough-going direct primary laws, which deserve careful examination. The Pennsylvania law applies to all except state and borough or township officers, and covers the choice of party committeemen as well. The law is compulsory, conducted under the general election laws, and held at public expense. Primaries of both parties must be held on a fixed date and at the same place. The ballots are furnished by the state, and names of candidates are printed upon petition of 200 electors, in case of a member of Congress, judges and state senators, 50 for members of the lower house, and county officers, and of 10 voters for all other officers and for delegates. Balloting is conducted under the Australian plan. The voter, if challenged, must swear that at the preceding general election he voted for a majority of the candidates of the party at that election. Nominations are made in all cases by a plurality vote.

The Louisiana law ('06 ch.49) includes all offices, state and local, and that of United States senator and representative as well. The act applies to special as well as to regular elections, and its provisions are compulsory. The ballot is furnished by the state and balloting is secret. Nominations are made by majority vote, and if no choice is made on the first ballot, a second is held within four weeks, in which the highest two contest. Each candidate for United States Senate, Congress, Governor, Railroad Commissioner, judge of Supreme Court, or any state office is required to make a deposit of $250, which is returned to him in case he polls 10% of the vote cast for that office, or unless he withdraws before the primary.

The expense of the primary is defrayed partly by the state, which pays the cost of ballots and stationery on state or congressional elections. Other expenses for offices are paid by the candidates, who are assessed by the party committees, while payments for election commissioners and clerks, and rent of polling places, are made by the local governmental authorities.

The law also provides for the organization of a State Central Committee, which must consist of one member from each parish, one from each ward in New Orleans, and three members at large in each congressional district. These members must be elected at the primary held for governor. The committee is given power to direct and order how all subordinate or local committees shall be organized and constituted, fix their number, regulate their term of office, provided the same shall not be for a longer term than four years, and the time of their election, provided, however, that the members of all committees shall be elected in a direct primary.

The Michigan act, to which reference was made in the last Review (p.161), was adopted by referendum vote of the state and candidates were nominated at the same time that the act was adopted. Among the important features of this law was the provision that nominations for state officers should be made by not less than a 40% vote, and that if this minimum percentage was not obtained the choice of a candidate should be left to the convention. A special act of the same year, applying to Alpena county, provided that a 25% vote should nominate,¹ and that in the absence of such a vote, a second primary should be held, within one week ('05 ch.476, special acts).

New Jersey ('06 ch.236) provided that where a ward or township constitutes an assembly district, nomination shall be made by the convention method instead of direct primary, while a Maryland law excepts the choice of delegates to state nominating conventions from the provisions of the primary law of 1904 ('06 ch.407).

The Nebraska act of 1905 (ch.66) was declared unconstitutional in the case of State v. Drexel (105 N. W. 174). In addition to defects in the title of the act, objection was made to the requirement of a fee for filing nomination papers, in this case fixed at 1% of the legal emoluments of the office sought. These changes were declared to be arbitrary and unreasonable, "and unrelated to the expenses of a primary or the value of the services rendered and as objectionable as if the test was based on a property qualification, or the amount the elector had contributed to the public revenue."

Including the states added in 1906 there are now direct primary systems, mandatory in nature and covering most offices, in Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and Wisconsin.¹ Of these states, Louisiana, Mississippi, Oregon and Wisconsin cover state as well as local offices, while Michigan covers state but not local offices and Minnesota local, but not state offices. In Kentucky, Florida, Indiana, Massachusetts, North Dakota, New Jersey and Texas direct nomination is mandatory, but only local in scope.

Nomination. The Iowa law ('06 ch.43) forbidding the nomination of any person as a candidate for any one office by more than one party was amended by excepting candidates for the office of judge of the district court, who are indorsed by a bar association, or by a convention of attorneys in the district. Ohio ('06 p.176) provided that in filling a vacancy on a ticket a party committee should not name a candidate of another party or a candidate nominated by petition.

Elections. Iowa ('06 ch.36) has provided for biennial election of all state officers in the even years, and also of senators and representatives, county and township officers as well, so that hereafter no general elections will occur in the odd years.

Ballot. Iowa ('06 ch.44) has required the removal of the party circle from the ballot, but retains the party column. This plan of ballot is found also in Montana. Other states that have abolished the party circle altogether are Arkansas, Florida, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Nevada, Oregon, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Iowa. The Wisconsin coupon ballot, referred to in the 1905 Review (p.167) was rejected by the people on its submission.

Voting machines were authorized in Colorado ('05 ch.84), which adopted a constitutional amendment authorizing such a method and an optional statute providing a specific plan, at one and the same time. Rhode Island ('06 ch.1349) also authorized the use of the machine for balloting. The Rhode Island law is unusually definite in describing the requirements the machine must be able to meet and the conditions under which they shall be used.

cities of the first and second classes, under a board of four members appointed by the Governor of the state. In cities of the third class ('06 ch.13) registrars for each precinct are to be appointed by the county commissioners. Personal registration is required, and a number of drastic features are found in the law. A personal description of the voter is taken, designating whether he is white or colored, his approximate age, height and weight. He is also required to sign his name, if able to write. If challenged, a number of other inquiries are to be made, and his distinguishing marks are indicated on the "Registrar's Description," including among these the color of his hair, place of business, etc.

In case of illness or unavoidable absence at registration time, a person eligible to register may appear before the commissioners and be registered by them.

In Louisiana ('06 ch.141) a registrar of voters is to be appointed for each parish, except Orleans, by the Governor, Secretary of State and Attorney General acting as a board, and the present power of assessors regarding registration of voters is devolved upon these registrars. Ohio ('06 p.270) provided that the city council of any city where registration is not required by law may provide for a general registration in the several wards or precincts thereof. Cities of less than 11,800 may require registration as now provided by law.

Michigan (local acts '05 ch.425) made elaborate provision for a central counting board, made up of the board of county canvassers, the board of city canvassers, the corporation counsel and the comptroller of Detroit. All ballot boxes are returned to this board as soon as possible after the polls are closed and counted by them. At 2 o'clock a collection is made of ballots voted up to that time, with some exceptions, and the remainder are returned at the close of the election.

Conclusion. The most conspicuous tendency of the election legislation of 1906 is the movement toward the direct primary, as seen in Louisiana and Pennsylvania, where marked progress was made, and the effort to control party expenditures as evidenced in New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Of all the states, Pennsylvania was by far the most conspicuous in such legislation, enacting in one session a civil service law, a registration law, a primary law and a corrupt practices act. Probably no Legislature ever accomplished more work of such a character at one session than the Pennsylvania Legislature of 1906.

New Jersey commission. One of the most significant pieces of legislation affecting municipal government enacted in 1906 was the provision by the Legislature of the state of New Jersey for a municipal government commission ('06 p. 741). Under this provision the Governor was authorized to appoint three persons as commissioners to consider and to report to the Governor and to the Legislature on the first day of its next session in regard to the whole system of municipal government in the state, including cities, towns, boroughs, villages, counties and townships. In its preamble the resolution declared that "municipal government is that form of government which most directly affects the people and therefore should be so economically and efficiently administered as to bear as lightly as possible upon them." It further declared that "under the present provisions of the Constitution of New Jersey the Legislature has been in the habit of enacting at every session a mass of municipal legislation, general in form but special in application, which has resulted in the encumbering of the statute books and has caused confusion and difficulty for municipalities not intended to be affected." It further called attention to the fact that a large part of the time and energy of the courts is spent in the construction and application of this doubtful legislation, and asserted that "the principle of local self-government is recognized to be fundamental and essential to the welfare of the people."

¹See also Governors Messages and Index of Legislation, 2430.

The report of the commission is to include the following:

A The functions and powers of said municipalities in their relations to the state, to the citizen and to each other, respectively, and how far such functions and powers should extend.

B How far and in what respects, if any, such municipalities, or any of them, may, with safety, be relieved from legislative control in order to promote the principle of local self-government.

C What, if any, general restrictions should be placed upon the powers and functions of such municipalities, or any of them, with respect to taxation, the issuance of bonds or other municipal obligations, and the creation of municipal indebtedness in general.

D What, if any, constitutional changes are necessary or advisable with relation to municipalities in order to restrict or to safely enlarge their powers and functions.

The commission is also to report legislative measures to carry out any or all of the purposes agreed upon by it, "having in view the curtailment of municipal legislation, the production of greater certainty in municipal law and efficiency in municipal government, and the decrease of taxation and of municipal burdens in general."

It is provided that the expenses of the commission when approved by the Governor shall be paid by the State Treasurer on the order of the Comptroller.

Home rule. During the year considerable progress was made in the extension of municipal home rule. Most important of all the legislation in this line were the constitutional amendments adopted by the people of Oregon establishing the right of cities to frame their own charters and of the people of cities to initiate local legislation and demand the referendum on local measures.

It will be remembered that a home rule amendment was passed by two successive Legislatures a few years ago, but that no provision was made for its submission to the people. The amendment adopted on June 4, 1906, was proposed by initiative petition. It provides that "the Legislative Assembly shall not enact, amend or repeal any charter or act of incorporation for any municipality, city or town. The legal voters of every city and town are hereby granted power to enact and amend their municipal charter, subject to the Constitution and criminal laws of the state of Oregon" (art. 11 § 2). This amendment was approved by the following vote: yes, 52,567; no, 19,852.

The other amendment referred to was also proposed by initiative petition. It provides that "the initiative and referendum powers reserved to the people by this Constitution are hereby further reserved to the legal voters of every municipality and district as to all local, special and municipal legislation of every character in or for their respective municipalities and districts. The manner of exercising said powers shall be prescribed by general laws except that cities and towns may provide for the manner of exercising the initiative and referendum powers as to their municipal legislation. Not more than 10% of the legal voters may be required to order the referendum, nor more than 15% to propose any measure by the initiative in any city or town" (art. 4 § 1a). This amendment was adopted by the following vote: yes, 47,678; no, 16,735.

These two constitutional amendments, brought before the people by means of initiative petitions and approved by an overwhelming vote, establish municipal home rule upon a firmer and more radical basis in Oregon than it has heretofore had in any state. The results, as they work out in practical operation, will be watched with great interest by students of municipal legislation.

In California, the destruction of San Francisco, San José and other towns by earthquake and fire led to the submission at an extraordinary session of the Legislature, held in June 1906, of an amendment to the Constitution giving the city and county of San Francisco and the city of San José the right to amend their charters by a three fifths vote of the electors without the necessity of the amendments being ratified by the Legislature ('06 p. 88). Under the scheme proposed, charter amendments would be submitted by the city council and would take effect immediately after being ratified by a three fifths vote of the electors, and "be forever as valid and effective as though such amendment or amendments had been approved by the Legislature." This proposition was submitted to a vote of the people and was rejected in November 1906.

In New York the Legislature passed amendments to the charter of the city of Kingston ('06 ch. 108) by which it was provided that in case the common council shall become tied on any question and while in such condition shall adjourn or take a recess in excess of one hour, at the next session of that body the mayor may appear and preside and have a casting vote and also vote upon any other questions or matters that may come up for consideration at the meeting.

In Pennsylvania the so called Philadelphia ripper bills, passed in 1905 for the purpose of transferring from the mayor to the city councils the appointment of the director of public safety and

The Legislature of Virginia passed a law ('06 ch. 24) conferring upon the council of any city or town in the state general authority to appoint municipal officers and employees, or to confer upon the mayor or the head of a municipal department the power to make such appointments. This piece of legislation is interesting chiefly in that it attempted to give to the cities a larger control of the details of municipal organization than was specifically granted by their several charters.

In Kentucky legislation enacted in 1906 we find one illustration of the tendency of state Legislatures to override municipal policies. An act was passed ('06 ch. 125) reciting that certain cities of the second class had abolished the office of city solicitor and it was deemed necessary that these cities should have the service of such an officer. For this reason the Legislature declared that an emergency existed and ordered the act providing for the appointment of such an officer by the mayor to take immediate effect.

Classification of cities. When the present New York Constitution was adopted in 1894, cities were divided into three classes for purposes of general legislation. The first class included cities of over 250,000 population; the second class cities of from 50,000 to 250,000 population, and the third class cities of under 50,000 population. For some unexplained reason, the Legislature of 1906 voted to submit to the people an amendment to the Constitution ('06 p. 1896) so that all cities above 175,000 will be included in the first class. Apparently this is for the purpose either of getting Rochester into the first class or of getting it out of the second. The amendment before being submitted to the people must be approved by the Legislature at another session.

In Kentucky an act was passed ('06 ch. 101) enumerating the cities belonging to each of the six classes into which the Kentucky cities are divided by the Constitution. This enumeration shows 1 city in the first class, 4 in the second, 4 in the third, 31 in the fourth, 61 in the fifth, and all others not enumerated in the sixth.

The General Assembly of Virginia passed a law ('06 ch. 32) providing that when a city of the second class attains a population of 10,000 it shall thereby be deemed to have become a city of the first class. The Virginia laws provide for ascertaining the population of a city at any time by a special local census.

Consolidation of municipalities and change of boundaries. The most important consolidation of cities effected by legislation last year was that of Pittsburg and Allegheny. A law passed by the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1905 (ch. 161) was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the state on the ground that it was special legislation. It seems that the act of 1905 provided that where two cities situated in the same county are or may be contiguous to each other, the city having the smaller population, as shown by the last preceding federal census, may be annexed to the city having the larger population. It was further provided that "for purposes of this act, cities separated by a stream, river or highway shall be included under the term contiguous."

In Pennsylvania local or special legislation regulating the affairs of cities is prohibited by the Constitution. The court cited a number of decisions bearing on this point and then said: "It is settled that the test where a statute is local and special legislation within the prohibition of the Constitution is whether it operates upon all counties or cities alike and when they are properly classified it acts upon all counties or cities of the same class alike, or whether it operates upon certain counties or certain cities, or upon a part of a class of counties or cities and excludes all others." The court took cognizance of the fact that Pittsburg and Allegheny were the only two contiguous cities in the state and that in effect the act was limited in its operation to these two cities. The legislation was therefore declared unconstitutional.

A new act was passed by the Legislature in 1906 (ch. 1) in which the unconstitutional features of the act of 1905 were avoided. Instead of requiring that the two cities should be contiguous to each other, the new act provided that "wherever in this commonwealth, now or hereafter, two cities shall be contiguous or in close proximity to each other, the two, with any intervening land other than boroughs, may be united and become one by annexing and consolidating the lesser city, and the intervening land other than boroughs, if any, with the greater city, if at an election, to be held as hereinafter provided, there shall be a majority of all the votes cast in favor of such union." This act has since been held valid and proceedings have been taken to effect the consolidation of Pittsburg and Allegheny.

The law provides that none of the elected officials of either of the cities shall be thrown out of office on account of consolidation. The councils of the two cities are consolidated. The mayor of the larger city becomes mayor of the consolidated city, and the mayor of the smaller city becomes deputy mayor of the consolidated city. The deputy mayor has the veto power over ordinances relating exclusively to the smaller city. The mayor has the veto power over all ordinances, including those subject to the deputy mayor's veto.

The Kentucky Legislature passed a very curious act governing the annexation of territory to cities ('06 ch. 19). It provides that whenever the city council by a two thirds vote passes an ordinance to annex any unincorporated territory or to cut off any territory from the city, the ordinance shall be published for 30 days. If in that time any of the residents or freeholders of the territory in question file a petition in the Circuit Court and object to the annexation or exclusion of territory as the case may be, the court is required to hear the case and if satisfied that less than 75% of the freeholders in the territory affected have remonstrated and that the adding or striking off of such territory will be for the city's interest and will cause "no manifest injury" to the freeholders in the territory, the ordinance shall be approved. If, on the other hand, 75% or more of the resident freeholders have remonstrated, the ordinance shall not be approved unless the court finds that a failure to annex or strike off the territory in question "will materially retard the prosperity of such city and of the owners and inhabitants" of such territory. In case it is a city of the fifth or sixth class, or a part of such city that is to be annexed, an election must be held. If one quarter of the inhabitants of the city to be annexed voting at this election favor the proposition then it shall go into effect. If it is a city of the second, third or fourth class that is to be annexed, it requires the approval of at least two fifths of the inhabitants voting at the election.

An elaborate Virginia law ('06 ch. 221) provides for the consolidation of cities in another way. To effect consolidation it is necessary for the council of one or the other of the cities to pass an ordinance including: first, the name suggested for the new city; second, a declaration as to whether the new city shall be governed by the general municipal laws or by the special charter of either of the cities to be consolidated; third, setting forth the particular inducements to consolidation; fourth, appointing a committee to confer with a similar committee from the other city. If the council of the other city agrees to the proposition, it shall proceed in a similar manner to pass an ordinance and appoint a conference committee. The two committees meet in joint session and draft a joint ordinance which, to become effective, must be passed by the councils of both cities. The question of consolidation may be submitted to popular vote by the councils and it must be so submitted if in any city one quarter of the electors petition therefor.

Nonpartizanship. Two or three experiments in nonpartizan legislation were inaugurated in 1906. The most interesting and perhaps the most important of these was the new charter for the city of Newport (R. I. '06 ch. 1392).

Under this charter a representative council was established to consist of 195 members. The city was divided into five wards, and each ward was entitled to choose 39 members of this council. The terms of office of the councilors were fixed at three years, 13 to be chosen each year from each ward. The executive powers of the city were vested in the mayor and five aldermen. The aldermen must reside in the several wards, but are elected by vote of the city at large. At the representative council any citizen has the right to speak but not to vote. The council levies taxes, makes the appropriations and passes the city ordinances. The council also elects the city treasurer, the city clerk, the city solicitor, and several other municipal officials and fixes the salaries of the city officers. If the council votes for any proposition requiring an expenditure of $10,000 or more in addition to the regular annual appropriations, petitions may be filed requiring the submission of the question to popular vote. Petitions must be signed by at least 10 electors from each ward in addition to 100 from the city at large.

Ordinances or propositions similar to those just described may be initiated by petition of 100 voters. If so initiated they must be considered by the representative council at its next meeting and acted upon before adjournment. If disapproved by the council, petitions signed by at least 20 electors from each ward in addition to 200 from the city at large may be filed requiring their submission to the electors. In that case the proposition will be decided by majority vote.

The nomination of all candidates for elective city offices must be made by nomination papers filed with the city clerk at least 12 days before election. A nomination paper is not valid unless the acceptance of the candidate is written upon it. Candidates for the representative council may be nominated by 30 electors of the ward. Candidates for aldermen and for the school committee need 100 names on their nominating petitions. Candidates for mayor require at least 250 nominators.

"Nothing shall be printed or written upon the ballot," says the charter, "except the name of the candidate, his residence, office for which he is nominated, and such other nonpolitical facts as the election laws of this state may require."

The act was submitted to the voters of the city for approval on June 6 last and was ratified.

The charter of the town of Easton enacted by the Legislature of Maryland ('06 ch. 458) also provides for a nonpartizan ballot. The names of the nominees for each office must be printed in a single vertical column "without device of any kind."

The Massachusetts Legislature passed a bill to incorporate the city of Westfield ('06 ch. 409). This charter was submitted to a vote of the people and defeated at the polls. It provided for a sort of nonpartizanship through minority representation. The common council was to consist of 11 members, one from each of six wards and five at large. No party or persons could nominate more than three candidates for aldermen at large, and the five having the highest vote were to be elected. In like manner the school board was to consist of six members, three elected each year and no party was to nominate more than two candidates at any one election.

Organization of city government. A new charter granted to the city of Norfolk (Va. '06 ch. 170) contains some provisions of general interest. The council is composed of two chambers which are required to meet in joint session for the purpose of electing city officials not elected by the people. The mayor is a chief peace officer and general watchdog of the city treasury. The real administrative functions of the government are performed by a board of control consisting of three members elected by the voters. One member of the board is elected every two years for a term of six years. This board of control has charge of streets, bridges, parks, sewers, public buildings, public cemeteries, markets, almshouses, waterworks, etc. It also has charge of the police, fire and health departments. It also acts as a board of contract and supply for all departments of the city government. The board may summon any administrative officer except the mayor to attend its meetings and give information. All appointments by the board of control or other departments must be "based upon merit, fitness and competency alone, and political and religious opinions shall not be considered in making appointments."

The charter provides also for a board of commercial and industrial interests, to consist of two members of the upper branch and three members of the lower branch of the council, and three citizens, the latter to be appointed by the mayor. The duty of this board is to consider matters of internal improvement and to look after the commercial, industrial and manufacturing interests of the city, to watch over and take care of its connections, means of transportation and communication and all matters relating to freight rates, traffic or travel into and out of the city. In short, this board is to perform in an official way functions which are usually performed unofficially by a chamber of commerce. The charter also provides for a commission on beautifying the city, to be composed of five citizens to be appointed by the council. This commission is to consider the appearance and arrangement of parks, buildings, waterways and streets and to confer with the county authorities and the owners of suburban land as to the proper laying out of their property to conform with general plans.

The board of estimates, or the board of estimate and apportionment, as it is called in the cities of New York state, is coming to be a more and more important factor in municipal organization in this country. This board assumes different forms in different cities. In the new charter of Auburn (N. Y. '06 ch. 185) the board is called the board of estimate and control, and consists of the mayor, comptroller, city attorney, the president of the common council and the chairman of the council committee on claims and finances. This gives the mayor, with the help of the comptroller and the city attorney, who are his appointees, a majority on the board. It is the duty of this board to prepare the annual estimates for the common council, which may adopt or diminish the estimates or reject any item except such as relate to the city debt and the educational and water departments, but may not increase any item for any purpose.

The new charter of the city of Saginaw (Mich. Special laws, '05 ch. 566) provides for a board of estimates consisting of five members to be appointed by the mayor of the city and confirmed by the common council. No more than three of them shall reside in either of the taxing districts into which the city is divided and no more than three shall be members of the same political party.

The Saginaw board of estimates, following the type of the Detroit board, does not prepare the budget in its original form. The estimates first go to the common council, where they are revised and submitted to the board of estimates, to be reported back inside of two weeks. The board may decrease the amount submitted by the council, but may not increase it and may disallow any items. The estimates as approved by this board are final.

In the charter of Grand Rapids (Mich. Special laws '05 ch. 593) provision is also made for a board of estimates, to be composed of the mayor, city clerk, city comptroller, the three members of the council committee on ways and means and three electors who shall be citizens and freeholders to be appointed annually by the mayor. The duties of this board are purely advisory. The board considers the estimates presented by the several departments and recommends a budget to the common council. The common council may, however, change the budget in any way it sees fit.

A Pennsylvania act ('06 ch. 4) relating to "cities of the first class," that is, Philadelphia, provides for a certain permanency of tenure in the municipal civil service. Under this act no person may be removed "except for such cause as will promote the efficiency of the public service" and no person serving a city in any department is permitted to be a member or attend the meetings of any political committee or take any active part in political management or use his office to influence political movements or the political action of any other officer, clerk or employee of the city.

Baltimore leads the way by the establishment of a department of legislative reference (Md. '06 ch. 565). At the head of the department there is a board composed of the mayor, the city solicitor, the president of Johns Hopkins University, the president of the Municipal Arts Society, and the president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association of Baltimore. This board is required to employ a competent statistician as its executive officer who shall hold his office during good behavior. It is the duty of this officer to investigate and report upon the laws of Maryland and "other states and cities" relating to any subject upon which the mayor of Baltimore or any committee of the council or the head of any city department may desire a report. It is also his duty to accumulate data in regard to the practical operation and effect of these laws and to get information in regard to subjects of legislation proposed by the Legislature of Maryland or the Baltimore city council. He is also required to assist in the preparation of bills, ordinances and resolutions and to index and arrange the information obtained by the bureau so that it will be accessible at all times to city officials and the general public. The Baltimore board of estimates is required to provide annually for the payment of his salary, which shall not be less than $2000, and also for a sum sufficient to pay all other expenses of the department.

County government

Salary system v. fee system. The most important legislation in regard to county government has to do with the method of paying county officers. The New Jersey Legislature passed a general act ('06 ch. 53) regarding the fees of surrogates, registrars, county clerks and sheriffs in all counties except those of the first class. The act requires that the fees, costs etc. which have heretofore been received by the officials named for services rendered shall be collected the same as ever, but shall be turned over to the county collectors of the several counties as public moneys. Salaries are established varying with the population of the counties. All four officials mentioned in the act receive the same salary, however. In counties between 125,000 and 200,000 population this salary is $6500. In counties between 100,000 and 125,000 it is $5500. In counties between 75,000 and 100,000 it is $4500. In counties between 50,000 and 75,000 it is $3500. In counties between 30,000 and 50,000 it is $2500. In counties of less than 30,000 it is $2000.

The act provides that the officials shall select and employ the necessary deputies and assistants who shall receive such compensation as is approved by the judge of the Court of Common Pleas.

Even more important than the New Jersey act are the salary acts passed by the General Assembly of Ohio ('06 p. 89, 117) as a result of the investigation of the abuses of the fee system under the uniform accounting law in force in that state. Under these acts the usual fees of the county auditor, county treasurer, probate judge, sheriff, recorder and clerk of courts continue to be collected, but are now turned over to the county as public moneys. It is provided that in November of each year the county officials mentioned shall file with the county commissioners a detailed statement of their estimate of money necessary to be expended for deputies, assistants etc. together with a sworn statement of the amount so expended for the preceding year. The county commissioners are required to consider this statement and fix an aggregate sum to be expended for the purposes included in the statement. This sum must be "reasonable and proper, regard being had to the amount of labor necessary to be performed by those to receive the same." The power to employ deputies and clerks, to fix their compensation and to discharge them is retained with the several county officials, but each official is limited in his expenditure to the aggregate amount fixed by the county commissioners. County officials are prohibited from receiving directly or indirectly any part of the compensation of their subordinates or any fee or reward for appointing them.

All fees are paid into the treasury and kept as a separate fund. It is provided that the county commissioners may, during the first year after the act takes effect, but not thereafter, transfer to the county officers' fee funds, money from other funds in such sums as may be necessary to make good any deficiencies that may arise. After the first year the fee funds must support the offices. The county officials are expected to go without their pay unless they collect sufficient fees to pay for their assistants and also to pay their own salaries. It is provided, however, that if they get behind one year they may make it up the next by greater diligence or thrift. Every subordinate is required to sign a receipt for his salary in which he certifies that he has received the full sum indicated on the receipt for his own use and benefit and that he has not paid or assigned or contracted to pay or assign any part of this compensation for anybody's else use, or paid or given or agreed to pay or give any reward for his job.

The salary schedule established by the Ohio Legislature provides for the payment of a certain amount per 1000 of population, the amount per thousand decreasing as the population of a county increases. The following table will show what the salaries of the different county officers would be for counties having the population indicated in the first column. The county treasurer and probate judge each receive the same salary as the county auditor.

Population	County auditor	County clerk	Sheriff	Recorder
15 000	$1 500	$1 275	$975	$900
30 000	2 475	2 175	1 800	1 650
45 000	3 300	2 925	2 475	2 250
60 000	3 975	3 525	3 000	2 700

FREDERICK R. CLOW PH.D., OSHKOSH, WIS.

The legislation of the past year shows few new developments of importance. On the contrary it shows that some of the older states have developed financial procedure for their local governments to the point where it is fairly complete and satisfactory. The new laws and charters follow in the grooves already well marked out.

This condition is most clearly seen in New York, where the financial system, of the larger cities especially, has reached the highest development. In 1898 a law (ch.182) was passed for the government of cities of the second class, embodying features which had been given trial in individual cities. Each year thereafter some slight changes were introduced. Last year an act ('06 ch.473) repealed all of these separate acts, including that of 1898, and embodied the approved provisions of all in a new well arranged statute. However, the leading features of the act of 1898 remain unchanged. The administration of the city's finances is committed to a board of estimate and apportionment composed of the mayor, comptroller, corporation counsel, president of the common council and city engineer. When this board considers a question affecting one of its own members, such as the number or salaries of his subordinates, the treasurer takes the place of that member. This board makes the annual budget; the council merely has the power to reduce or reject items. The present law provides for making the budget in February and March instead of November and December, as required by the law of 1898. This permits the budget to be made after the close of the preceding year so that its results can be known and used; it brings the fixing of the year's financial arrangements nearer to the season when the heaviest expenditures are undertaken and can be more accurately estimated; finally, it leaves the budget to be made by the administration which is to carry it out. Substantially this same system obtains in the revised charter which was passed for the city of Auburn ('06 ch.185), but with one novel feature—the comptroller holds office during good behavior, being appointed by the mayor and removable by him.

Michigan has matured a financial system for its larger cities like that of New York in that it commits the making of the budget to a small body, the board of estimates. This plan has been in use in Detroit for over a decade and has been adopted in the charters of some other cities. That it gives satisfaction is evidenced by its appearance in the revised charters of Saginaw ('05 special laws ch.566) and Grand Rapids ('05 special laws ch.593). The Saginaw board consists of five members appointed by the mayor and confirmed by the council, one retiring each year; in Grand Rapids it consists of the mayor, clerk, comptroller, the members of the committee on ways and means of the council, and three electors appointed by the mayor. In the smaller cities, on the other hand, Michigan, like New York, leaves the making of the budget entirely to the council.¹

The New England system is illustrated by the charter of Westfield, Mass. ('06 ch.409). During January, the first month of the fiscal year, with the newly elected officers in control, the heads of departments estimate their needs and communicate them to the mayor, he meanwhile having power to authorize each department to incur liabilities up to one fifth of its appropriation for the preceding year. The mayor then makes his estimate for all departments, and transmits this, together with the estimates of the department chiefs, to the board of aldermen. A two thirds vote of all the aldermen is necessary to appropriate for any item more than the mayor has estimated for it. Before the close of the third month they are required to pass an annual appropriation bill. Then it devolves upon the auditor to see that the city's funds are expended in accordance with this bill. Though there is some variation among New England cities, this is the type which has been coming into use the last dozen years.

Regarding depositories for public funds, the only notable legislation is in Ohio. One act ('06 p.274) extends the privilege of receiving deposits of county funds from banks to trust companies; another ('06 p.185) requires and carefully regulates the depositing of township funds in banks, whereas formerly depositing in banks was barely permitted only when the township had no suitable safe in which the funds might be kept.

The tendency to enlarge the borrowing power of local governments still continues, and this time without a single act designed to hold it in check. New Orleans (La. '06 ch.19) is empowered to issue bonds for its sewerage and water system exceeding the amount originally authorized by $8,000,000. Virginia ('06 ch.148) authorized any town to issue 35 year bonds up to 18% of the assessed valuation of real estate for a variety of purposes; they include "a suitable equipment against fire," "improving school buildings," "repaving" streets, and "maintaining sewers and culverts." The South Carolina Legislature ('06 ch.198) submitted an amendment to the Constitution to allow the city of Bennettsville to issue bonds beyond the usual limit to provide waterworks and sewerage. Iowa did the same for lighting plants and sewers ('06 ch.49). The New York Legislature ('06 p.1897) submitted an amendment providing that "debts incurred by any city of the second class after the first day of January, 1908, to provide for the supply of water" be not "included in ascertaining the power of the city to become otherwise indebted." Idaho ('05 p.435) submitted an amendment, voted on November 1906, to facilitate borrowing by local divisions. California ('06 p.91) submitted an amendment providing that the sinking funds of San Francisco, Santa Clara and San José may "commence after the incurring of such indebtedness of not more than a period of one fourth of the time of maturity of such indebtedness, which shall not exceed 75 years from the time of contracting the same." Missouri adopted a constitutional amendment in November 1906, to permit local governments to issue 20 year bonds beyond the debt limit for constructing "or maintaining of paved, graveled, macadamized or rock roads." New Jersey ('06 ch.315) authorized municipalities to anticipate taxes and special assessments by borrowing up to 90% of the amount levied.

At the same time some disposition is shown to lower the limit to the tax rate. The Governor of Louisiana (Digest of Messages, 2578) considered the maximum in that state too high—10 mills on the dollar for "parish and municipal and levee district taxation"—and recommended its reduction to 8 mills. The Legislature passed an act ('06 ch.64) to this effect, making an exception for places having "an unmatured interest-bearing indebtedness." A New Jersey act ('06 ch.116) requires that the rate in all taxing districts of the state, if it exceed $1.75 on the $100 for local purposes, exclusive of taxes to pay judgments, be gradually reduced to that rate.

An Iowa act ('06 ch.34) adds that state to the list of those that supervise the accounts of the local governments. In cities of 5000 and above the chief accounting officer must publish an annual financial report in pamphlet form ; in smaller cities the report must be made out and its publication may be authorized by the council. In either case a copy of the report is to be forwarded to the Auditor of State by July 1, and by December 1 he is to publish a compilation of these returns in a separate volume, including in it "his comment and recommendations respecting desirable changes in the laws governing financial administration in municipalities." He is to prescribe a system of accounts which the municipalities must adopt by April 1, 1907, and is authorized to appoint a commission to assist him in preparing it, the personal expenses of the members for 30 days to be defrayed by the state. They "shall adopt so far as practicable the latest and most approved methods in municipal accounting, especially the classifications and definitions of municipal finance in use in the national census office." Examiners of municipal accounts, appointed by the State Auditor, are to make a personal inspection in each city of 5000 or over at least once every two years. This law, though loosely drawn, may be the dawning of a better day for Iowa cities, and may therefore take rank easily as the most important piece of legislation relating to local finance that was enacted during 1906.

MUNICIPAL FUNCTIONS¹

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

Legislation on municipal functions in 1906 was of the usual piecemeal character; and it is difficult to point out any new general tendencies of first-class significance. There is a gradual increase in the scope of municipal activities, but almost a corresponding increase in the scope of legislative control through the details of the statutes. New Jersey has the largest volume of legislation of some importance, including several acts on municipal ownership and others dealing with police and fire departments. In Rhode Island state control of the police in the larger cities has been relaxed. The new charter of Grand Rapids, Mich., contains a number of important features. The price of gas in New York and Boston has been regulated by direct legislative action.

Public safety. In two New England states significant legislation has been enacted in reference to state-appointed police boards. A Massachusetts act ('06 ch. 291) replaces the former State Police Board by a single police commissioner and a board of excise commissioners; but both of these authorities are appointed by the Governor and Council, so that the state control is not in any way reduced. On the other hand, the state control of the police in the two largest Rhode Island cities has been put in process of extinction. The Providence police board has become appointive by the mayor and council; while the new charter for Newport provides that after January 1, 1908, there shall be a board of three police commissioners appointed by the local representative council. These measures indicate some reaction from the growing tendency toward state-appointed police boards. But as yet there seems no indication of any movement for the much needed state administrative supervision of local police.

In New Jersey, there has been a good deal of legislation during the past year in reference to municipal police and fire departments. Some of the acts have been passed as amendments to an act of 1885, which has the title, "An act to remove the fire and police departments in the cities of this state from political control." This act, however, simply authorized the appointment, in cities accepting the act, of bipartisan police boards and fire commissioners—the act specifically requiring two members of each board of four to be chosen from each of the two principal parties.

In 1905 an amending act was passed applying to cities with a population between 12,000 and 100,000 which had not established a police board under the act of 1885. This definitely required the appointment of a police board by the mayor of such cities, not more than two of the four members to be chosen from the same political party. But this act has been declared unconstitutional, as special legislation.

An act of 1906 (ch. 270) now provides that in cities of the second class under 35,000 population which accept this act, there shall be fire and police boards appointed by the mayor and council, not more than two of the four members of each board to be from the same party. These boards are to choose the members of the fire and police departments, but no provisions are made for any effective merit system, while the chiefs of the two departments are to be confirmed by the council. This last provision seems to be in direct conflict with another act ('06 ch. 177) which authorizes boards or commissioners appointing members of police and fire departments also to appoint the chiefs.

Two other acts ('06 ch. 45, 242) regulate the salaries of policemen and firemen in cities of the first class under the act of 1885, subject to the adoption of the act by referendum.

Other acts deal with the problem of discipline of policemen and firemen. One measure ('06 ch. 287) authorizes the chief of police in cities of the first class under the act of 1885 to suspend policemen pending a hearing on charges, and authorizes the police boards to impose fines as penalties for various offenses. Two acts ('06 ch. 7, 42) provide for a summary review before a justice of the Supreme Court of proceedings for the dismissal or reduction in rank of policemen or firemen.

Much of this legislation is probably intended for particular cities; and the referendum clauses serve the purpose of limiting their application.

Pension systems for members of the police and fire departments continue to be established. Two New Jersey acts ('06 ch. 222, 299) and two New York acts ('06 ch. 393, 613) provide for police pensions; and a Massachusetts act ('06 ch. 476) authorizes pensions to "call firemen."

An amendment to the New York village law ('06 ch. 34) provides for boards of police commissioners in villages of more than 14,000 population.

Public works. Legislation continues to be needed to give cities adequate authority to deal with the elemental problems of street paving and sewer construction. A Maryland act ('06 ch. 401) authorizes the city of Baltimore to borrow $5,000,000 for street improvements, to be expended by a paving commission. Several New Jersey acts ('06 ch. 43, 304, 321) enlarge the powers of cities in this field. One authorizes cities of the first class to issue bonds to the amount of $500,000 for street improvements. Another authorizes the council of cities adopting the act to pave streets, provided the owners of three fourths of the property do not protest. And a third authorizes the council of cities organized under an act of 1899 by a two thirds vote to pave streets and build sewers, subject to a similar provision in the case where owners of three fourths of the adjacent property protest.

In Kentucky ('06 ch. 130) and Ohio ('06 p. 202) power has been granted to close or vacate streets. In the former case the power is conferred on the councils of cities of the second class, subject to proceedings in the courts. In the latter, the council of any city or village may take action.

In Kentucky ('06 ch. 128) the councils of all cities of the second class are authorized by a two thirds vote to order streets paved at the cost of the abutting property and without the consent of the property owners. In Louisville the board of public works is given authority to control the laying out of new streets, not only inside the city limits, but also within 3 miles of the city ('06 ch.53).

Another illustration of the lack of adequate grants of power is a special act of the Michigan Legislature in 1905 (ch. 670) which was needed to authorize the important city of Detroit to establish a municipal staff for the collection of garbage and to purchase or lease a garbage disposal plant.

In California a constitutional amendment submitted at the November election authorizes the city of San Francisco for two years to acquire by purchase or condemnation lands for streets, parks and other public purposes.

Parks. Any important addition to the park systems of American cities seems to require additional legislation that is special in its application. A New York act ('06 ch. 456) authorizes the city of New York to borrow $2,500,000 to establish a Seaside park in or near the city, where municipal hospitals may be erected. Another special act of this state ('06 ch.586) provides for a board of park commissioners for the city of Syracuse.

Two New Jersey acts ('06 ch. 181, 258) authorize local issues for park purposes, in each case to the amount of $300,000. One act applies to counties of 200,000 population; and doubtless refers to the Essex county system. The other is general in form, but is subject to a popular referendum, and is probably intended for a single city.

A resolution of the Rhode Island Legislature submits to popular vote the question of a loan of $250,000 for the metropolitan park district in that state. Of somewhat more extended application is a Kentucky act ('06 ch. 15) providing for park boards in cities of the second class, to be appointed by the mayor.

New charters to two Michigan cities (Grand Rapids and Saginaw) passed in 1905 establish in each of these cities a park and cemetery board. This seems an advisable combination in cities of moderate size, and serves to keep the number of separate departments within reasonable limits.

Franchises and municipal ownership. In the new charter of Grand Rapids, Mich. (local acts 1905, ch. 593) is a special division of seven pages dealing with franchises and municipal ownership. Franchises may be granted by two thirds of the council, subject to a referendum on a petition signed by 12% of the qualified voters of the city. No franchise may be granted for a longer period than 20 years. The maximum price for the service shall be stated in the ordinance, and the council may reserve the right to change the rates by direct action or by arbitration. The council shall have power to regulate and control the exercise of any franchise. Annual statements must be made in reference to stock, debt, gross and net earnings, and expenses. Every franchise shall provide that the city may purchase the property and plant at its expiration, subject to a referendum by the voters; or the franchise may provide that the property may become the property of the city without compensation. The council is also given power to acquire or construct and maintain waterworks, electric light works, gas works, power works, heating works, telephone and telegraph lines, street railway tracks, subways and conduits, bridges, viaducts, wharves and docks, markets, garbage plants and such other public utilities as the council may designate. Before acquiring any new public utility, there must be an estimate of the cost and an approval of the proposition by vote of the electors. But there are no adequate provisions whereby the city can raise the funds for any important additions to the present public utilities, either by bonds or special mortgage certificates.

A New Jersey law ('06 ch. 36) regulates to some degree grants in the streets, parks and other public places. Applicants must present a petition; there must be public notice; grants by the city councils are limited to 20 years, but on a referendum grants may be made for as long a period as 40 years. None of the other safeguards found in the Grand Rapids charter are in the New Jersey law.

Massachusetts ('06 ch. 422) and New York ('06 ch. 125) have passed new laws regulating the price of gas in their largest cities. For Boston a sliding scale has been established, similar to that in force in London. The standard price of gas for 10 years is fixed at 90 cents per thousand feet, and so long as the price is at that figure dividends may be declared up to 7% on the capital stock. For each 1 cent reduction in the price of gas dividends may be increased one fifth of 1%. Excess profits accumulated if the price is maintained at a high rate are to be divided among the cities and towns supplied. New stock issues must be offered at public auction. After June 1916 the standard price may be raised or lowered by the State Gas and Electric Light Commission.

For New York city the price of gas in the boroughs of Manhattan and Brooklyn is fixed at 80 cents per 1000 feet. But the application of this rate has been restrained pending proceedings in the courts. Several laws have been enacted in New Jersey extending the powers of cities with reference to municipal ownership of public utilities. One act ('06 ch. 98) passed in April authorizes cities owning waterworks to use and develop electric power for lighting or other public purposes; and provides for the issue of $500,000 in bonds. In May a joint resolution was passed providing for a commission to investigate and report to the next Legislature in reference to the advisability of legislation authorizing municipal lighting plants. But before the session had ended, acts apparently of general application were passed, authorizing municipal waterworks and light, heat and power plants. The act for waterworks ('06 ch. 302) authorizes any city to construct or purchase waterworks after a referendum, grants power to condemn land, provides for arbitration where an existing plant is purchased, and authorizes bond issues to an amount to be determined by the council, the tax levy to meet the interest and sinking fund payments on such water bonds not to be subject to the restrictions on the tax levy named in special acts. The other act ('06 ch. 323) authorizes cities to construct and operate municipal light, heat and power plants, after a referendum on the issue of bonds, which are limited to 1% of the ratables.

In Iowa an act has been passed authorizing mortgage bonds on municipal water plants, which may confer a 25 year franchise in case of foreclosure; such bonds to be issued only after a referendum. This seems to show the influence of the Illinois Müller law in reference to street railways. And such special mortgage bonds or certificates seem to provide a safe means for authorizing experiments in municipal ownership, without removing the limitations on general municipal debt.

PROPERTY¹

ERNST FREUND J.U.D., PROFESSOR OF LAW, UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

The property legislation of 1906 is inconsiderable in amount and presents very few points of general interest.

The disaster in San Francisco led to the enactment of legislation providing for proceedings to establish and quiet titles (Cal. '06 ch.59) and authorizing counties and municipalities whose records have been destroyed to acquire by condemnation the plants of title companies (Cal. '06 ch.50). The act for the establishment and quieting of titles is similar in principle to the Illinois burnt records act of 1872, passed in a similar emergency, but the California law is less elaborate. Proceedings under it are brought against all the world and the judgment binds all interests without any saving for persons under disability.

The tendency to remove fetters from real property and to facilitate its transfer is perhaps the one noticeable feature in the legislation under review. Massachusetts ('06 ch.344) allows parties acting in a fiduciary or representative capacity with regard to real property to bring proceedings to establish their powers; this too is a proceeding against all whom it may concern.

A somewhat similar statute of Maryland ('06 ch.373) relates to both real and personal property. A provision in another Maryland statute ('06 ch.534) to the effect that a power of sale given to a trustee, executor etc. shall, unless otherwise expressed, follow the office into whosoever hands it may come, likewise tends to facilitate the transfer of lands; so does the act of Arkansas of 1905 (ch.337) providing for the release of inchoate dower right of an insane wife, containing careful safeguards securing her expectant rights in the proper share of the proceeds of sale, and thus avoiding the constitutional difficulty which proved fatal to an act of New Jersey passed with a similar purpose (53 N. J. Eq. 96).

New Jersey ('06 ch.24) provides that upon the death of the trustee of a passive trust, the Orphans Court may authorize his executor or administrator to execute the proper conveyance to the beneficiary. Massachusetts ('06 ch.73) allows an executor or administrator with the will annexed (formerly only an administrator) to apply to the Probate Court, upon notice to the parties interested or with their consent, for license to sell real estate of the testator for purposes of distribution, unless the will otherwise provides. Such power is generally given only to provide for payment of debts; its exercise may be beneficial in saving the expense of partition proceedings.

In the matter of wills and succession attention may be called to the following:

New Jersey ('06 ch.162) makes the probate of a will after seven years conclusive evidence of its formal execution, with a saving for persons under disability, if there is a proper attestation clause and one attesting witness testifies that the will was signed by the testator; the novel feature of this legislation seems to lie in the important effect which it attaches to an attestation clause.

South Carolina ('06 ch.95) establishes rights of intestate succession between an illegitimate child and the mother of such child, but does not include the kin of either in such right of succession. As between thus limiting the right of succession and extending it to the next of kin, the states having statutes upon the subject seem to be about evenly divided. In the absence of a statute, the common law recognizes no relationship, and consequently no rights of intestate succession, between an illegitimate child and either of its parents, while under the civil law the natural tie between mother and child has always had legal recognition.

The power of eminent domain may under a constitutional amendment in Washington be exercised for rights of way for mining, milling, manufacturing, irrigation and lumbering purposes, and the provisions of the Virginia law are extended to the damaging (in addition to the taking) of property ('06 ch.257). The statute of California ('06 ch.50) allowing the condemnation of plants of title companies has already been referred to; it presents an altogether novel application of the power of eminent domain, but there seems to be no judicial authority against its constitutional validity.

CONTRACTS AND OBLIGATIONS¹

JOHN B. SANBORN PH.D., ATTORNEY AT LAW, MADISON, WIS.

The amount of legislation under this heading during 1906 is even more meager than usual. No state has adopted a negotiable instruments law and there is no legislation relating to torts. The ordinary private contract is outside of the current of modern legislation, which is concerned at present largely with corporate regulation. One noticeable feature of the legislation relating to contracts, however, and one which may be ascribed to a considerable extent to the agitation of the last few years over graft and corrupt practices, is the number of acts aimed at the prevention of fraud. Laws of this kind form the greater part of the legislation of 1906 upon the subject of contracts. It would of course be improper to call this movement a modern one, unless unmindful of the statute of 50 Edward III entitled "Fraudulent Assurances of Lands or Goods to deceive Creditors shall be void," followed as it was by many laws regarding fraudulent conveyances. Whether we consider these new laws signs of a moral awakening or as "fantastic legislation," to use the language of Judge Werner, depends much on the point of view.

Restoration of lost documents. The great disaster at San Francisco has been the occasion for the enactment in California of laws for the reestablishment of documents lost by conflagration or other public calamity. One of these ('06 ch.53) allows any public board whose records show the issuance of a certificate to issue a duplicate thereof when it appears by affidavit that the original was lost as the result of such calamity. Another act amending the Civil Code ('06 ch.64) provides for an action by any person interested in any private document which was so lost to establish and compel its reexecution. If the document was negotiable a bond is required indemnifying against any lawful claim thereon.

Innkeepers liability. Virginia ('06 ch.136) enacts a law defining the liabilities of innkeepers very much as they have been limited in other states, by providing for public posting of a copy of the act in the room and exempting from liability for valuables which are not deposited at the office. The total liability which is imposed upon an innkeeper is fixed at $300 for baggage, $500 for valuables and $250 in case of fire, unless it clearly appears that the fire was caused by the negligence of the innkeeper.

Sales of merchandise. The growth of laws regulating sales of merchandise in bulk or otherwise than in the ordinary course of business is very noticeable in recent years; but accompanying this appears also a serious question as to their constitutionality, with very divergent views by the courts which have passed upon them. Both of these tendencies have been already discussed in previous Reviews, but the continued enactment of these laws and the difference of opinion as to their validity seem to permit of further comment.

Laws of this nature, beginning in Louisiana in 1896, have been enacted in 23 jurisdictions.¹ They have been declared unconstitutional in four states² and upheld in six.³

During 1906 the New York act ('02 ch.528) as it stood before its amendment ('04 ch. 569) was held unconstitutional in Wright v. Hart, 182 N. Y. 330, 75 N. E. 404. Following as far as it could the example of the Supreme Court of the United States when dealing with constitutional questions, the Court of Appeals stood 4 to 3. The divergent opinions of Judges Werner and Vann give an excellent presentation of both sides of this question. In the course of the majority opinion, Judge Werner, commenting upon the remarkable development of this class of laws, says: "Statutes that are passed pro bono publico rarely sweep the country with such irresistible momentum while much fantastic legislation has resulted in the organized crusades upon Legislatures by the advocates and supporters of special classes." He also characterizes the law in the language of Judge Peckham as one "meant to protect some class in the community against fair, free and full competition of some other class; the members of the former class thinking it impossible to hold their own against such competition and therefore flying to the Legislature to secure some enactment which shall operate favorably to them or unfavorably to their competitors." Some objection is made to the law upon the ground that it is class legislation as affecting only merchants. But the main ground upon which the decision is based

is the unreasonableness of the restrictions whereby the sale is prohibited unless a complete inventory showing cost price of each article is made at least five days before the sale and every creditor disclosed by inquiry of the vendor notified personally or by registered mail of the cost price of the merchandise to be sold and the price to be paid. * These restrictions are considered by Judge Werner as being so onerous as to practically prohibit the making of a sale in bulk of any magnitude. On the other hand, Judge Vann regards the restrictions as reasonable and intended only to prevent the fraudulent disposition of stocks of goods upon which credit has been obtained. A difference of opinion as to what is reasonable results almost entirely from a mental attitude and is one which no reasoning can reconcile. Judge Vann also calls attention to the numerous laws restricting the freedom of contract which have been sustained by the courts. The amendment to the New York law ('04 ch. 569) which makes such a sale only presumptively fraudulent is mentioned by Judge Vann but its effect is not commented on.

This amendment may very well be considered as removing the constitutional objection that there is deprivation of property without due process of law for the amended act only lays down a rule of evidence, but the New York law would still remain open to the objection stated by Judge Werner that the act is class legislation. In view of the concurring opinion of Judge Haight, however, emphasizing the fact that the sale is made absolutely void even though the parties act in good faith, the status of the present New York law on the subject may be considered as doubtful.

The laws of the various states on this subject differ widely in their provisions, and the constitutionality of those where the question has not been raised may depend upon whether the sale is absolutely or only presumptively void, whether a penalty is attached for failure to comply, and whether judicial sales are included. The decisions declaring such laws unconstitutional which have been discussed in previous Reviews depended in Ohio and Utah somewhat upon the fact that a sale contrary to the act was absolutely void, although in both those states the decision was also placed upon the ground of class legislation, the laws being applicable only to merchants. In Indiana, as noted last year, the law made the sale only presumptively void but contained an unusual classification and the decision was placed upon this ground. Acts making the sale absolutely void have been sustained in Massachusetts (Squire & Co. v. Tellier, 185 Mass. 18, 69 N. E. 312, 102 Am. St. Rep. 322); Michigan (Spurr

v. Travis, 108 N. W. 1090), and Washington (McDaniels v. Connelly Shoe Co., 30 Wash. 549, 71 Pac. 37, 60 L. R. A. 947, 94 Am. St. Rep. 889). Laws making the transaction presumptively fraudulent have been sustained in Oklahoma (Williams v. Fourth National Bank, 82 P. 496, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 334) and Tennessee (Neas v. Borches, 109 Tenn. 398, 71 S. W. 50, 97 Am. St. Rep. 851), but no emphasis was placed upon this feature of the law in either of those states. The decision in Tennessee is rendered by a court divided against itself, as the judge who delivers the opinion of the court sustaining the law also writes a much more elaborate dissenting opinion holding it unconstitutional, and the reasoning is rather unsatisfactory on this account. The Connecticut act providing for the recording of the sales is much less drastic than most of the other laws on the subject. It has been held not to be objectionable as class legislation although only sales by merchants are included (Walp v. Moorar, 76 Ct. 515, 57 Atl. 277; In re Paulis, 144 Fed. 472).

South Carolina ('06 ch.1) requires an inventory at the ruling wholesale price; notice to creditors showing the aggregate value of the inventory, the purchase price and the manner of payment must be given 10 days before the sale, and the inventory retained for six months by the vendor and purchaser who shall keep it open to the inspection of creditors. A sale contrary to the act is prima facie fraudulent, and the creditors are given a lien upon the goods. No exception is made of judicial sales.

In Maryland ('06 ch.421) the previous law upon the subject ('00 ch. 579) is entirely rewritten. The inventory is dispensed with and the purchaser is required to demand five days before the payment of the purchase price a written statement under oath, giving the names and addresses of all creditors with the amount of indebtedness, and to notify personally or by registered mail all of such creditors. The sale is now absolutely void, while it was formerly only prima facie fraudulent.

In view of the great divergence of judicial opinion on this subject and the peculiarities of individual laws the position likely to be taken by other courts upon this question is very doubtful. There is much to be said both for and against the constitutionality of such laws and as to the effect of particular differences. As class legislation and due process of law may both be made grounds of objection under the federal Constitution it is not unreasonable to expect that the question may be presented for decision to the Supreme Court of the United States. If that court should hold the legislation unconstitutional as a deprivation of equal protection of the laws, it would affect probably all of the laws now in existence, while if the decision were based upon the lack of due process of law the effect would depend entirely upon the reasoning of the opinion. If, however, the court should hold such laws valid it would of course be very persuasive upon state courts which had not already passed upon the question but would not affect the decisions in those states which have held the laws unconstitutional. The question is one of considerable interest and illustrates very well the uncertainty of decision where questions of class legislation or due process of law are concerned.¹

Business names. Another illustration of the attempt to prevent possible fraud by the prohibition of a practice hitherto regarded as perfectly honest by most people is seen in the enactment of two laws regulating the carrying on of business under an assumed name. In Kentucky ('06 ch.83) no one is allowed to so transact his business unless he file in the office of the county clerk a certificate showing his business name and his real name and address. These are to be indexed by the clerk. The law does not apply to corporations or prohibit the use of partnership names which include the real name of at least one of the partners.

The act of New Jersey ('06 ch.240) is exactly the same as the Kentucky law except it prohibits the use of the designation "and company" as a part of the firm name unless a statement is filed with the county clerk showing the names of all the persons who are members of the partnership. In both states the violation of the law is made a misdemeanor.

Commissions. In the Review for 1905 I noted a considerable number of enactments intended to prevent the acceptance of commissions by agents. Virginia ('06 ch.260) has a law very similar to those referred to, whereby the acceptance of a gift or commission by an agent or servant with the intention of influencing his actions in regard to his employer's or master's business is prohibited, as is the acceptance of commission by one who purchases supplies or materials for another. Violation of the law is made a misdemeanor and immunity from prosecution is given those who shall testify concerning violations of the law.

The effect of this and other similar laws may be far-reaching. Just what practices are included in them is somewhat doubtful and I have seen no judicial construction of any of these acts. They undoubtedly cover much that has been somewhat prevalent in the case of agents and servants — the receiving of pay from both parties to the transaction contrary to the legal and moral principle that no man can serve two masters. They also strike less directly at the practice of some professional men of taking fees in return for a recommendation to their client of a particular service, such as the favoring by an architect of a certain contractor or make of fixtures, or by a lawyer of a particular title company. Their efficacy in the eradication of acts at which they are aimed may, however, be questioned. Corrupt practices of this nature are illegal at common law and subject the participants to the danger of an action for deceit. The difficulty has always been to discover the fraud and this difficulty is not materially lessened by the new laws. While most of them offer immunity to the party who may testify, yet formerly when the act was not a crime testimony concerning it could be compelled in a civil action. The laws seem to be better adapted for the prevention of the petty grafting which was too small to make a civil action pay for the trouble and expense involved. Their practical effect will be watched with interest and may throw some light upon the question of how far men can be made good by legislation.

Interest. Two California laws of 1905 relating to chattel loans have been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of that state in Ex parte Sohncke, 82 Pac. 956. One of these ('05 ch.550) is invalid because it imposes an absolute penalty of $100 for violation of its provisions by an individual but only a penalty not exceeding $100 by any officer or employee of a corporation violating the law; the other ('05 ch.354) is held class legislation because it applies only to loans upon certain enumerated chattels and does not include a number of very similar chattels which are subject to mortgages.

The only recommendation regarding contracts and obligations found in governors' messages is that of Governor Vardaman of Mississippi, suggesting that the usury rate be reduced to 8% as "being as high a rate as good legitimate business can afford to pay, good public policy permit, or conscience consent to."

Negotiable instruments. Although no state has adopted the negotiable instruments law we find some legislation upon general features of this subject. In Virginia ('06 ch.132) the common law rule as to the revocation of a check by the death of the drawer is changed so that the death does not operate as such revocation if the check be presented for payment within two weeks thereafter. Any bank or banker having notice of death of depositor is required to retain moneys on deposit for one month and pay any checks which are presented within the two weeks.

In recent years there has been a tendency to require that notes given for certain transactions which are apt to be tainted with fraud have the subject of the transaction written across their face and are then nonnegotiable. Such laws usually include notes given for patent rights. The law of Wisconsin on this subject ('01 ch.268, '03 ch.438) has been declared unconstitutional in the case of Clark Co. v. Rice, 106 N. W. 231, so far as it affects the question of patent rights, as an imposition by the state of a restriction on a right given by the federal Constitution.

Suretyship. By an act of Maryland ('06 ch.270) any person who is required to give a bond may arrange with his surety for a deposit of all moneys and property for which he was responsible in such a way as to prevent the withdrawal of such money without the consent of the surety or an order of the court on notice to the surety.

THE FAMILY¹

AMASA M. EATON, PRESIDENT OF THE CONFERENCE OF COMMISSIONERS ON UNIFORMITY OF LEGISLATION

The year 1906 being one in which but few Legislatures met, we find only 16 statutes passed relating to the family. Of these Maryland enacted three, New Jersey three, Louisiana two, Massachusetts two, Ohio two, Virginia two and Kentucky and the District of Columbia one each. Not one of these seems to have been included as recommended in any governor's message and some of them are of such a nature as to suggest that they are the result of legislation enacted to meet some particular case.

Marriage. Louisiana ('06 ch.180) makes it a misdemeanor for persons between whom marriage is prohibited on account of relationship within prohibited degrees, to return to Louisiana to reside permanently after having contracted marriage in another state, without having first acquired a domicile in such state, and prescribes penalties.

In Maryland ('06 ch. 766) in addition to the statements already required to be made under oath by any applicant for a marriage license, a statement is required under oath as to whether the applicant was ever divorced.

Virginia ('06 ch.250) enacts that the courts of any county may appoint residents of their county, city or district, with power to celebrate the rites of marriage.

Divorce. Louisiana ('06 ch.150) provides that where the second marriage has been contracted in Louisiana and the defendant has left the state, an attorney to represent him shall be appointed by the court.

Maryland ('06 ch. 765) provides that one who has obtained a divorce a mensa, on the ground of abandonment, not of the kind and character specified in Code, article 16, section 36, shall not be estopped thereby from subsequently obtaining a divorce a vinculo, on the ground of abandonment.

Ohio ('06 p. 142) provides that no clerk of any Court of Common Pleas shall receive or file a petition for divorce or alimony until the costs are prepaid or security given therefor, satisfactory to the clerk, with a proviso for the waiver of prepayment of costs or security therefor, upon affidavit of inability to do so, approved by the judge.

Family property. Maryland ('06 ch. 768) provides for restraining married women from pledging their husbands' credit and prohibits tradesmen, etc. from maintaining actions against husbands upon purchases and contracts made by wives and provides a penalty for making such claims where such wives are being reasonably supplied by their husbands.

Massachusetts ('06 ch. 129) provides that the Probate Court, upon petition of a husband, or if he is insane, upon petition of his guardian or next friend, may enter a decree that such husband has been deserted by his wife, or that he is living apart from her for justifiable cause; and thereafter he may convey his real estate as if he were sole and the surviving wife shall not be entitled to waive the provisions of a will made by him under Revised Laws, chapter 135, section 16.

But it is questioned whether the act is constitutional, as the wife is given no day in court to answer the petition. Is she not deprived of her right of dower without due process of law?

Property rights of married women. New Jersey ('06 ch. 248) provides that any married woman may maintain an action in her own name without joining her husband, for all torts committed against her or her property as if she were a feme sole; but this shall not take away any right of action at law or in equity now provided for such torts.

Support of family. Kentucky ('06 ch. 31) makes it a misdemeanor for any adult resident having a destitute parent within the state to neglect to provide such parent with necessary food, etc.

Massachusetts ('06 ch. 501) provides a penalty of not more than $100 or imprisonment for not more than six months for neglect to provide for the support of a wife or minor child or children, or for actually abandoning or leaving them in danger of becoming a public burden, with provision for placing such delinquent upon probation.

New Jersey ('06 ch. 160) authorizes the Court of Chancery to apply two thirds of the surplus annual income of any idiot, lunatic or person of unsound mind, upon bill or petition, for the support, maintenance or education, for three years, of the parents, brothers or sisters of the whole or of the half blood of such idiot, etc. who are without adequate means and are dependent upon the bounty of others. Query, is this constitutional? If an idiot can thus be deprived of two thirds of his annual income for three years, could he not also be deprived of the whole of it forever?

Ohio ('06 p. 98) exempts a child from the necessity of providing for support of a parent, when such parent abandoned such child while an infant under 16.

In the District of Columbia, U. S. '05-'06, ch. 66 makes it a misdemeanor to abandon or wilfully neglect to provide, etc. without just cause, for the support of wife or children in destitute circumstances, and provides for the placing of the delinquent on probation, directing payment of a certain sum weekly, for one year, for such support, with or without recognizance, as the court may direct.

Adoption of adult. Virginia ('06 ch. 186) authorizes any unmarried inhabitant of the state, or a husband and wife jointly, to petition the county, city or Circuit Court for leave to adopt an adult, not their child, with the consent in writing of such person, and to change his or her name. The court may grant such petition, but on the decease of such adopted parent and the subsequent decease of such adopted person without issue, the property of such adopted parent undisposed of, shall descend to his or her next of kin and not to the next of kin of such adopted person. No property which, by any will or other writing, would go to the child or heir of a person so adopting an adult, shall go to such adopted adult, unless the fee simple first vested in the person so adopting said adult.

Together with a marked tendency in some of these statutes towards that increased humanitarianism that is a marked characteristic of our times, there is also a tendency towards the establishment of equal legal rights, irrespective of sex.

REVIEW OF LEGISLATION 1906

LEGISLATION BULLETIN 33F

TRANSPORTATION AND COMMUNICATION¹

ALLYN A. YOUNG PH.D., ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR OF ECONOMICS, LELAND
STANFORD JR UNIVERSITY

During the period covered by this review 92 statutes relating to transportation and communication were enacted by American states. This is only about two fifths of the number that were enacted in the preceding year, but it should be remembered that in 1906 regular sessions of the Legislature were held in only 13 states. Of these, all but Rhode Island made more or less important additions to the body of American transportation law, to which extra legislative sessions in Pennsylvania and Wisconsin also contributed. Of these statutes 52 related primarily to railroads, 21 to street railroads, 2 to express companies, 11 to bridges, 2 to telegraphs and telephones, 2 to canals, and 2 to ferries. One half of the laws were enacted by six states, Massachusetts contributing 14, New Jersey 11, South Carolina 10, Arkansas 8, Ohio 7. Among the more important measures of the year may be mentioned the new Ohio railroad commission law, the passenger rate legislation in Ohio, Maryland and Virginia, the Ohio safety appliance law, the inclusion of express companies in the scope of the supervisory powers of the Massachusetts Board of Railroad Commissioners, the changes in the powers of the New York city board of rapid transit commissioners, and the granting of supervisory powers over telegraph and telephone lines to the Massachusetts Highway Commission.

Railroads

Nearly one half of the railroad legislation of the year related to such matters as rates and services and the powers of commissions. The other statutes were distributed about evenly between provisions for public safety, regulations of damage claims, conditions of incorporation, and miscellaneous provisions.

Commissions. The only new railroad commission established by the legislation of the year was that of Ohio ('06 p.342). Since

¹See also Governors Messages and Index of Legislation, 1200.

1867 Ohio has had a commissioner of railroads and telegraphs, with limited powers. The new law abolishes this office and establishes the "Railroad Commission of Ohio" composed of three members, appointed by the Governor for a term of six years. One of the appointees is to have a "general knowledge of railway law," the other two are to have "a general understanding of matters relating to railroad transportation," while no more than two are to be members of the same political party. The commissioners are to devote their time to the duties of their office, and are to hold no other public office, nor serve on the committee of any political party. These qualifications (except the provision for a bipartisan commission) are similar to those stipulated in the Wisconsin commission law of 1905. In fact the Ohio statute seems to have borrowed many provisions from the Wisconsin law, although it is in general similar to other recent laws establishing commissions — all of which seem to have been affected in many points by the discussion preceding the adoption by Congress of the Hepburn law, increasing the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The carriers subject to the provisions of the act include railroad corporations, express companies, car companies, freight and freight line companies, all common carriers over railroad lines; or part rail and part water lines, and the owners of private tracks "in so far as the same are used by common carriers, in connection with any railroad for the transportation of freight." Sleeping car companies, street and electric railroads engaged solely in the transportation of passengers within the limits of cities, and private railroads not doing business as common carriers are specifically exempted.

Like other laws of the kind, the Ohio statute comprises two distinct classes of provisions: one class makes certain requirements of the carriers and imposes penalties for the violation of the same; the other class confers powers and imposes duties upon the commission. The carriers are required to furnish reasonable facilities and services and to charge reasonable rates. Unjust discrimination between shippers, localities or kinds of traffic is prohibited, penalties for violation of this provision being imposed on both corporation and agent. Rebates are punishable by penalties, as well as punitive damages to the amount of treble the amount of injuries. Schedules of rates, fares and regulations are to be printed in a form prescribed by the commission, and filed in the office of the commission and in all stations. Changes from this schedule are not allowed without 10 days' notice except by special permission of the commission. The schedules are to include all concentration, commodity, transit and other special contract rates, together with joint rates. All roads within the state must use a uniform freight classification. Free transportation or reduced rates are prohibited save in special cases mentioned in the statute. In case of car shortage, cars are to be distributed proportionately among all applicants, without regard to competitive conditions, although special facilities may be given to shippers of live stock and perishable freight.

The new commission succeeds to all the powers of the Commissioner of Railroads and Telegraphs — whose effective powers were very few, including, however, the right to order repairs to track and bridges, and to require certain reports from railroad and telegraph companies (R. S. '00 ch.7). The commission is to supervise the enforcement of all the railroad laws of the state, to investigate violations, and to request the Attorney General or prosecuting attorney to prosecute. The commission may investigate and make a special report with regard to claims for loss, damage or overcharge, if the same are not acted upon within 90 days by the railroad. For the purpose of inquiry into the management of railroads, the commission is to use blanks conforming as nearly as possible to those of the Interstate Commerce Commission. For this purpose it also has the right to inspect books, to obtain copies of contracts, and to examine officers and employees under oath. Railroads are required to file annually with the commission a verified list of all tickets, passes or mileage books issued free. In addition the commission is to obtain annual reports from all railroad companies, similar in form to those furnished to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Of especial public interest at the present time are the provisions relating to rate control. Hearings in the matters of unjust rates or inadequate services may be held upon complaint or at the initiative of the commission, after 10 days' notice to railroad and complainant. In connection with the hearings the commission has the power to administer oaths, issue subpoenas, and to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents. If the complaint is found to be reasonable the commission has the power to fix new rates, classifications or regulations. Orders of the commission are operative 30 days after service, and may be rescinded or altered by the commission only after another hearing. Within 60 days of the commission's order the railroad or other party in interest may commence an action in the Court of Common Pleas to set aside the order of the commission as unlawful and unreasonable. Answer may be filed by the commission and (by permission of the court) any party in interest. The burden of proof is upon the complainant. Such actions take precedence of any other kind of civil cause. If new evidence is introduced the commission may rescind or modify its order; in the latter case the judgment of the court will be rendered on the order as amended. Appeal may be taken to a higher court. Witnesses before the commission or the court are not to be excused from testifying on the ground that the evidence may incriminate them, but no witness is to be subject to prosecution on account of the matter concerning which he has testified. All rates, fares and classifications prescribed by the commission are prima facie lawful for the period of one year, while all regulations, practices and services prescribed by the commission are prima facie reasonable, no time limit being set.

Nebraska adopted at the general election of 1906 a constitutional amendment providing for an elective railway commission of three members, with rate-making powers. Georgia ('06 p.100) took a step not in harmony with present tendencies by providing that the railroad commission of that state, heretofore appointed by the Governor, should henceforth be elected by the voters of the state. Iowa ('06 ch.38) changed the tenure of office of the railroad commissioners of that state from three to four years. Kentucky ('06 ch.85) increased the salaries of the commissioners from $2000 to $3000 and $3600; required the railways to furnish free transportation to the commissioners, and authorized additions to the clerical force. Louisiana ('06 ch.195) authorized its commission to appear before the Interstate Commerce Commission, when in its judgment the interests of shippers or consignees in the state require it. Massachusetts ('06 ch.417) increased the salary of its commissioners to $5000 and (chairman) $6000. The same state ('06 ch.267) provided that block signals are to be installed upon the order of the board of commissioners, the Supreme Judicial Court having jurisdiction in equity to enforce such orders. The board is also authorized ('06 r.54) to expend $2500 in the investigation of railroad safety appliances, the expenses to be assessed upon steam railroads, in proportion to their gross earnings. The South Carolina commissioners ('06 ch.8) may require the erection of depots at such places as the travel and public interests in their judgment may justify. Virginia ('06 ch.256) required the state corporation commission to fix a schedule of passenger rates. Wisconsin ('05 ex. sess. ch.13) made some important additions to the railroad commission law of that state ('05 ch.362). The most significant is, possibly, the power given to the commission to prescribe a uniform system of accounts, the only condition being that such system shall conform as nearly as practicable to the accounts kept by federal authority. The provisions of the law pertaining to complaints and investigations are extended to services as well as rates. The commission is also empowered to order (upon complaint and after hearing) the installation of gates, flagmen, signals, etc. This provision is in accordance with a recommendation in the message of Governor LaFollette of December 5, 1905. It is also stipulated that in interchange of traffic, railroads shall switch for a reasonable compensation. The list of cases in which reduced rates or free transportation may be given is extended.

The present status of state railway commissions in the United States (including the Nebraska commission, authorized by constitutional amendment) and the changes made by recent legislation are indicated in the following table:

Number of commissions.....	31	33	34
Possessing power over rates.....	21	24	26
Appointed by Governor.....	11	13	12
More than one member.....	25	28	30

Rates. Charges. Weights. The only maximum freight rate law of the year was enacted by Maryland ('06 ch.472½), prohibiting a charge of more than 2 cents a gallon for receiving, hauling, icing and delivering milk and cream, when the distance is less than 30 miles, or 2½ cents a gallon when the distance is between 30 and 50 miles. The rates on buttermilk and skim-milk are to be ½ cent lower. South Carolina ('06 ch.75) permits consignees of coal or other articles in carload lots to demand reweighing of same at any delivery point where the carrier maintains track scales, demurrage not to be charged on account of the time thus used. In this connection the carriers are required to provide track scales on industrial side tracks, upon demand of and at the expense of the owners of the establishments concerned. The Washington statute ('05 ch.124 § 2) mentioned in last year's review, requiring 1000 pounds to be deducted from the net weight of shipments of lumber on account of the appliances used in equipping cars to carry lumber, was declared unconstitutional (State v. Great Northern Ry. Co. 86 P. 1056) as taking property without due process of law.

Service. Laws relating to such matters as the character of railway service, station facilities and the collection of damages constitute an especially large proportion of the railway legislation of Southern States. Two South Carolina statutes ('06 ch.65, 73) may be classed under the first of these heads. The carrier is not to interfere in any way with the contract of shipment; in furnishing cars the carrier can not designate the consignee, the carrier being liable for actual, special and punitive damages to the shipper and the consignee. Railroads are also required to furnish shippers full information regarding the shipment, movement and delivery of live stock, including telegraphic information if more than three hours behind the schedule. Virginia ('06 ch.301) requires every common carrier to receive and receipt for freight delivered for shipment during business hours, exceptions being made in the case of live stock, lumber, perishable freight, or freight requiring special cars. The United States Supreme Court decided (Houston and Texas Central Railroad v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 321) that articles 4497-5000 of the Revised Statutes of Texas are void, being in violation of the federal Constitution. The court said: "An absolute requirement that a railroad engaged in interstate commerce shall furnish a certain number of cars on a specified day, to transport merchandise to another state, regardless of other considerations except strikes and other public calamities, amounts to a burden on interstate commerce, and can not be sustained as an exercise of the police power of the state."

Stations. Arkansas ('05 ch.194) compels any railroad passing through a city or incorporated town within $\frac{1}{2}$ mile of the state boundary line to erect a depot and stop all passenger trains, unless there is a depot within 300 feet of the other side of the line at which all passenger trains stop. A Georgia statute ('06 p.101), which applies only to county seats and towns and cities of over 1000 population, requires that stations shall be opened, lighted and warmed at night, for at least one hour before and one half hour after the arrival and departure of trains. Virginia ('06 ch.298) requires railroad companies to maintain telephones in their public offices, where "prompt and correct replies" shall be made to "all reasonable and proper inquiries." A South Carolina law ('06 ch.52) prohibits the furnishing of meals to white and colored passengers in the same room of station restaurants.

Passenger rates. In no less than nine states there was agitation for laws enforcing lower passenger rates, although in only three states were such laws finally passed. Ohio, after a discussion which attracted widespread attention, reduced ('06 p.4) the legal maximum (R. S. § 3374) from 3 cents to 2 cents a mile, the maximum distance for which the legal rate does not apply being reduced from 8 to 5 miles. As stated above, the State Corporation Commission of Virginia is required to fix a schedule of passenger rates; in the meanwhile it is provided ('06 ch.256) that the railroads of that state are to issue mileage books in units of 500 miles and over at the maximum rate of 2 cents a mile. The mileage is good for one year from date of issue and is redeemable within 18 months of the expiration of the time limit. Maryland ('06 ch.174) requires the sale of 500 and 1000 mile books at the maximum price of 2 cents a mile. The mileage is good until used and is transferable between members of a family, or members or employees of a firm. South Carolina ('06 ch.34) did away with one of the survivals of the "toll" principle in railway charges by prohibiting companies from charging passengers extra for crossing a bridge on any river, whether wholly or partly within the state.

Passes. Iowa ('06 ch.90) prohibits steam or interurban railways from granting passes or special rates to public officers (certain exceptions being mentioned in the statute) and makes the acceptance of the same unlawful. Oregon voted at the general election of June 4, 1906, on an act proposed by initiative petition, prohibiting free passes and discriminations by railroad companies and other public service corporations. Although the law passed, it was considered of no effect, the enacting clause being omitted. Texas rejected a proposed amendment to the Constitution prohibiting the acceptance by public officers of privileges from telegraph or telephone companies or common carriers.

Public safety. As is usual, most of the statutes that can be classed under this heading relate to grade crossings. Arkansas ('05 ch.36) stipulated that the maximum grade of a street or road at the approach to a crossing with a steam railroad should be 10% (formerly 20%). New Jersey ('06 ch.301) included incorporated towns with cities in the provisions of a law ('03 ch.257) prohibiting grade crossings except with the consent of the municipal authorities. The board of rapid transit commissioners of New York city were directed by a state enactment ('06 ch.109) to prepare a plan for the removal of the grade tracks of steam railroads to subways. If the commissioners and the railroads do not agree on plans within 12 months condemnation proceedings may be used. Ohio ('06 p.191) provided that before the installation of grade crossings ordered by municipal authorities, notice should be given to the owners of abutting property so as to permit the filing of claims for damages. The same statute gives municipalities the right of action against street railway companies for their proportion of the expense of making such improvements. The Supreme Court of Errors of Connecticut decided (Appeal of Spencer, 61 A. 1010) that the Superior Court can not substitute its own plans for crossings for those of the Board of Railroad Commissioners without usurping extrajudicial functions.

The provisions of the general statutes relating to the abolition of grade crossings (§ 3718, 3747) are (in so far as they authorize such action on the part of the court) unconstitutional.

The provisions of the Massachusetts law (R. L. ch.111 § 211) requiring safeguards against fire to be placed in cars, were extended ('06 ch.283) to all passenger, baggage, mail and express cars, whether containing heating apparatus or not. Ohio ('06 p.75) enacted a new safety appliance law (Cf. R. S: § 3365) requiring that locomotives and 75% of the cars in a train be equipped with power brakes. This percentage may be increased at the discretion of the Railroad Commission. Automatic couplers, drawbars and grab irons are also required. In addition to penalties for violation, it is provided that contributory negligence shall not be set up as a defense in case of injury to employees on cars not equipped according to law.

Damages. An Arkansas statute is designed to facilitate the collection of small damage claims ('05 ch.144). If the amount does not exceed $10, collection may be made from the agent at destination, provided that an itemized statement, verified by affidavit, is presented within three days after the goods are received. If payment is refused, damages may be recovered for treble the claim. Georgia ('06 p.102) makes every carrier receiving property for shipments within the state liable for loss or damage on connecting lines as well as on its own. The time limit for payment of damages on intrastate shipments is fixed at 60 days; on interstate, at 90 days. The penalty for exceeding these limits is $50 and legal interest. Iowa ('06 ch.89) allows suit against joint carriers to be brought in any county through which the shipment passes, providing the owner lives in such county (amending '04 ch.74). South Carolina enacted in 1902 (ch.568) a statute making common carriers liable for the conversion to their own use of property held by them on consignment or in course of transportation. The liability extended only to the value of the property, but is now ('06 ch.66) reinforced by a penalty of five times the value, which, however, does not apply in case of wrecks, property so damaged as to unfit it for its own purpose, or delivery by error to the wrong consignee. Virginia ('06 ch.62) amended its former law on this subject (Code '87 § 1295) so as to make the carrier liable for safe carriage to point of destination, when the carrier selects the route beyond its own lines — the alternative being a written contract, setting forth all the connecting carriers in order, the transfer points, and the amount of freight to be received by each carrier.

Incorporation and general powers. Consolidation. Massachusetts ('06 ch.463) codified the existing railway law of that commonwealth. Arkansas ('05 ch.163, 268) gave mining or quarry corporations the right to operate short railway lines, conferring on them the rights and powers of other common carriers, including eminent domain. Maryland ('06 ch.717) added a new section to its general railway law, authorizing Maryland railroad corporations to use electricity as a motive power. New Jersey ('06 ch.141) amended its law relating to railway mergers ('03 ch.257) by permitting New Jersey railroad corporations to take leases of railroads owned by corporations of other states. Virginia ('06 ch.296) amended its general incorporation law ('03 ch.270) so as to include federal corporations among those with which the merger of Virginia corporations is permitted. Roads competing between points in the state are not allowed to consolidate, although, if the State Corporation Commission consents, a Virginia railroad may lease or buy the incompleated properties of another railroad, no part of whose line is yet in operation. It is provided, however, that the assent of the commission is not to be given if the proposed consolidation is adjudged to prevent competition. In the case of roads whose securities are held in part by the state, legislative action is also necessary.

Construction. Eminent domain. Idaho rejected the constitutional amendments mentioned in last year's review, which were intended to encourage the construction of railroads by permitting localities to incur indebtedness in order to give bonuses to railroads, and by permitting the temporary exemption of new lines of railroad from taxation. Louisiana ('06 ch.186) authorized parochial and municipal authorities (excepting the parish of Orleans) to issue bonds against the proceeds of special taxes voted in favor of railway enterprises, the bonds maturing annually. Kentucky ('06 ch.91) authorized union station companies to condemn land for their purposes. A North Carolina statute ('87 ch.46) was declared invalid by the Supreme Court of that state (Cozad v. Kanawha Hardwood Co. 51 S. E. 932) in so far as it authorized owners of timber lands to condemn a right of way for a tramway or railway over the land of others, in that this takes private property for a use which is not public.

Miscellaneous. Statutes enacted in New York ('06 ch.380) and Kentucky ('06 ch.62) provide for special railroad police, to be appointed by the Governor and paid by the corporation. In New York such appointments may be given to conductors and brakemen, Maryland ('06 p.1423) provided for the appointment of four members of the Maryland bar to conduct inquiries regarding the rights and interests of the state in the Washington branch of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. These questions have arisen in connection with the construction of the new Washington terminals. A joint special committee is to inquire into the value of the stock held by the state of Maryland in the Washington branch.

Express companies

Arkansas ('05 ch.250) compels express companies to settle for damage or loss within 20 days, the penalty being $2 a day. Massachusetts gave the Board of Railroad Commissioners "supervisory power with regard to the character of accommodations and service furnished, and the reasonableness of rates charged" by express companies; this power to be exercised on complaint of an interested party. A Mississippi statute ('06 ch.135) specifies that as express companies are common carriers under the state Constitution, it shall be unlawful for any person or firm, except those duly chartered as express companies, to engage in the express business between points in the state.

Street and electric railways

Corporate powers. Franchises. The Massachusetts general railway law ('06 ch.463) includes electric railways in its general provisions as to incorporation. Additional regulations, peculiar to electric roads, are contained in a separate statute ('06 ch.516). The power to decide to what extent electric railways shall act as common carriers is vested in the boards of aldermen or selectmen. In case of disputes as to rates between a board of aldermen and the directors of a road, the matter is to be settled by the Board of Railroad Commissioners. The statute also provides for an additional corporate franchise tax and local excise taxes. It may be noted that Governor Guild had, in his message of January 4, 1906, recommended the extension of general law to legislation affecting street and electric railroads. Another Massachusetts statute ('06 ch.339) authorized the mayor (by vote of the city council) or the selectmen (by vote of the town) to petition the Supreme Judicial Court for relief in case a street railway company discontinues the use of any track. An important special act is that of the same state authorizing the Boston Elevated Railway Company to construct subways in the city of Cambridge ('06 ch.520).

In Ohio, municipal councils can, with the consent of the owners of a majority of the foot frontage, grant franchises to interurban roads for terminal purposes ('06 p.253). In case the street is already occupied by a street railroad the right to use the tracks may be acquired, if necessary, by condemnation proceedings. Interurban companies are expressly exempted from the provisions of the Ohio statutes (R. S. § 2501, 2502) ordering franchises to be sold by public competitive bidding to the corporation offering to make the lowest fares.

New Jersey ('06 ch.311) amended an older statute ('86 ch.135) so that municipal authorities are given power to grant franchises for extensions as well as for original locations of street railways. A former section prohibiting the granting of a franchise for a location within 1000 feet or two blocks of an existing company (except to cross the same) was stricken out. New Jersey now permits street railways to carry freight or express (prohibited by '96 ch.144) if the consent of the municipality is obtained ('06 ch.77). The councils of New Jersey boroughs are also authorized ('06 ch.194) to provide for the construction and operation of street railroads, not exceeding 1 mile in length, to and from the depot of any steam railroad within the limits of the borough. A petition signed by the owners of at least one half of the real estate within the borough and the approval of 60% of the voters at a special election are prerequisites. Tickets are to be sold in multiples of 10 at not more than 3 cents apiece. Construction is by contract; power may be contracted for, and the road may (by approval of the majority of the voters) be leased for a period of not over 5 years.

New York enacted an important law ('06 ch.606) amendatory to the act establishing the New York city board of rapid transit commissioners. Vacancies in this body, which was formerly self-perpetuating, are henceforth to be filled by appointments by the mayor. The act is designed to permit the separation of contracts for construction, equipment and operation of rapid transit railways. Reserve power is given to the city to construct, to equip and to operate. If the contract for operation is awarded to a private bidder, the term of such franchise is limited to 20 years, with a 20 year renewal clause. At present the New York subway is owned by the city, but leased to a private corporation for a period of 50 years, with the privilege of renewal under an amended contract for 25 years. The new law facilitates the municipal ownership, and possibly operation, of future subways.

Two New York statutes of 1901 (ch.494, 508) were declared unconstitutional by the Court of Appeals (In re Brooklyn, Q. C. and

S. R. Co. 77 N. E. 994). These statutes had provided that consent by the local authorities of any city, previously acquired by any street railroad corporation, should be deemed to be in full force and effect until December 31, 1903, and had also declared that section 5 of the railroad law ('90 ch.565), providing for the forfeiture of corporate powers by any railroad not beginning construction within five years of its incorporation, should not apply to any street railroad company incorporated prior to July 1, 1895, which had obtained the consent of the local authorities. So far as these statutes of 1901 related to railroad companies which had already forfeited their charter rights, they were held to conflict with the constitutional provision (art.3 § 18) that the Legislature should not authorize the construction of street railroads, except with the consent of the local authorities and the owners of one half the abutting property.

Virginia ('06 ch.206) gave to Virginia corporations, operating railroads by electricity, power to do a general electric lighting and power business.

Public supervision. An Arkansas statute ('05 ch.179) requires the installation of safeguards against the contact of the overhead wires of electric lines and the cars, track and telegraph line of steam railroad companies. The same state ('05 ch.331) requires the heating of street cars during cold weather. Massachusetts authorized the Board of Railroad Commissioners to expend $2500 in testing fenders and other safety devices applicable to street cars, such expenditures to be assessed on the street railroad companies ('06 r.55). Another Massachusetts statute ('06 ch.479) admits the children in private as well as in public schools (R.L. ch.112 § 72) to the half fare privilege on street and elevated railroads. The same state extended the term of office of the Boston transit commissioners for three years from July 1906 ('06 ch.213).

Separation of races. Numerous laws relating to the separation of white and colored passengers on steam and electric railroads have been enacted in Southern States during the past few years. A Virginia law ('04 ex. sess. ch.609 pt 4), relating to cars operated by electricity, is now made more stringent ('06 ch.91). A Florida statute of similar purport ('05 ch.49) contained a clause exempting colored nurses in charge of white children or invalids from the provisions of the act. On this account the Supreme Court of the state held (State v. Patterson 39 S. 398) that the statute violated the first section of the 14th amendment to the federal Constitution.

Canals

An Ohio statute confers the powers and duties of the Ohio Canal Commission on the Board of Public Works. The Canal Commission is to make a final report. The canal problem in Ohio had reached such a point that according to the message of Governor Herrick (January 1, 1906) it was necessary to face squarely the question of rebuilding the canals or abandoning them. The incoming Governor (Pattison) in his message of January 8 said that "As to the canals, it is right that we should take it for granted that to maintain them is the settled policy of the state. . . . The canals may be developed into a system of water highways adequate for transportation of freight in unbroken bulk at minimum rates between ports on the Great Lakes and ports on the Ohio, Mississippi, and the Gulf." It would undoubtedly be the opinion of most economic students that any attempts to carry out such a policy would result in failure.

Bridges. Tunnels

New Jersey ('06 ch.201) authorized county boards to issue bonds for the purpose of constructing bridges on navigable waters, when required by the War Department or other department of the federal government. The same state ('06 p.737) and New York ('06 ch.260) arranged for committees to confer as to the construction of one or more bridges over the Hudson. Another New York statute ('06 ch.606) revises a law of that state ('91 ch.4 § 32) empowering the board of rapid transit commissioners of New York city to grant franchises for tunnels under the Hudson, Harlem or East rivers, and under the city. The amendment makes the approval of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment a prerequisite, and limits the scope of the law to tunnels built to connect with trunk line railroads.

Telegraphs and telephones

An important Massachusetts law ('06 ch.433) gives the Highway Commission of that state general supervision over all companies engaged in the "transmission of intelligence by electricity." An additional requirement of members of the commission is that they shall not be connected with such companies; additional appropriations are made for expenses and salaries (to be met by the companies concerned in proportion to gross earnings); the commission is to make an annual report; public hearings are to be held upon the complaint of a mayor, selectmen or 20 customers; the Attorney General is to be notified of violations of law; the Supreme Judicial Court and the Superior Court are given jurisdiction in equity to enforce all lawful orders of the commission; an annual report is required from each company, which must also furnish information to the commission on request, as well as give access to its books; uniform accounts are to be kept in form approved by the commission.

REVIEW OF LEGISLATION 1906

LEGISLATION BULLETIN 33S

INSURANCE¹

S. HUEBNER PH.D., INSTRUCTOR IN INSURANCE AND COMMERCE, UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA

During 1906 the Legislatures of the several states passed only 64 laws on insurance subjects, as compared with 169 laws during the year 1905. Of this comparatively small number of laws four states (Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana and New York) contributed 37 or more than one half. The insurance legislation of 1906 does not, therefore, appear to have been very prolific if judged from the number of enactments.

But while the number of laws passed was small, the year 1906 will be long remembered as marking one of the most remarkable upheavals in the life insurance business, and the passage by the New York Legislature of the remarkable law of April 27 ('06 ch.326). This law may be said to contain the most revolutionary and drastic provisions for the regulation of life insurance corporations ever passed in this country. It embodies practically the whole field of life insurance, and was passed to prevent a repetition of the many evils disclosed by the Armstrong investigating committee. The disclosures during the investigation clearly showed that the management of some of the largest companies was marked by wastefulness, dishonesty and reckless financiering, that under present laws the policy holders were largely unprotected, and that remedial legislation was required on every hand. The law of April 27 was designed to afford a remedy for all the abuses disclosed.

Because of its new provisions, its far-reaching effect and all inclusive character, this law will be the chief topic of discussion in this review, the object being to group its provisions under proper headings, and to show why their passage was recommended by the committee. Certain it is that this law is many times more important than all the other insurance laws of 1906 combined. Not only was this law passed in the wealthiest state of the Union, but it is the law of the state in which the largest American life insurance companies are domiciled. Some of its important provisions are expressly applied to all foreign life insurance companies wishing to do business in the state of New York, and will, therefore, have a profound influence on foreign as well as New York companies. Such effects are already noticeable on every hand. There is every reason to believe that the New York insurance legislation of 1906 will make a deep impression on the rest of the country in the course of a few years, and will mark the beginning of a new era of legislation which will have for its aim the protection of policy holders as regards the quality of insurance sold and the vast sums of money held in trust by the companies.

New York—cost and amount of new business. The business policy of many life insurance companies during the last 20 years was characterized by an all absorbing desire to attain great size. While the legislative committee recognized the importance of spreading insurance as widely as possible, and conceded the value of having a large membership in a company in order to reduce the average expense rate and secure a more accurate application of the law of average to the rate of mortality, it was the decided opinion of the committee that the growth of insurance companies should not overstep the bounds of reason regardless of the cost and quality of the new business secured. The committee felt that existing policy holders must be protected against excessive expenditures for new business, and that radical action must be taken to curb the many existing abuses shown by evidence to exist on every hand. As regards many companies quality in insurance was no longer the moving spirit but size and leadership were the all absorbing dream.

Well might the committee have reached this conclusion. Bonuses, advances, exorbitant commissions, rebates, and costly presents were found to exist on every hand. In some of the largest companies the entire first year's premium was expended for obtaining the new business, and in a few companies expenses reached such proportions that for every dollar of premium received on the new business from $2 to $2.50 was expended. Excluding the "Big Three," 10 New York companies expended an amount for new business during the year 1904 aggregating 125% of the premium; whereas six companies whose business is conducted on an economical basis expended only 65.3%. Thirty years ago agents only received from 20 to 30% of the first premium. But as competition increased and the desire for size became dominant, commissions also increased until they rose to 60% of the first premium, with renewal premiums of 7½ to 10% for periods of from 10 to 15 years, and bonuses ranging from $2 to $5 for every $1000 of insurance written. As was testified by one prominent agency manager, "sometimes when the agents were given commissions and large salaries the salary was given them to live on and the commissions to buy business with."

But to correct and limit such excessive expenditures it was necessary for the legislative investigating committee to adopt some proper standard by which to measure a life insurance company's expenses for new business. Such a standard, it was seen, must protect existing policy holders and make new business pay for the cost of its own solicitation. With this object in view the committee, after consulting the leading actuaries of the country, adopted a rule which permits companies to expend for new business "the saving in mortality during the first five years of insurance plus the loading on the first year's premium." This amount it was held should suffice to pay for new business, since it represented no more than what was being expended by the conservative companies of the country.

The law passed in compliance with this recommendation has for its aim the bringing of the extravagant companies to the footing of the most economical. It provides (N. Y. '06 ch.326 § 97) that after 1906 no company, domestic or foreign, writing business in New York, shall expend (1) for commissions on first year's premiums, (2) for compensation, not paid by commissions for services in obtaining new insurance exclusive of salaries paid in good faith for agency supervision, either at home offices or branch offices, (3) for medical examinations and inspections of proposed risks, and (4) for advances to agents, "an amount exceeding the aggregate loading upon the first year's premium plus the value of the mortality gain for the first five years of the life of the policy." To quote the committee, "had this standard been applied to the entire group of 32 companies with reference to all the business except industrial, their entire expenses would have amounted in 1904 to only $31,904,771, or $23,110,507 less than had actually been expended. Under such a limitation this great sum would have been saved for policy holders, amounting to an addition of about 30% of the surplus earnings of the year."

This important section of the law of April 27, 1906, limiting expenses, is supplemented by many others. Henceforth no agent may receive any other compensation than that determined in advance. Bonuses, prizes, rewards and additional compensation of all kinds are prohibited. Rebating is likewise prohibited, and henceforth any person knowingly receiving any rebate or allowance or deduction from any premium, or any valuable thing, special favor or advantage whatever as an inducement to take any policy of life insurance, not specified in the policy, is guilty of a misdemeanor ('06 ch.231). Renewal premiums are carefully defined, and it is provided that no company may pay commissions upon renewal premiums which exceed 5% for nine years in case of endowment policies providing for less than 20 annual premiums, or which exceed 7½% of the premium for nine years in the case of other forms of insurance. With minor exceptions this rule is to apply to all insurance companies, domestic and foreign, operating in the state of New York (ch.326 § 97).

To forestall all attempts at evasion the Legislature resorted to the extreme measure of limiting the amount of new business which a company may acquire in any one year (ch.326 § 96). The new business of companies, possessing from $50,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 of insurance, is limited for all companies according to a graded schedule. For companies with business in excess of $1,000,000,000, the amount of new business for any one year is limited to $150,000,000. Henceforth the largest companies will find their new business practically cut in two and the small companies will be relieved from the strenuous competition of the "Giant Three." Few sections of the New York law are given greater importance than this, and it is universally conceded that it will insure a reduction in agency expenses.

By way of supplementing the foregoing sections, the Legislature also saw fit to supervise the use which life insurance companies may make of their surplus. Companies issuing participating policies may not do a nonparticipating business, except as regards paid-up or temporary and pure endowment insurance issued or granted in exchange for lapsed or surrendered policies (ch.326 § 102). All dividends must be paid annually and can no longer be deferred (§ 101). Furthermore the amount of surplus which any company may hold has been limited (§ 87, 205). The largest companies — those with policies whose net value is equal to $75,000,000 or more — may no longer hold a surplus which is larger than 5% of the sum which the law compels them to have on hand for the payment of losses. Everything above this 5% must be returned to the policy holders annually in the form of dividends.

It is also decreed (§ 98) that no domestic life insurance company may pay any salary or other compensation to any officer, trustee or director, or any person, firm or corporation amounting in any year to more than $5000 unless authorization be obtained by a vote of the board of directors. Nor may any life insurance corporation hereafter make any agreement with any of its officers, trustees or salaried employees whereby it agrees that for any services rendered they shall receive any compensation which will extend beyond one year from the date of the agreement. Pensions may no longer be granted to any officer, director or trustee or to any member of his family after his death; and in section 99 it is provided that no domestic life insurance company shall make any disbursement of $100 or more unless the same be evidenced by a voucher properly signed by or on behalf of the person or corporation receiving the money, correctly describing the consideration of the payment, and, if the same be for services, setting forth the services rendered.

New York—life insurance investments. Closely connected with the legislation regulating the cost of life insurance to the policy holder are those sections of the New York law which supervise life insurance investments. Although New York companies compute their premiums upon an assumed rate of interest of 3 or 3½%, a rate which could be easily realized, the fact developed during the recent legislative inquiry that many leading companies constantly made investments yielding much less than this required rate. With 4% available in many kinds of investments, the managers of certain companies saw fit to deposit millions of dollars in banks and trust companies paying 2% or less, despite the fact that life insurance companies do not require big deposits, and in nearly all instances have a weekly income considerably larger than the outlay. The companies' representatives argued that, inasmuch as the companies were themselves stockholders in these banks and trust companies, these deposits at a low rate of interest would swell the profits attaching to the stock. But the legislative investigating committee could not see it that way, and answered the argument by contending that investments in stocks and bank deposits are two distinct and separate fields and a loss in one can not be justified by a gain in the other.

While investments in first mortgages show an average return to insurance companies of from 4½ to 5%, many of the companies preferred to place millions upon millions of their assets in expensive buildings and real estate, the return from which was less than 3% and in many cases less than 2% on the book value, although such book value had been constantly diminished to show a more favorable investment return. Then, too, the evidence clearly showed that many of the companies participated in underwriting syndicates, and purchased securities not for investment, but for speedy resale with a view of making a speculative profit. In most instances these syndicate arrangements proved profitable and this was advanced as a justification for their being undertaken. The investigating committee, however, did not take this view. In some instances it was shown that the companies advanced their credit, and, upon the allotment of profits, were not given their fair share, the officers justifying this division of profits on the ground of expert service having been given the companies.

In too many instances where the underwriting venture proved profitable it was shown that the governing motive of the syndicate managers in offering the participation to the company was to work themselves into its good graces because they would profit later by inducing the company to buy their securities. All these practices the committee condemned as taking the companies "out of their normal relation as creditors through suitable investments, and making them co-owners of the corporation and promoters of the undertakings to which they had thus become allied." The committee said in its report:

These practices have weakened the sense of official responsibility, multiplying the opportunities for gain, both direct and indirect, to officers and directors through the use of the company's funds, and making easy the exercise of official discretion at the promptings of self-interest. The profits made possible under astute management of those closely identified with important financial operations furnish no answer to the criticism of this policy. It is conceivable that the companies might make money if they engage directly in the brokerage or banking business. Even by the manipulation of the stock market, it may well be that with the special advantages they have enjoyed they could have added largely to their accumulation, by barter, by purchase for resale or by the development of industries. They were chartered to furnish life insurance, and the true measure of their power and their duty in the handling of their funds is to invest them with due conservatism, to the end that they may be able to discharge their obligations. If in this manner they should make less money they would also be less likely to court disaster.

To prevent the continuance of the evil methods practised in investing and using the assets of life insurance companies, the New York Legislature saw fit to pass the most drastic legislation ever adopted in this country. Henceforth the companies of New York are forbidden to participate in any underwriting syndicate, or to enter into any transaction for purchase and sale on joint account or any agreement which provides that the company shall withhold from sale for any time or subject to the discretion of others, any of its securities (ch.326 § 100). Officers and directors of companies are henceforth forbidden to reap returns from life insurance investments by a section of the law (§ 36) which provides that no officer or director may be pecuniarily interested, either as principal, co-principal, agent or beneficiary, in any purchase, sale or loan made by the insurance company, except in case of a loan upon his policy.

The investment of assets in real estate is carefully regulated, and the excessive and unprofitable investments of New York life insurance companies in this field will probably soon be events of the past. All real property which is not necessary for the company's accommodation in the convenient transaction of its business must be sold within five years after the company shall have acquired title to the same. The Superintendent of Insurance may grant an extension of time for such sale, but only upon proof that the forced sale of the real estate within the prescribed time would result in material damage to the company's interest. Under the general corporation law of New York the domestic companies were enabled to buy practically any amount of real estate under the pretext that it was required for the convenient transaction of business. Now this is no longer possible, and to insure the enforcement of the law it is enacted that the companies must annually make an accurate, concise and full statement of all real estate held by them, the dates of acquisition, the name of the vendors, the actual cost, the value at which the property is carried on the company's books, the market value, the amount incurred for improvements, the rental value of portions occupied by the company, the gross and net income of each plot of real estate, a statement of any certificate issued by the Superintendent of Insurance extending the time for the disposition thereof, and all purchases and sales made since the last annual report (ch.326 § 20).

But the Legislature did not stop here. Hereafter no domestic life insurance corporation shall after the first day of June, 1906, invest in or loan upon any shares of stock of any corporation, other than a municipal corporation (§ 100). Furthermore no such company may invest in bonds which are secured to the extent of more than one third of their value by corporate stocks, nor make loans upon any stocks and bonds which they may not purchase (§ 100). To facilitate the enforcement of these provisions relative to stock and bond investments it is provided that every company holding such prohibited investments must dispose of the same within five years from December 31, 1906. Meanwhile the companies must annually reduce such investments to an extent approved by the Superintendent of Insurance.

The above section was passed in compliance with the following recommendation of the New York investigating committee :

Investments in stocks should be prohibited. They are fundamentally objectionable, as the corporation, instead of holding a secured obligation, acquires a proprietary interest in another business, with rights subject to all such indebtedness which may be created in the conduct of it and often direct liabilities as stockholders. This interest must be nourished and supported. Instead of being a creditor with adequate security to which upon default the corporation may resort, it assumes the responsibilities of proprietorship and must contribute from the accumulations provided by the policy holders in order to sustain the enterprise. If the stock holdings constitute a small minority, the investment is at the mercy of administrators chosen by the majority stockholders. If the stock interest be a large one it is frequently found advisable to increase it until a substantial control is effected, and the insurance corporation is not only engaged in a different enterprise, but directly undertakes its management. Such relations afford ready opportunities to conceal irregular transactions and to hide the malversation of funds.

To make sure that the foregoing enactments may not be evaded, the Legislature provided at great length the manner in which the companies shall report their business (§ 103). It was enacted that the company must not only furnish all the information just enumerated with reference to real estate, but must state the amount of existing loans upon the security of real property in each state and foreign country; the money loaned to any person other than loans upon the security of real property; all other property owned by the company in which it has an interest; all commissions and expenses paid to any person and arising out of loans or purchases or sales of any property; all moneys expended in connection with any matter pending before any legislative body or any officer or department of government, giving full particulars as to dates, amounts, and names and addresses of payees; the salary or other compensation of officers or directors or other persons where the same exceeds $5000, as well as salaries paid to any representatives either at the home or branch office; the largest balances carried in each bank or trust company during each month of the year; all death claims resisted; and a complete statement of the profits and losses of the business transactions of the year and the sources of such gains and losses.

New York—lobbying. Several wholesome restrictions were adopted by the New York Legislature regulating lobbying on the part of insurance companies and prohibiting them from making political campaign contributions in any form whatsoever. Any officer or employee who is guilty of giving campaign contributions with or without the sanction of his superiors is to be fined and imprisoned. Lobbying is carefully regulated by providing that every person retained or employed as counsel or agent to promote or defeat the passage of bills or to influence executive action in insurance legislation shall file papers in the office of the Secretary of State, stating his name, the name of his employer, and giving a description of the legislation in reference to which his services have been secured. Likewise, if any money be expended in connection with any matter pending before any Legislature, public body or department of government, the transaction must be accurately described and the interest of the corporation must be fully stated. A voucher must be given for such expenditures, and if such voucher can not be obtained then an affidavit must be made stating the reason therefor and setting forth full particulars (§ 99). Lobbying is not prohibited but is carefully regulated.

New York—policy contract and conduct of agents. After January, 1907, every policy of insurance issued and delivered within the state by any company doing business therein must contain the entire contract between the parties, and nothing may be incorporated by reference to any constitution, bylaws, rules, application or other writing unless the same are indorsed upon or attached to the policy when issued (§ 58). All statements purporting to be made by the insured are, in the absence of fraud, to be considered as representations and not warranties (§ 58). Discriminations in favor of individuals in the same class, or with the same expectation of life, either as regards the amount of premium, return premium, dividends or other advantages, are prohibited (§ 89). Moreover, there may no longer be any forfeiture of a policy without due notice to the policy holder (§ 92).

With the exception of industrial policies, all policies of insurance issued or delivered within the state of New York after January 1, 1907, by any domestic life insurance corporation must be according to a prescribed form (§ 101), thus making the policy definite in meaning, obviating the numerous differences existing in the policies of various companies, and protecting the insured from the operation of obscure clauses which a company may insert in its policy in order to limit its liability.

The law prescribes four standard forms of policy: (1) an ordinary life policy, (2) a limited payment policy, (3) an endowment policy, and (4) a term policy. In all these standard policies the law specifically prescribes the conditions which shall govern the change of beneficiary, the payment of the premium, the time of grace allowed in paying the premium, and the length of time during which the company may impose restrictions upon its liability by reason of travel, change of occupation, suicide etc. The law also stipulates the method of paying dividends and the making of loans, and enumerates the options which the policy holder may enjoy on the surrender of his policy. The law, however, contemplates the desire on the part of companies to issue policies other than the standard forms prescribed, and consequently provides that any new policy form must be submitted to the Superintendent of Insurance, who, after informing the other companies and fixing a date for a hearing, must approve the new policy before it is issued.

Agents, officers or directors are forbidden, on pain of committing a misdemeanor (§ 60) to issue or circulate any estimate, illustration, circular or statement of any sort misrepresenting the terms of any policy issued by the company, or the benefits, dividends or advantages to be received thereon. Nor may they use any name or title of any policy or class of policies which misrepresents the true nature of the insurance. Lastly it is provided (§ 59) that no corporation, domestic or foreign, doing business within the state shall provide in any application, policy or certificate of insurance, that the person soliciting such insurance, or any person engaged in the business of soliciting insurance, is the agent of the person insured under the policy or certificate, or to insert in the policy or certificate any provision making the acts or representation of the agent binding upon the person insured.

New York — election of directors. For many years the policy holders in our larger mutual life insurance companies were able to exert but little influence in the selection of trustees. In fact, little concern was shown in the management of companies by policy holders, and the boards of trustees as well as other positions were to all intents and purposes permanent and self-perpetuating. The Mutual Life Insurance Company was reputed to have between 400,000 and 500,000 policy holders entitled to vote, yet for a long period of years not more than a few hundred votes were cast at any election, and many of these votes came from employees of the company. In the New York Life Insurance Company likewise only 2328 votes were cast in any election since 1895, although it was estimated that 800,000 policy holders possessed the right to vote. In 1904 only 803 votes were cast, these votes coming mainly from the company's employees. To quote the investigating committee as regards one of the largest companies:

The policy holders are entitled to vote by proxy, but, as a rule, proxies have not been used. In order to secure the continuity of the management and to guard against an uprising of policy holders, proxies to the extent of thousands have been obtained under suitable instructions by the local managers. These proxies, unless revoked, run for years and it has been found that the privilege of revocation is rarely exercised. Through their proxies and the command of the machinery by which proxies could be easily obtained, executive officers have been in actual control, and, in effect, have been able to elect the members of the board of trustees, through whom in turn they themselves have been continued in office. The result has been an autocracy, maintained almost without challenge.

With conditions like these prevailing in many instances the committee set about to remedy abuses by making sure that the policy holders in the future would have a voice in the administration of the companies. Consequently a very large portion of the act of April 27 ('06 ch.326) is devoted to a minute explanation of how directors shall henceforth be elected in domestic mutual life insurance companies. The law provides that the term of office of all directors of all domestic mutual life insurance companies shall expire on December 18, 1906, and that a new board of directors shall be elected, which board shall immediately elect new officers of the company. The law places the election under the supervision of the Superintendent of Insurance. Every policy holder whose insurance shall have been in force one year prior to the election shall be entitled to one vote but no more, regardless of the number of policies he may hold.

To facilitate the annual election the investigating committee saw the necessity of overcoming the apparent advantage of the managements in selecting directors, through their control over policy holders. Consequently the law stipulates that full lists of all policy holders having the right to vote shall be filed with the Superintendent of Insurance at least five months prior to the election. The names of the policy holders must be arranged in lists alphabetically and must be classified by states, territories and foreign countries. A full list of such policy holders must not only be furnished to the Superintendent of Insurance, but it is provided that the general agencies in every state, territory and foreign country, unless prohibited by law, shall maintain two lists of such policy holders residing in the jurisdiction, and all such lists shall be subject to inspection and copy at any time during business hours by any policy holder in the corporation or by his authorized representative during the five months preceding the election. The object manifestly is to enable the policy holders to unite and carry on a vigorous campaign if they deem this to their interest.

Louisiana — life insurance legislation. In one state at least the life insurance reform movement, as just outlined for the state of New York, seems to have been duplicated to a considerable extent. This state is Louisiana. Of the 58 insurance laws passed by the several states other than New York, Louisiana contributed 15. With few exceptions these laws are of vital importance, and resemble the corresponding sections of the New York law both in wording and substance. The most important of these laws are the following:

1 The law (La. '06 ch.68) prohibiting life insurance companies from forfeiting policies for default in payment of premium, interest or instalment, unless written or printed notice has been mailed to the policy holder or the assignee of the policy.

2 The law ('06 ch.94) prohibiting foreign and domestic corporations issuing policies of life insurance, from stipulating in any application, policy or certificate of insurance that the person soliciting such insurance, or any person who is engaged in soliciting insurance for the company, is the agent of the person insured, and prohibiting the company from inserting in the application, policy or certificate of insurance any provision which makes the acts or representations of such agent binding upon the person insured. Any company violating this provision is to forfeit its authority to do business within the state.

3 The law ('06 ch.96) which prevents discrimination by life insurance and benefit companies of other states and countries against policy holders or beneficiaries who are citizens or residents of Louisiana; which extends to citizens and residents of the state who are policy holders the full benefit of all statutes and legal enactments in such other states and countries wherein the company issuing policies is domiciled; and which places the citizens of Louisiana upon an equality with the citizens of other states and countries in which the company is domiciled in the interpretation, performance and enforcements of life insurance policies.

poration writing insurance in Louisiana and no officer, director or agent thereof shall issue or circulate, or permit to be issued or circulated, any estimate, illustration, circular or statement of any sort misrepresenting the terms of any policy issued by it or the benefits or advantages promised thereby, or the dividends or share of surplus to be received thereon, or shall use any name or title of any policy or class of policies misrepresenting the true nature thereof.

5 The law ('06 ch.193) making life or endowment insurance policies issued by legal reserve life insurance companies or associations to residents of Louisiana nonforfeitable after January 1, 1907, after three premiums have been paid; and providing also that the reserve is to be automatically applied for extended insurance where no other choice is expressed, and that dividends be included in computing the amount available for extended insurance.

6 The law ('06 ch.88) requiring life insurance companies or companies issuing participating policies to make an annual distribution of surplus, and prohibiting life insurance companies issuing participating policies from doing business in the state after January 1, 1907, unless this act is complied with.

7 The law ('06 ch.52, 56) providing that no domestic life insurance corporation shall make any disbursement of $100 or more unless the same be evidenced by a voucher signed by or on behalf of the person, firm or corporation receiving the money and correctly describing the consideration for the payment; and if the same be for services and disbursements, setting forth the services rendered and an itemized statement of the disbursements made. If the payment be in connection with any matter pending before any legislative or public body or before any department or officer of any government, the voucher shall correctly describe in addition to the above requirements the nature of the matter and the interest of the corporation therein.

8 The law ('06 ch. 87) providing for a full report from life insurance companies, the requirements enumerated in the law being similar to those mentioned in the New York law of April 27.

Insurance departments and investigating committees. With reference to the above subjects five states passed laws during 1906. Massachusetts ('06 r.11) and Ohio ('06 p.417) provided for the appointment of a commission to codify the insurance laws of the state. Ohio intrusted this work to a joint committee of the House and Senate, with full powers of investigation and with power to revise existing laws and make recommendations relative thereto.

In Iowa an act ('06 ch.188) provides for a legislative insurance commission of five members, which shall have full power to investigate the business methods of all insurance companies doing business within the state, the salaries paid, the investments of such companies, the relation of the officers to such investments, the expenditures etc., and which shall issue a report of its finding. Wisconsin also provided ('05 ex. sess. p.39) for a joint committee of the Legislature to investigate life insurance corporations, the commission being given full power to summon witnesses and to examine the books, expenditures and methods of business of the various companies doing business in the state. Virginia ('06 ch.112) passed a very comprehensive law providing for a bureau of insurance, and outlining, as is customary in general insurance laws, the duties of the bureau, the organization of companies and the requirements which domestic and foreign companies must comply with in order to transact business in the state.

Organization of life insurance companies. A large number of the insurance laws passed during 1906 refer to the organization of life insurance companies. Louisiana passed three such acts, the first ('06 ch.99) regulating the organization of life insurance companies incorporated under the laws of the state, requiring them to deposit $100,000 in securities now required by law with the State Treasurer, and providing that stock companies shall have a fully paid-up capital and mutual companies shall have at least 200 subscribers with an aggregate of not less than $200,000 insurance subscribed on their lives and with one full annual premium paid before beginning business; the second ('06 ch.65) regulating the business of industrial insurance with reference to the manner in which the companies may write business in the state and the nature of the deposits to be left with the State Treasurer; and the third ('06 ch.115) providing for the organization, admission and regulation of associations transacting the business of life, accident, sick, benefit or physical disability insurance on the fraternal plan. Georgia ('06 p.107) and Kentucky ('06 ch.144) authorized any life insurance company organized and doing business on the legal reserve plan under the laws of the state, to deposit with the State Treasurer securities to the amount of the net reserve value of all policies issued by such company as security for the payment of all liabilities arising under the terms of the policy. In Iowa a law was passed ('06 ch.74) authorizing life insurance companies to transact health, accident and employers liability insurance, while in Kentucky ('06 ch.143) the Legislature provided for the regulation of burial associations and corporations doing business in the state. Among the other laws may be mentioned those of California ('06 ch.29), Pennsylvania ('06 ch.2, 16) and Ohio ('06 p.265), which fix the duties, salary etc. of the insurance commissioner.

Life insurance — miscellaneous laws. Among the other laws affecting the life insurance business the following should be stated as the most important:

1 The law of Iowa ('06 ch.77) which provides that life insurance companies may invest the funds deposited with the Auditor of State in bonds of the United States, in bonds of any state if at or above par, in bonds or other evidences of indebtedness of any county, city, town or school district, in drainage district bonds of Iowa or improvement certificates issued by any municipal corporation of Iowa, such certificates being a first lien upon real estate within the corporate limits of the municipality issuing the same; and in bonds and mortgages and other interest-bearing securities which are first liens upon real estate within Iowa or any other state worth at least double the amount loaned thereon and secured thereby exclusive of improvements, or two and one half times such amount including the improvements thereon, if such improvements are constructed of brick or stone.

2 The law of Maryland ('06 ch.273) prohibiting any life insurance company doing business in Maryland from issuing any policy participating in profits or surplus under which the accounting, apportionment and distribution of surplus to the policy holder shall be delayed for a longer period than five years.

3 The law of Arkansas ('05 ch.115) providing that in all cases where loss occurs, and the fire, life, health or accident insurance company liable therefor shall fail to pay for the same within the time specified in the policy, after demand made therefor, such company shall be liable to pay the holder of the policy in addition to the amount of the loss, 12% damages upon the amount of the loss, together with all reasonable attorney's fees for the prosecution and collection of the loss.

4 The law of South Carolina ('06 ch.70) making it compulsory on all fire, life or other insurance companies doing business in the state to bring all suits in the county where the loss occurs.

Fire insurance. With reference to fire insurance but few laws were passed in 1906. Most of the legislation refers to the investigation of fires. Kentucky, Louisiana and Maryland (Ky. ch.95; La. ch.152; Md. ch.709) passed laws providing for the appointment of a fire marshal or deputy insurance commissioner to investigate all fires in the state and to keep a record of the same. To facilitate such investigations the fire marshal is given full power to subpoena witnesses and to inspect buildings. New Jersey ('06 ch.249) also created an officer, called the Inspector of Combustibles and Fire Risks, in cities of the first class, whose duty it is to inspect buildings and to keep a record of all such inspections.

In California ('06 ch.2) a law was passed giving the Insurance Commissioner power, whenever he deems it necessary, to require any company writing insurance in the state to furnish the commissioner with a full and complete list of all its policies of insurance on property or risks located within that portion of the state of California included within the territory described by the commissioner. Arkansas is the only other state which passed any legislation of importance relative to fire insurance. The law of April 24, 1905 ('05 ch.192) provides fully for the organization of mutual companies. Another act ('05 ch.324) prescribes the conditions under which foreign mutual fire insurance companies may be admitted to do business in the state.

Title guaranty and trust companies. Only one law of importance need be mentioned under this head. The law of Ohio ('06 p.153) prescribes fully the powers of such companies and provides that "no such company shall do business until the capital stock of said company shall amount to at least $100,000 fully paid up, and until such company shall have deposited with the Treasurer of State $50,000 in the securities permitted by sections 3637 and 3638 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio, and with the exception of the deposit aforesaid said capital shall be invested as the board of directors of said company may prescribe. The Treasurer of State shall hold such funds or securities deposited with him as security for the faithful performance of all guaranties entered into by said company, but so long as said company shall continue solvent said treasurer shall permit it to collect the interest of, or dividends on, its securities so deposited, and from time to time withdraw such securities or any part thereof, on depositing with him cash or other securities of the kind heretofore named so as to maintain the value of said deposit at $50,000. Provided, further, that any company organized under this act shall be limited in its operations to only one county in this state, which county shall be designated in its application for a charter, except that in case any company organized under this act desires to issue its policies of title insurance in more than one county in this state such company shall be authorized to issue such policies in such other county or counties upon depositing with the Treasurer of State an additional sum of $50,000 in securities as herein provided, for each and every additional county in which it proposes to operate."

LEGISLATION BULLETIN 33t

EDUCATION¹

HOWARD J. ROGERS LL.D., FIRST ASSISTANT COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK

During the year ending September 30, 1906, there were reported to the legislative reference section of the New York State Library from states and territories holding legislative sessions, 121 acts affecting educational matters. The number of enactments is greatly less than for the year ending September 30, 1905, when 367 acts were reported. This is no doubt largely due to the fact that the Legislatures of many states do not hold sessions in the even years. As usual a great majority of the new statutes are amendments to existing statutes and laws affecting minor details of school government and administration. There are, however, a great many statutes which will have a wide influence on the school affairs of the state to which they refer, and many enactments which are of interest to the school public. The state of Virginia seems to have taken the lead in the matter of school legislation, having passed no less than 12 laws affecting school matters and very extensively revising the code of public education.

A noteworthy piece of legislation was the incorporation by Congress of the National Education Association of the United States. This body is the successor of the National Educational Association and continues all the rights, powers and obligations of that body. The incorporation of the National Educational Association, which was made under the laws of the District of Columbia, expired under its 20 year limitation in February 1906. The matter was discussed at the meeting of the association in Asbury Park in 1905 and the following resolution passed at that meeting:

Resolved, That this association authorizes and requests the board of trustees to make application to Congress for a special act in the following form to incorporate an association to be known as the National Education Association of the United States, to succeed and continue the National Educational Association.

The bill for the proposed incorporation was duly introduced in Congress under charge of the Hon. George N. Southwick of New York, chairman of the education committee, passed both houses and was signed by the President June 30, 1906. It was the second instance where Congress has passed a bill of this character and the fact that it was thus enacted renders it impossible to amend it except by act of Congress. This insures a permanency to the association which is much to be desired, and further gives it a recognition of national character. The association during its 20 years of history has made such an enviable record, has been so instrumental in shaping the educational policy of the various states of the Union, and has become possessed of so much invested property that an incorporation of the most stable character was demanded. The law passed (U. S. '05-'06 ch.398) continues all the powers held by the former association, provides for a simpler and more rational government, protects the permanent fund of the association and carefully safeguards the disposition and expenditure of the income. The adoption of this act of incorporation must be made at the next meeting of the association, to be held at Los Angeles in July 1907, and the adoption of bylaws governing the administrative details of the association will be brought up before the same meeting.¹ The perpetuation of this great association, which is unique in the annals of educational history, and the safeguarding of its funds and investments, together with the assurance of its future activity and impress upon the educational life of the country, is the most important legislative act of the year.

Another statute out of the ordinary in school legislation and which establishes a precedent in this country, was passed by the New York Legislature and became a law May 31 ('06 ch.678). It provides for the selection of a suitable site for a building for the use of the State Education Department and the erection of a building which shall be a home for all the educational activities of the Empire State. Since the unification act of 1904 the Education Department of the State of New York, comprising as it does the State Library and the State Museum, in addition to all other educational machinery of the state, is by far the largest executive branch of the state government. Its offices occupy nearly one third of the present State Capitol and the growth of other departments of the state renders necessary a separate building for the administration of its educational affairs. The building will occupy two blocks in the central part of the city, and will be 600 feet long and 250 feet in depth and five stories high. The entire cost will be $4,000,000. The architects, Palmer & Hornbostel of New York city, the winners of the architectural competition, have designed a building which in its pure classic outlines will be an ideal home for the educational interests of the state. It is noteworthy that New York is the first state to erect a building devoted solely to the needs of educational administration. Even the United States Bureau of Education is housed in an annex of the Interior Building. The parallel might go even farther than this inasmuch as there are only two or three countries in the world which have a monumental building designed solely for administrative purposes of national education. It is expected that the Education Building of the State of New York will be ready for occupancy in the fall of 1910.

School codes. As stated above the only state to materially alter its school code during the year under consideration was Virginia, not less than 12 acts having been passed by the Legislature of 1906. The first act ('06 ch.33) establishes a state board of education, fixes the compensation of the board and the terms of office and qualifications of its members. The second act ('06 ch.248) prescribes the duties of the board and materially amends sections of the code of Virginia relating to public free schools in counties and the distribution of the literary fund. A state superintendent of public instruction is provided for in a former act ('06 ch.3), whose salary is $2800 a year, and $500 for traveling expenses. Among the powers delegated to the State Board of Education are: to divide the state into proper school divisions; to prescribe the duties of the superintendent of public instruction; to provide for the inspection of schools and the examination of teachers; to select textbooks, school furniture and educational appliances; to approve the plans of the superintendent of public instruction for the conduct of summer normal schools; to decide appeals from the decisions of the superintendent of public instruction; to invest the capital and unappropriated income of the literary fund and to audit all claims to be paid out of said fund; to approve or amend the apportionment plans made by the Superintendent of Public Instruction; to make a report to the General Assembly at each regular session, together with recommendations in reference to the public free school system. This practically places the entire educational system of Virginia in the hands of a state board, of which the State Superintendent of Public Instruction is merely the executive officer. This act ('06 ch.248) further prescribes the powers and duties of county school boards and of school trustees. The bill finally provides that in every public free school shall be taught orthography, reading, writing, arithmetic, grammar, geography, physiology and hygiene, civil government, drawing, history of the United States and history of Virginia.

Another act ('06 ch.240) amends the existing laws relating to the division of school districts and subdistricts and provides for the government and administration of these subdistricts, for additional school taxes, and the appointment of school directors. It is supplemental to and extends the workings of the chapter above mentioned relating to the powers and duties of the state board. Still another enactment ('06 ch.293) amends sections of the code of Virginia relating to public free schools in cities and in towns constituting separate school districts and is in accord with the main changes made in the general state school law.

Maryland ('06 ch.356) amends the school code by providing that the members of the State Board of Education shall receive no salary but shall receive actual expenses incurred in attending meetings. The bill further provides for the appointment of an assistant superintendent of education at a salary of $1500 a year, and further provides that a teachers institute to continue for not less than five days shall be held for each county once a year.

Compulsory education. There seems to have been a cessation in the passing of laws governing compulsory attendance of children on public schools, presumably for the reason that most of the states now have fairly satisfactory working statutes. Maryland ('06 ch. 236) adds a new section to the public education code regarding the compulsory attendance of deaf and blind children, fixing the age limit between 6 and 16 and providing that where a parent or guardian of a deaf or blind child is not financially able to pay for the transportation of the child to some school for the deaf or blind, the same shall be paid out of the state appropriation for the school where the child attends. Failure to comply with this law on the part of the parent or guardian is a misdemeanor.

Massachusetts ('06 ch.383) amends the act relative to compulsory education by providing that no physical or mental condition which is capable of correction or which renders a child a fit subject for special instruction at public charge in institutions other than public day schools, shall avail as a defense unless it shall be made to appear that the defendant has employed all reasonable measures for the correction of the condition or for the suitable instruction of the child. Massachusetts also provides ('06 ch.389) that habitual truants, habitual absentees and habitual offenders shall be committed to truant schools for the instruction and training of children now provided for by the several counties and not to any other institution or place. The only exception made to this is the Plummer Farm School of Reform for Boys at Salem.

Ohio ('06 p.267) makes the conveying of pupils to school at public expense optional with boards of education and not applicable to pupils living less than $\frac{1}{2}$ mile from a schoolhouse.

School funds. Arkansas ('06 ch.156) authorizes and empowers county judges to lease wild and uncleared one sixteenth sections of school lands for a term of years for the purpose of putting the same in cultivation. The same state also enacts ('06 ch.248) that any special school district in the state may borrow money for building purposes and mortgage the property of the district to secure the same. A constitutional amendment has also been passed by both houses of Arkansas and is to be submitted to the people, empowering the General Assembly to provide by general laws for the support of common schools by taxes which shall never exceed in any one year 3 mills on $1 on the taxable property of the state, and by an annual per capita tax of $1 to be assessed on all male inhabitants over the age of 21 years. The amendment further proposes that the General Assembly may authorize school districts to levy by a vote of the qualified electors of such district a tax not to exceed 7 mills on $1 in any one year for school purposes.

Georgia ('06 p.61) amends its acts providing for local taxes for public schools, stating in detail how the local tax shall be levied, the powers and duties of trustees in connection therewith, and defining the corporate property subject to local taxation.

Kentucky ('06 ch.79) amends its state law in reference to the powers of a board of education in making tax levies and issuing bonds and pledging revenue for money borrowed.

New Jersey ('06 ch.146) amends its free school act in reference to the distribution of state tax among counties for school purposes; and also in another statute ('06 ch.277) provides that bonds which are issued by consolidated school districts shall continue a lien upon such districts.

tract having an assessed valuation of $20,000 or less, $200; to districts having an assessed valuation of between $20,000 and $40,000, $175; to each district having an assessed valuation between $40,000 and $60,000, $150; to each of the remaining districts $125. This is an advance of $50 a year to the weakest districts and of $25 a year to the other districts included in the above categories.

Ohio ('06 p.256) amends prior statutes by providing that there shall be levied annually a tax of 1 mill upon the grand list of the taxable property of the state, the proceeds of which shall constitute the state school fund; and a like tax of .10 of a mill for the purpose of creating a sinking fund; and a like tax of .15 of a mill the proceeds of which shall constitute the Ohio State University fund. Ohio further provides ('06 p.127) that the local tax levied for school purposes shall not exceed 12 mills on the dollar in rural school districts and 6 mills on the dollar in city school districts. It is specified, however, that any special levy for a special purpose may be authorized by vote of the electors.

Rhode Island ('06 ch.1306) provides that towns may take and condemn improved and unimproved lands for the erection of schoolhouses, provided the amount of the same at any one taking shall not exceed 1 acre, and also fixes the method of procedure for condemnation proceedings.

Virginia ('06 ch.252) authorizes school boards of the school districts in the state to borrow money belonging to the literary fund for certain specified purposes, and authorizes a loan of such funds to each district. In another statute ('06 ch.255) school boards of school districts in the counties of the state are permitted to borrow money and issue bonds for the purpose of erecting and furnishing schoolhouses. Virginia also ('06 ch.80) provides that the common council of each city may levy a tax upon the real and personal property, not to exceed 50 cents on $100, for school purposes. This increases the amount from 30 cents to 50 cents upon $100.

Training of teachers. Arkansas ('06 ch.311) makes provision for improving the character of teaching in the state by establishing county institutes to be held one each year, one for whites and one for negroes. It is made the duty of the state superintendent to outline and supervise the work. By chapter 343, laws of 1906, the Legislature provides that the diplomas of all graduates of the Normal Department of the University of Arkansas shall be equivalent to a teachers professional license.

Iowa ('06 ch.122) repeals various sections of the laws relating to public education and enacts in their stead a statute defining the qualifications of county superintendents, the grades of certificates issued by them, subjects in which examinations are to be held for the various certificates, and the procedure for the revocation and annulment of licenses.

Kentucky ('06 ch.39) enacts that any county superintendent or county examiner who shall knowingly grant to any immoral person or to any person under the prescribed age a certificate to teach in the common schools shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Kentucky ('06 ch.102) also provides for the establishment of two state normal schools, to be known as the Eastern Kentucky State Normal School and the Western Kentucky State Normal School respectively, creates a board of regents for the government of each school and prescribes the powers and duties of the board and the purpose and character of the school. The same commonwealth ('06 ch.92) provides that the diploma of the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Kentucky shall be received as sufficient evidence of qualification to teach in the public schools of Kentucky during life.

Ohio ('06 p.228) amends the revised statutes and provides a penalty for publishing or giving information about questions for the examination of teachers.

Massachusetts ('06 ch.399) provides that persons desiring to teach in the public schools shall on payment of a fee of $2 file an application with the State Board of Education. It shall thereupon be the duty of the state board to make a list of these applicants, arrange the same for convenient reference, and to furnish superintendents of schools and school committees of cities and towns all reasonable information concerning such applicants. Mississippi ('06 ch.146) abolishes the Holly Springs Normal School as a school for colored pupils and attaches the buildings, fixtures and grounds to the branch agricultural experiment station of the state.

Pensions and retirement funds. Maryland ('06 ch.475½) amends the prior law and provides that a teacher who has reached the age of 60 years who has been 25 years in the public or normal school service of the state and who is without means of comfortable support may upon application and supported by the recommendation of the board of county school commissioners be placed upon the retired list and receive a compensation from the state of $200 a year.

New Jersey ('06 ch.103) amends its pension legislation so that any teacher, principal or superintendent who shall have been employed in the public schools of the state not less than 35 years shall upon application or by resolution of the board employing such teacher be retired from duty on half the average annual salary during the last five years of service. New Jersey ('06 ch.314) amends its teachers retirement fund statute, outlining in detail the duties of the trustees of the retirement fund, their organization and powers in reference to the administration of the fund.

New York ('06 ch.305) authorizes the city of Troy to establish a retirement fund for pensioning retired teachers, supervisors, superintendents and principals of the public schools of the city of Troy.

Higher education. Ohio ('06 p.309) enacts an important provision wherein is a declaration of the distinct and fixed policy of the state with respect to the Ohio State University, Miami University, and the Ohio University, to the end that the state of Ohio may build up one university worthy of the state and that the two last named institutions may be maintained as colleges of liberal arts of the first grade, not including technical or graduate instruction. Tax levies for the support of the institutions are provided for and some limitations fixed as to the expenditure of the money. This is one of the most important laws in the field of higher education which has been enacted in several years.

South Carolina ('06 ch.14) converts the South Carolina college into a university under the name of The University of South Carolina, with the avowed object of expanding the work of the institution. The trustees of the old College of South Carolina are continued as trustees of the university. It is further provided that hereafter the University of South Carolina, the South Carolina Military Academy, the Winthrop Normal and Industrial College of South Carolina, and the Colored Normal, Agricultural and Mechanical College of South Carolina shall be separate and distinct institutions, each under its separate board of trustees or visitors.

Industrial education. This subject is receiving annually more attention from the educational and legislative authorities of the country, and the adjustment and regulation of a rational amount of industrial training with the regular school curriculums continues to be a point under constant discussion. Nothing which affords very material help on this subject has been elaborated during the past year, but the state of Massachusetts in the appointment of an Industrial Commission authorized by chapter 505 of the laws of 1906 has taken a step which has attracted wide attention and which may result in material benefit. This commission, appointed by the Governor, consists of five persons who are to serve for a term of three years and receive such compensation as the Governor and Council shall approve. An appropriation of $8000 therefor for the first fiscal year is provided for the necessary clerk hire, administrative and incidental expenses, traveling expenses, etc. The commission is charged with the duty of making an investigation of the methods of industrial training and of local needs and to advise and aid in the introduction of industrial education in independent schools. It is empowered to provide for lectures on the importance of industrial education and kindred subjects, and to visit and report on any special schools in which such education is carried on. It may also initiate and superintend the establishment and maintenance of industrial schools for boys and girls with the cooperation and consent of the municipality involved, and shall have all necessary powers for the conduct and maintenance of such industrial schools, and the moneys appropriated by the state or municipality for their maintenance are to be expended under the direction of the commission. The commission is also given power to provide for the establishment of evening schools. Section 5 of the act provides for the expense of maintaining the schools established under the supervision of the commission and the amount which the state will allow the cities or municipalities for conducting the same, said amounts being in each case proportionate to the amount raised by local taxation. The commission is also required to make an annual report to the Legislature upon the condition and progress of industrial education.

This act places in the hands of the Industrial Commission unprecedented powers in the matter of control of schools of whatever nature for training in commerce and industry. The extent of their work seems to be limited only by their ability to persuade municipalities and towns to establish and organize such schools. The experiment will be watched with great interest and the first annual report of the commission to the Legislature should be of great value in determining a question which at present is occupying a great share of the attention of the educators, legislators and business men of the country.

Georgia ('06 p.72) provides for the establishment and maintenance of schools of agriculture and mechanic arts in the respective congressional districts of the state, and all schools so established are to be considered branches of the State College of Agriculture. The bill further provides for the course of study, work of students and their support, and the funds to establish and maintain the schools. Georgia further appropriated ('06 p.10) $100,000 for buildings for the University of Georgia. The same commonwealth ('06 p.75) authorizes and organizes an agricultural, industrial and normal college in South Georgia, which however is to be considered a branch of the University of Georgia.

Iowa ('06 ch.185) provides for agricultural extension and experiment work by the Iowa State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, and makes an appropriation therefor.

New York ('06 ch.682) authorizes the establishment of a state school of agriculture in St Lawrence University and makes an appropriation for the erection and equipment of the necessary buildings. The board of trustees of St Lawrence University has general care, supervision and control of the school.

Miscellaneous. Massachusetts ('06 ch.502) provides that the school committee of every city and town in the commonwealth shall appoint one or more school physicians and assign one to each public school and provide them with all proper facilities for the performance of their duties, which duties are carefully set forth in the succeeding sections of the act. This act is a most important one in respect to the public health of children and will bear close investigation by the legislative authorities of other states.

South Carolina ('06 ch.18) enacts that the 18th of March, Calhoun's birthday, shall be known as South Carolina day and shall be a public holiday. The public schools of the state are required to observe the day with such exercises as will conduce to more general knowledge and appreciation of the history, resources and possibilities of the state.

State Library, Albany, N. Y. April 2, 1907

Hon. A. S. Draper

Commissioner of Education

DEAR SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith and recommend for publication A Summary of the Compulsory Attendance and Child Labor Laws of the States and Territories of the United States, compiled by Mr James D. Sullivan, Chief of the Attendance Division of the New York State Education Department. This compilation belongs naturally to the legislation series of State Library publications and we should be very glad to have it appear as one of that series.

Very respectfully

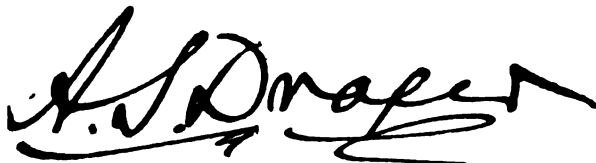

EDWIN H. ANDERSON

Director

Education Department
COMMISSIONER'S ROOM

Albany, April 2, 1907

I have satisfaction in approving for publication this comprehensive presentation of the compulsory attendance and child labor laws of the country. The subject is one of continually increasing importance and concern and the vast and intelligent labor which the author has put upon the work can not fail to render substantial service to a good cause in all the states, territories and insular dependencies of the Union.

LEGISLATION 34

COMPULSORY ATTENDANCE AND CHILD LABOR LAWS OF THE STATES AND TERRITORIES OF THE UNITED STATES

James D. Sullivan

Chief, Attendance Division, N. Y. State Education Department

INTRODUCTION

The provisions of the various child labor and compulsory attendance laws of the states are herein grouped under proper heads in condensed form, yet in sufficient detail to meet the wants of any person who may desire to obtain, in brief time, a birdseye view of the entire field. If more complete information is desired the citations given will direct the reader to the full text of each statute.

Some of these laws provide the necessary machinery and penalties for their effective enforcement, while other statutes lack such machinery to an extent that would make their enforcement difficult, if not altogether render the law inoperative. Therefore convenient opportunity is herein afforded for interesting comparison of statutes with a view to amending defective laws.

That only 13 states and territories are yet without attendance and child labor laws is indicative of the progress made during the last decade in the effort to protect children in their rights to at least a common school education. The fact that within our borders more than 2,000,000 children under age are found at work in gainful employments and even a larger number are not in attendance upon the schools should inspire every state to have upon its statute books stringent laws for the protection of its children, and to see that such laws are enforced completely and effectively.

The fact that there were in the United States in 1900, as shown by the federal census, 6,246,857 persons 10 years of age and above unable to read or write any language, 579,947 of whom were children between the ages of 10 and 14, should have inspired the last Congress to have given the Beveridge-Parsons child labor bill a better fate than to have been strangled in committee; yet the fact that a bill, embodying the principle that the 66,072 illiterate children in Alabama, whose very lives are being ground out in its mills, are entitled to their chance equally with the children of New York or Massachusetts, was even introduced is not without its encouragement.

In the following states, public school moneys may be withheld for nonenforcement of attendance laws: New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Washington and Rhode Island.
